Fourth-grade class learns about El Salvador

one and two bedroom huts.

"They don't have a place to cook, they don't have bathrooms or sinks," said Fischer. She told the class of their paltry diet consisting mostly of tortillas, beans and rice. The mattresses they sleep are only springs with sheets over them.

"We can't assume they have anything," said Fischer, "we keep trying to make life better for these children."

When Decathlon Sports in Hanover went out of business last summer, Fischer went to the clearance sale and bought every pair of shoes they had to bring to El Salvador. Now, all the children need is a few school supplies to be able to get an education.

"We want you to be a part of this project," said Fischer. She asked the kids buy a small pencil case to fill with a few pencils, erasers, pencil sharpener, colored pencils and stickers.

"If we're doing this project, we want you to know all you can about the country," Fischer said she would return to Mrs. Thomas's class to tell them more about the country and its people over the next few weeks. She hopes the students would raise money through doing chores or other odd jobs to buy the school supplies. A jar has been placed in the classroom to collect money for the purchase of mattresses.

Fourth-grade teacher Mrs. Thomas hopes to reinforce the community service initiative through academic reflection,

"It is my intention that students will be able to apply reading, writing, calculation, and research skill to this initiative," wrote Mrs. Thomas in a letter to her student's parents.

"How nice it will be for our kids to experience the joy in knowing that they may touch the lives of others, even if they never meet them, through giving of themselves," said Thomas.

Fischer has pledged to return to El Salvador each year with more goods and money to make the lives of a few Salvadorian a little better. She'll travel with three others on her upcoming trip, each with the full luggage weight limit allowed by the airlines.

"We're committed to going back every year," said Fischer.

To learn more about the El Salvador project, call Diane Fischer at 781-337-2356.

November 2007 AUTOMOTIVE INSIDER

Weymouth Dealer Refuses To Suspend Upcoming Event:

Hugely Successful $29 Down & $99 Per Month* Pricing Event Will Go On.

Due To The Overwhelming Response Innovative Car Buying Program Will Continue Despite Local Competitors' Attempts To Pressure Dealer To Discontinue Event.

Staff Writer: Dan Ready

WEYMOUTH, MA- Aaron Smith, General Manager of Ricky Smith Pontiac GMC, announced today that he is planning another hugely successful "Insider" pricing event this Wednesday, November 28th thru Saturday, December 1st, regardless of any attempt by the local competitors' to pressure him to suspend the program which he began running periodically over the past few months that stunned a number of his competitors. The program, also known as the "National Automotive Insider Sales Event", has been conducted at dealerships throughout the U.S. Customers who have participated in this unique sales event have been raving about the tremendous deals they have received and can't get over the fact that they have been able to buy new and pre-owned vehicles for only $29 down and $99 per month.

The next event scheduled at Ricky Smith Pontiac GMC will be held this Wednesday, November 28th through Saturday, December 1st. Smith offers a simple explanation as to why these innovative events will continue, "Dealers today are facing stiff competition and as one of the leading & innovative dealers in the area, we're committed to turning over our inventory of new and pre-owned vehicles every month, as quickly as possible. Everyday we receive pristine lease turn-ins, factory-program cars, recent trade-ins, new vehicle duplications and bank repossessions. By aggressively discounting these vehicles, we easily beat the competition on a regular basis." He adds, "rather than have them sit on our lot unsold and then being forced to sell them to wholesalers or strangers at auctions, we've begun taking a new approach; we're offering them at drastically discounted prices direct to the general public." During this upcoming event, vehicles will be clearly marked and sold for as low as $29 down and just $99 per month. Every effort will be made to secure credit approval for those who may have had credit problems in the past.

"We Found An Affordable Way For Customers to Purchase Vehicles for Just $29 Down & $99 Per Month* and Now the Competition Is Up In Arms."
Aaron Smith-General Manager

The selection of vehicles we now have to choose from is the best it's been in recent weeks. Many are late model vehicles with low mileage and the balance of their factory warranty remaining.

There will be many makes and models to choose from including Pontiac, GMC, Dodge, Chevrolet, Ford, Hyundai, Honda, Nissan and Toyota. An abundance of SUV's will also be featured, including Yukon, Envoy, Tahoe, Rav-4, Jeep, Explorer and more.

For auto shoppers looking for a very low monthly payment, there will be many choices, including a 1999 Hyundai Sonata for just $29 down and $99 a Month*. Sample payments will be clearly marked on vehicles. Simply pick a vehicle and a payment. It's that easy.

Smith cites another example, a 2000 Chevrolet Cavalier, for only $29 down and $99 per month*. We'll even pay off your trade regardless of any balance due. This is an unbelievable opportunity to buy a car, truck, minivan or sport utility vehicle for just twenty-nine* dollars down!

Loan processing and finance representatives will be on-site during this event to ensure prompt credit approval and same day delivery of all sold vehicles.

Smith would like to remind customers that the event is first-come, first-served, so it's critical to come early to have the best chance of getting the vehicle of your choice. The exclusive site - for this event is Ricky Smith Pontiac GMC, located at 25 Main Street Rt.18 in Weymouth, MA for 4 days only;

Wednesday
November 28th 9am-8pm
Thursday
November 29th 9am-8pm
Friday
November 30th 9am-6pm
Saturday
December 1st 9am-5pm

The Cohasset roundhouse, the terminus of the South Shore Railroad between 1849 and 1874, will be featured on one of the historic panels at Cohasset Station. The roundhouse served as the home base for engines to get repaired or inspected. The depot also included a turntable to rotate engines for their next trip into Boston and a water tower.

Train station panels provide history lesson

by the station an opportunity to learn about the history of the Greenbush line and the neighborhoods that have grown around these stations over the past 150 years. The first Greenbush trains ran from 1849 to 1959. The panels are expected to go up sometime this fall.

"There's a long history of rail service along this corridor, and each community has its own history around the Greenbush line," Adams said. "We want to give people a sense of what the areas around the stations looked like in the past. There have been a lot of changes over time."

Original locations

At each stop, a map showing the original station locations will enhance the panel detailing the history of the line. A second panel will give the history of the line in that particular community. In Cohasset, photos of the Beechwood Station, the Cohasset Center station, the Black Rock/King Street station and the former terminus of the rail line between 1849 to 1974 — the Cohasset roundhouse and turntable will be highlighted.

A third panel at each station will provide interesting information about the historic neighborhoods surrounding the station and their architecture. For example, the Cohasset panel will show the 10 historical districts that run along the rail corridor including the Cohasset Common Historic District and the Cohasset Center Historic District. The Cohasset Historical Society provided photos of Cohasset Common and historic homes for the panel.

"All the towns have been very helpful, and we appreciate how responsive the historical societies have been," Adams said.

Assistant curator Laura Abrams, who is no longer with the Society, worked closely with the PAL representatives to gather photos and information for the panels over the summer. She researched numerous materials and photograph collections on several topics, including railroad stations, historic homes, train tracks, and the neighborhood areas near the stations.

Abrams worked with Adams and John Daly, industrial historian for PAL. The final selection included eight images from the Cohasset Historical Society — Ripley Road homes, John Bates House on corner of Sohier and North Main St., the Pratt house on Spring St., Cohasset Common, the Omstead House on North Main, the Black Rock station, Beechwood station and roundhouse.

Other images were obtained from other organizations, such as Historic New England.

Pannier Graphics of Pennsylvania will create the fiberglass panels of printed graphics that will not crack, chip, tear, or peel. The scanned photographs will be produced by Pannier as enlargements for the historic interpretative panels at each of the new railroad stations.

Cohasset's history

"It will be interesting to those waiting at the station to either ride the train or pick someone up to learn a little bit about the history of the train in Cohasset," said DeGiacomo, "it will be nice to give commuters a sense of where the town has come from, in both a broader historical sense and more focused transportation sense."

Commuters will likely note how much Cohasset has changed — and how much it has stayed the same, said DeGiacomo, "the train has been an integral part of Cohasset's history and the panels are a great way to represent that piece of our town."

Work on the panels began long before silver and purple commuter rail become Cohasset's new neighbor.

"Before construction started, [PAL] worked with the MBTA, state and federal agencies, and town officials to identify impacts the train would have on its cultural resources, including historic and archeological sites," Adams said. "We also considered ways to lessen those impacts, including landscaping, fencing, and in Hingham, construction of a tunnel under the Square."

A number of steps have been taken to minimize impacts on historic resources. "We've worked with the Historic Districts Commission on noise mitigation issues and with the Historic Districts Commission and property owners to come up with windows, doors, and insulation that are appropriate for historic properties," Adams said. "The panels are part of the MBTA's commitment to offer communities the opportunity to understand the history of the Greenbush line, their own communities, and the natural and historical areas around the train stations. It's satisfying for us to be able to make this historical information accessible to everyone."

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help in your own community.

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 16 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Cohasset Mariner in supporting the Social Service League of Cohasset in their efforts to help those in need this holiday season. A donation of any size goes a long way.

Cohasset's Tommy Chase signs with Notre Dame

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

Boston College High School senior and Cohasset resident Tommy Chase signed a letter of intent to play baseball at Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana last week.

The decision was an easy one for Chase.

"It's been my dream school," Chase said Tuesday afternoon. "My dad went there and my sister goes there now, I have always been a fan of Notre Dame."

Chase has starred on the Eagles baseball team since his sophomore year and played AAU ball for the South Shore Seadogs.

Ryan Morgan, a Boston College graduate who was drafted by the Chicago Cubs, coached Chase for the better part of two seasons.

"He has an unparalleled work ethic," said Morgan. "It's what got him in the position to be able to play at a place like Notre Dame."

Chase's versatility will be utilized at three infield positions but he will mainly be used at second base.

"It's going to be tough," Chase said about playing in the Big East. "I'm going to have to keep working hard to play at that level."

Columbia, Army and Navy were other top programs on Chase's short list amongst a bevy of other Div. 1 programs that were interested.

"He is a real smart and disciplined kid," added Morgan. "Those are the type of kids you want to coach and keep in touch with."

Having a sister who will be a senior on campus should also help the transition next year.

"It will definitely help," Chase said, "we are real close."

Thanksgiving day to look back on great season for Skippers

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

Maybe Cohasset is the best team in its division not heading to the playoffs this high school football season. What the Skippers have accomplished this season is remarkable considering the size of the school and the size of the team.

But I'm sure they are tired of hearing that.

Judging by the talent level on the field and the dedication shown by 12 seniors all season long, maybe nobody should be surprised how well the Skippers played this year.

The players and the coaches in the locker room aren't. And as usual, it's the only opinion that really matters.

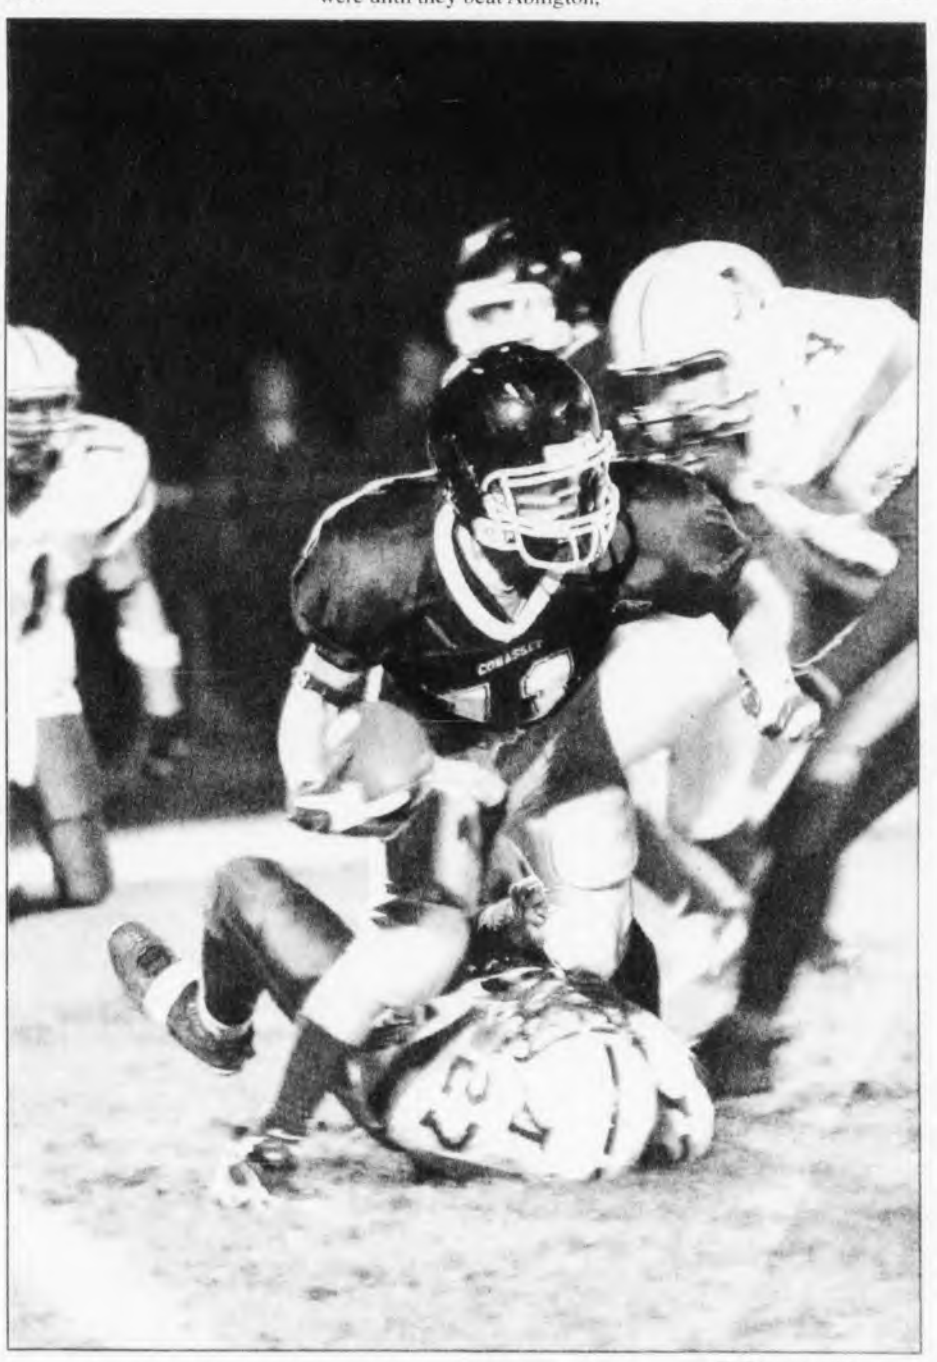
"I haven't been able to say enough good things about them," Cohasset head coach Pete Afanasiw said about his 12 seniors. "You have guys like Kyle (Pinkus) and PJ (McCaw) that have been playing together since fourth grade and then TK (Tyler Kelly) and Steve (Hurlbut) that have been playing since they got to high school.

"You have 12 different seniors and 12 different stories."

According to Afanasiw, the Skippers led Div. 3 in scoring per game (23.8) and points allowed on defense (7.1). To be the top statistical team on both offense and defense is a testament to the overall quality of football on display in 2007.

Watching Abington head to the playoffs can't be easy for the veterans or the underclassmen. Not including the Thanksgiving Day game against Hull (after the Mariner went to press), Cohasset has a 7-2 overall record (3-2 in the South Shore League). This included a 20-8 win over the playoff bound Green Wave, and convincing wins against Norwell 28-7, Scituate 28-0 and Carver 26-12.

According to Afanasiw, the Skippers led Div. 3 in scoring per game (23.8) and points allowed on defense (7.1). To be the top statistical team on both offense and defense is a testament to the overall quality of football on display in 2007.



"I don't think they (Cohasset) understood how good they were until they beat Abington," Afanasiw said. "Scituate was a huge confidence boost and they had a good game against Carver, and they never doubted themselves against East Bridgewater or Mashpee, but their intensity waned."

Those hiccups in the middle of the season cost Cohasset a chance at a Super Bowl. That's the thing about high school football there is no room for error.

"Abington won the league, they made fewer mistakes and they deserve to go (playoffs)," Afanasiw said. "They were a little more disciplined, use whatever adjective you like, it just boils down to a handful of plays, if we execute things could have been different."

Few could argue that

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For years athletes from a variety of sports have suffered strenuous muscle cramps, debilitating injuries and annoying inflexibility. It's never a matter of "if" you'll suffer from the above mentioned in your athletic career but the reality of "when" it'll happen. No mater how amazing your current warm-ups are, at some point you'll either over-train, under-train or just not be hydrated enough to sustain the amount of demand required for complete mobility and flexibility for a given movement or exercise.

The human body is amazing in that it tries to constantly prevent injury. It will only allow a muscle group to develop so long as it doesn't place the opposing muscles in the length-tension relationship in harms way. Sure it's not a perfect system, and we do still incur injury, but for the most part we're fortunate in that we are instilled with this internal protective mechanism.

So how can you help your body in the fight against tight and bounded muscles? Easy, begin a stretching program focused around your personal goals as a youth athlete. (Author's note: You don't have to be a youth athlete to benefit from this information.) Whether you're an adult, fitness or non-fitness enthusiast this information will greatly enhance your life.

People tend to forget that even if they're not currently including fitness in their lifestyle they still benefit tremendously from stretching. The body still gets tight, still suffers injury and still needs to be adequately hydrated whether or not participating in sport and recreation. And unless you're competing in regular sport, sport beverages really aren't necessary; water is perfect.

Now the following stretches are something we in the "industry" refer to as 'dynamic' stretching. It yields all the amazing benefits of traditional 'static' stretching only it better prepares you for sport and training ahead. I'm going to walk you through a quick dynamic stretching sequence for your ankles and hamstrings. Next installment we'll focus on the calves, quads and hips.

Beginning with the ankles,

Coaching openings
The coaching positions listed are vacant and Cohasset High School is accepting applications for the following; Head Boys and Girls Track and Field Coach (co-operative team w/ Hull) Head Softball Coach JV Softball Coach.

Youth lacrosse registration begins Dec. 1
Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will open its sign-up for the 2008 spring season Saturday, Dec. 1 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the gymnasium at Cohasset High School.

Families who sign up on the first day of registration have an opportunity to save money, paying the registration price from 2007 of $160 for one player and $300 for two and $425 for three children. Registrants after the first sign-up day – and sign-ups will remain open by mail through a second in-person sign-up day on January 5 – will pay the new, higher, 2008 prices.

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls at the 15 & Under level (7th and 8th graders) and 13 & Under level (5th and 6th grades) and 11 & Under level (grades 3-4). No previous lacrosse experience is necessary, and the program welcomes and encourages new players at all levels.

The youth lacrosse program is dedicated to introducing children to the sport. All players receive roughly equal playing time regardless of ability. Cohasset's boys teams participate in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League, while its girls play in the South Shore Lacrosse League; neither league keeps standings or has playoffs, encouraging fair and equal playing time and a commitment to educating all participants in how to play the game. Every Cohasset team makes several road trips per year, which can be as close as games in Scituate or as far away as Nantucket.

Following the initial sign-up day, families interested in participating in the program can register by mail, at the 2008 price of $170 for one player, $320 for two, and $450 for three. That price will hold through the Jan. 5 sign-up day – also held at Cohasset High School from 9 a.m. – 11 a.m.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse expects to field 12 or more teams this spring, depending on demand and available coaching. The program is committed to accepting every player who signs up during its open registration period; once that open sign-up period is completed, the program will establish its ideal roster sizes and take late registrants on a first-come, first-served basis only until the rosters are filled. At that point, a waiting list will be established, or players may be turned away.

Parents who can not attend the Dec. 1 registration session can wait until Jan. 5 to register in person, or can contact Melissa Grasz by e-mail at m.grasz@comcast .net to request registration forms. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

The registration fee covers all Cohasset Youth Lacrosse events, a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to Lacrosse Magazine for Kids.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents, or students in the Cohasset school system.

In general, games for boys and girls are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set, although the older teams for both boys and girls typically have two practices and one game each week. At the youngest level, there typically is one practice per week. The teams will begin practicing indoors in early March and begin playing games in April. Cohasset's season concludes with the annual Family Day celebration – featuring intra-town games — in June.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse works with other town sports organizations to minimize conflicts and to allow players to participate in as many activities as possible.

In addition to players, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for additional coaches at all levels. If you are interested in coaching in the boys program, contact Kirk Bukowski at 781-383-6771; if you want to assist in the girls program, contact Chuck Jaffe at 781-383-6688.

CYBSA Annual Meeting
The CYBSA would like to thank all those who volunteered and otherwise supported the CYBSA this past year. We hope all had enjoyable seasons - spring, summer and fall. We held our second annual Awards Night October 24, and it was great to see the kids who played for our division winners awarded team jackets, bags, trophies, etc.

Preparations for next year are well under way. Here are a few important dates to remember over the next month.

Tuesday, December 11, 2007 at 7:30 p.m. we will hold the Annual CYBSA Membership Meeting. All Regular Members of the CYBSA are invited to attend (membership applications are available on our website - CYBSA.net.) Any adult who is interested in furthering the objectives of the CYBSA may become a regular member. We encourage all of you to enroll. At this meeting we will present the state of the league and highlight our plans for 2008. The meeting will be held in the CMHS Cafeteria. A list of existing registered members is also listed on our website.

The CYBSA Constitution provides for a Board of Directors that is elected by the CYBSA's Regular Members. We are in the process of effectuating the transition to a fully elected Board. Last year, we elected 4 new Board members. This year, with service to start on January 1, 2008, we hope to elect 5 new Board members. Each position has a three-year term. We would like to have at least 3 of the new Board members to be non-coaches. That said, we encourage all interested members to run for the Board.

If you are interested in running for the Board, please complete the Statement of Interest form (available on our website) and return to via email to liam.oconnell@hklaw.com, or mail to PO Box 121, Cohasset, MA 02025. We will be accepting Statements of Interest through 5 p.m., Saturday, December 1.

Monday, December 3, we will post the slate of candidates for the elected positions on our website. All Regular Members of the CYBSA will be eligible to vote for the Board candidates. We will be distributing additional information regarding the voting process once the candidates have been posted.

Many thanks for your continued support - please do not hesitate to contact us with any questions.

we're going to open up the ankle complex with this exercise. With your feet two-to-three inches apart, toes pointed forward, knees slightly bent, hands placed just above knees, perform a circular motion with the path of your knees while leaving both feet firmly in contact with the floor. Do not let your heels or toes come off the ground. Perform seven circles to the left then seven circles to the right.

The next exercise will help loosing up those hamstrings. Standing upright, lift your right leg about an inch or so off the ground by balancing onto your left leg. Begin, swinging your right leg from front to back in a straight path while making sure your toes constantly point in a forward movement. Try not to reach too far back but really accentuate the swing upward. Do not let the knees bend of either leg. You should feel a really good stretch from the back of your thigh to the lower portion of your glute and outside of your hip. Repeat with the left leg.

Right now you have two new exercises to learn and add to your current routine. If you have any questions about either exercise or would like pictures that illustrate these movements feel free to send me an e-mail. Happy training!

Youth field hockey thriving

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In a small town like Cohasset who knew there was a thriving field hockey team for younger girls? The answer is 43 girls from the sixth, seventh and eighth grades, and their families. In only three years, volunteer coaches have built strong teams, dedicated players, a multi-town game schedule, a winter indoor program and a lot of success.

Led by coaches Mike Condon and Beth Marsden-Gilman, the self-funded program began in 2005 with 20 girls and this season grew to 43 players on three teams.

"Mike was already involved in an indoor program when the budget cuts came," says Coach Gilman. "He saw there was a strong interest among Cohasset middle school girls so he took on the task of building a team from the bottom up."

Since the school was unable to sponsor or fund the program it was up to the coaches and players to build the club, meet expenses, create game schedule and carpool to the games.

Between games the team took to the field for practice three or four times each week, running drill after drill and working hard on stick handling, passing, blocking, shooting and defensive skills. The team played at home and away against teams from Canton, Westwood, Carver, Thayer and Derby. This year's combined record was 8-1-1, with the eighth grade Team A girls accounting for four of those wins.

Armed with bright blue mouth guards, multi-colored sticks, protective headgear and generously donated pre-owned skirts from Derby Academy, the girls looked and played like the formidable team they have become.

"At one of our away games, the opposing coach remarked on our improved play and wondered what we were feeding the girls so she could recommend it to her team," added Gilman. "We're so proud of all of our players. We've become a real team with a winning record and a tradition of celebrating our achievements."

Looking ahead, the team is sending approximately 20 eighth grade girls up to the high school next year and there's already been talk of starting a ninth grade team.

Cohasset isn't one of the best teams on the entire South Shore. They were picked to finish at the bottom of the pack in the SSL, but, as they say, 'that's why you play the games.'

"Nobody picked us in the league," Afanasiw said, "but maybe we are the best team not going to the playoffs."

Thanksgiving Day 2007

Happy holidays from the edges of the earth, for David Snowdale's sake let's hope the usual gale force winds at Hull render small crafts safe.

The Pirates are hosting the annual game this year with a 2-8 overall record (winless in the league), but as many of us know, Thanksgiving is the proverbial one game playoff.

"The teams know it's a big game," Afanasiw said. "The records are meaningless, to walk off the field a winner, especially for the seniors, is the biggest thing in the world."

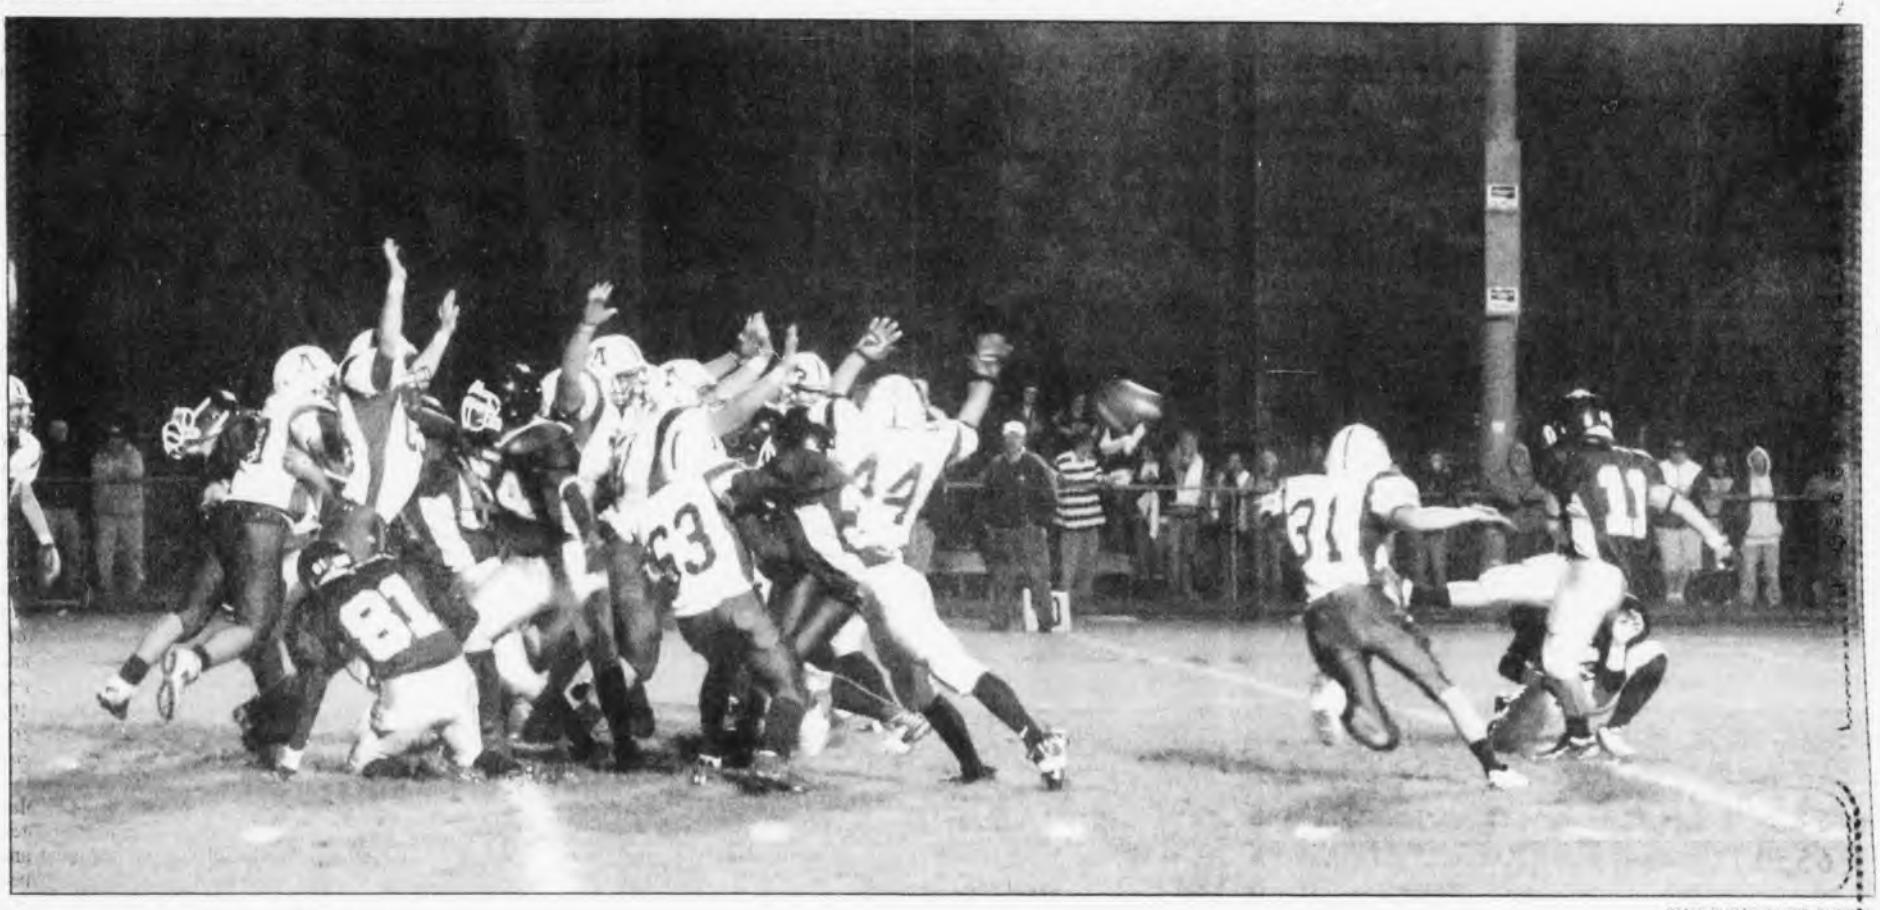
This will be Afanasiw's first Thanksgiving in Hull, as the second year coach lost his first taste of New England glory last year with 21-7 loss. And what a place to be for a football game in late November—weather permitting some team does expect to score.

"I've never played or coached there but a lot of our staff has and they said it can be nice," Afanasiw said. "But I have heard stories about the wind blowing off the water and punts going straight up and backwards—you are out in the elements."

The forecast had a balmy 53 degrees with possible rain showers for game time. The mud should make for some memorable photos, anyway.

Cohasset will look to utilize its backfield attack of Pinkus, McCaw, Sam DeGiacomo and Dana Valentine against the Pirates. Out on the flanks, Mark Flibotte and Pat Doonan will look to carry over their big receiving games against Norwell. Both complemented each other against the Clippers with Flibotte being the beneficiary on a pair of touchdown receptions.

"I think with everyone focusing on Pat (Doonan) that got Mark (Flibotte) some open looks," Afanasiw suggested.



Of course Snowdale will be leading the offense at quarterback, Jake Cuneo, Cliff Musto, Kenny Muir and Co. on the defense.

Afanasiw, who played in a big Thanksgiving rivalry while with Marshfield High School as a player, understands how much fun and rewarding the game can be for everyone involved.

"For the kids growing up next door to each other it's the classic 'cross town' rivalry," Afanasiw said. "I grew up with Marshfield against Duxbury and that is something you carry with you the rest of your life, it's a lot of fun."

Snowflake Fair

The Beechwood Church, 51 Church St., Cohasset, will host its annual Snowflake Fair between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 1. Coffee and donuts will be available and a clam chowder luncheon will begin at 11:30 a.m. Interesting White Elephant items will be for sale, as well as homemade goods such as hand knit items, centerpieces, jewelry and decorated wreaths. Baked goods will also be available, including the much sought-after beach glass candy. For more information, call the church at 781-383-0808.

St. Paul Christmas Bazaar

St. Paul School Christmas Bazaar will take place from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., on Friday, Nov. 30, and 9 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, Dec. 1, in the school hall at 18 Fearing Road, Hingham, adjacent to St. Paul Church.

Santa will arrive on Friday morning and will stay throughout both days. Pictures with Santa will be available.

The bazaar will offer home baked treats, holiday gifts for adults and children, and craft and game tables for children, along with refreshments, a gift boutique, gifts for pets and a raffle table. Boxwood tree Christmas centerpieces will be for sale. This popular item will sell out fast so come early.

A fun family Breakfast with Santa is planned for Saturday Dec. 1, in the school hall. The breakfast is from 9 to 11:30 a.m., and cost is $4 per child and $6 per adult.

For more information regarding the bazaar, call Sue Sullivan at 781-740-4464.

Festival of Trees

Plans are already underway for the 25th anniversary Christmas in the Square and the fourth annual Festival of Trees. This year's Festival of Trees will take place from 5:30 to 8 p.m., on Friday, Dec. 7, and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturday, Dec. 8.

The Festival of Trees transforms Old Derby Academy into a showcase of decorated trees, gingerbread houses, wreaths and live centerpieces. Items are sold through a silent auction with all proceeds benefiting the Mothers' Club Scholarship Fund and other local charities.

Highlights from last year include a Webkinz Tree, "Merry Christmas with the Three Little Pigs," "Orange you Glad it's Christmas," "You Better Watch Out" and "Christmas in Nantucket."

The success of this community event depends on donations from individuals, families, organizations and local businesses. The Mothers' Club is currently accepting donations and is willing to help with ideas for trees. For more information, call Mary Ann Blackmur at 781-749-4452, Mary Power at 781-749-2195, or visit the Mothers' Club Web site at hinghammothersclub.org.

Holiday celebration at Buttonwood Books

Buttonwood Books & Toys at Shaw's Plaza off Route 3A will hold "Buttonwood Celebrates," a daylong celebration of the holiday season, beginning at 10:30 a.m., Saturday, Dec. 8. Many exciting events are planned starting with a visit from Santa Claus from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

A book singing with Hingham author and photographer Bill Brett featuring his new book, "Boston: An Extended Family," will take place at 11 a.m. Cohasset young adult author, Amanda Thompson, launches her new book "Seasons" at 1 p.m., and local singer and songwriter Mamasteph, will host a sing-along of holiday favorites, for parents and children, at 3 p.m.

Toy demonstrations will take place in the toy department from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. View and learn about unique toys for kids from 9 to 99 years. Games like Ruk-Shuk, Hyper-Dash, Bananagrams, and others will be demonstrated.

In addition, door prizes will be drawn randomly throughout the day, including knitting kits, volcano kits, books for children and adults, Buttonwood gift certificates and much more. Light refreshments will also be served.

For more information, call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

Community Center holding clothing and toy drive

Since Nov. 2001, the South Shore Community Center has been privileged to sponsor an annual clothing and toy collection to be distributed to the impoverished children of Santo Domingo during the winter holidays. The drive started when Stephanie Church and Ruthanne Ardrizzoni were moved by the poverty of Santo Domingo, the homeland of the center's beloved janitor, Julio Falcon.

What began as simple donations, given by Stephanie and Ruthann of needed items, has flourished and become a wonderful holiday tradition. All arms of the Community Center participate in this Toy and Clothing Drive, including the Gymnastic Program, the Nursery School and the toddler Gym Dandy Program. Each year, they continue to be overjoyed by the generosity of the Cohasset community.

Each November the Community Center distributes letters to the parents of all of its students to remind them of this mission. The Directors of all programs incorporate this collection into their classes as a lesson in sharing with others less fortunate. The collection begins early, because it takes three weeks for the donated items to be shipped, and then received in Santo Domingo.

The center usually sends out three to four shipments. In addition to gift giving, they also encourage cash donations to defray the costly expense of the shipments. As most are aware, the center is a nonprofit organization that depends upon the public good, so that it can continue to bring joy into the lives of needy children. Every year, they receive thank you notes and photographs of the children holding and opening the gifts and the photographs are posted throughout the center, so that all of the students can see the fruit of their labor.

Volunteers needed for 4-H youth program

Adult volunteers are currently needed for a couple of hours each month to serve as club leaders for local 4-H clubs. The role of a 4-H volunteer leader is to provide skills from one' own area of expertise while developing a relationship with youth. Especially needed are volunteers with skills in crafts, dog obedience and small animal care, such as rabbits.

The goal of the 4-H program is to help youth, ages 5 through 18, become competent, caring adults through positive mentoring, learning how to take community action and increasing their sense of self-esteem, responsibility, fairness, trust and decision-making techniques. The Norfolk County 4-H office provides training, resource materials, activity curriculum and support.

"We need people who have an interest in spending time with young people and who want to learn alongside them," said Jay Field, Extension 4-H Youth Educator in Norfolk County.

For more information, call Norfolk County 4-H office at 508-668-9793 or visit the state 4-H Web site at mass4H.org. 4-H is the outreach education program in youth and family development of UMass Extension in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture and Norfolk County government.

Drama Kids classes available

Drama Kids is offering after-school classes for children ages 3 through 12. The Drama Kids program focuses on developing children's verbal abilities while enhancing creativity, social confidence and building self esteem. Classes take place at locations in Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham.

Call 781-749-4911 or visit dramakids.com for more information.

CARES grant to South Shore Art Center

South Coastal Bank announced that South Shore Art Center in Cohasset has been awarded a $500 grant from its South Coastal Bank CARES Community Giving Program. Committed to enriching the lives of children in the communities it serves, South Coastal Bank specifically designed CARES to help local not-for-profit groups promote and encourage a sense of Community, Achievement, Responsibility and Excellence in children through exposure to the arts.

South Shore Art Center is dedicated to fostering an understanding and appreciation of the visual arts through art education programs for children and adults as well as year-round special events and exhibitions. The organization used CARES funds to present an educational outreach program for fourth grade students at Wampatuck Elementary School in Scituate. Titled "Living South Shore History Through the Art and Culture of Irish Immigration," the program integrates the visual and performing arts, including photography, a landscape painting project and learning the narrative of Irish ballads to explore the history of Irish immigration to the South Shore during the 19th century.

For more information on South Coastal Bank CARES or to download an application, visit South Coastal Bank's Web site at southcoastalbank.com.

Art classes

South Shore Art Center's winter course and workshop schedule is available and features new classes and workshops in beginning calligraphy, oil painting, and mosaics. Classes begin the week of January 14. Popular courses in printmaking, beginning drawing, oil and pastel, ceramics and sculpture are also offered.

A one-day digital photography basics class will be offered Saturday, Feb. 2, by Cindy Vallino, owner of The Focus Gallery. Cindy, a Marshfield resident and Art Center Gallery Artist, also will offer an Advanced Digital Photography class Saturday, Feb. 9.

New to the schedule is "Fun Furniture Painting," to be held each Friday, Jan. 25 through March 7. Instructor Sharon Perlmutter, who has taught watercolor painting and Trompe L'Oeil at the Art Center, will teach students techniques to turn a dusty piece of furniture into a work of art.

Students are encouraged to register prior to the holidays to avoid disappointment. To register for a class, visit the art center, register with PayPal online at www.ssac.org, or call 781-383-2787. Holiday gift certificates also are available in any denomination by contacting the art center.

Larry McGinnis holds a print of his watercolor of a Marine paying tribute to a fallen angel during Christmas time. McGinnis presented the print to Steve and Thomas Wigmore Nov. 10 at the American Legion Hall during the celebration of the 232nd birthday of the US Marines. McGinnis was injured in the first Gulf War while he was serving with the 1058th Transportation Unit of the Massachusetts National Guard, based in Hingham.

Cohasset's Legion Post celebrated the birthday of the US Marines with a large cake; the first piece being passed onto the youngest Marine in attendance, Sergeant Rory Thornton of Nahant.

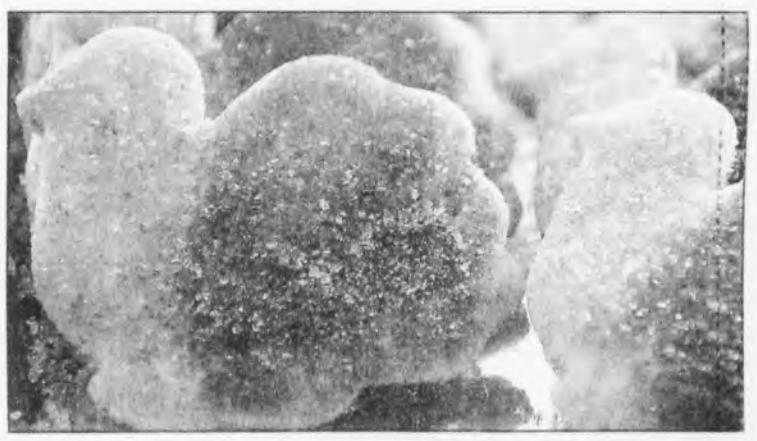
Turkey Day Deer Hill celebrates with fine feast

Fourth-graders from Mrs. Clark's class enjoy a Thanksgiving lunch on Friday. The lunch is an annual event and students dress up and practice their manners. The delicious food was all prepared by the parents.

Sharayia Merit, a fourth-grader, reads her thoughts on Thanksgiving to her class and to their parents.

Deer Hill principal Dr. Jennifer de Chiara carves her first turkey in keeping with Mrs. Clark's tradition of having the principal carve the turkey for her sixth annual Thanksgiving lunch last Friday.

Fourth-grader Sam Arnold samples a fork full of some stuffing at lunch last Friday at which students dressed up and practiced their manners.



Fourth-grader Sam Greenup takes a bite out of his Thanksgiving lunch at Mrs. Jennifer Clark's 6th annual Thanksgiving feast at the Deer Hill School.

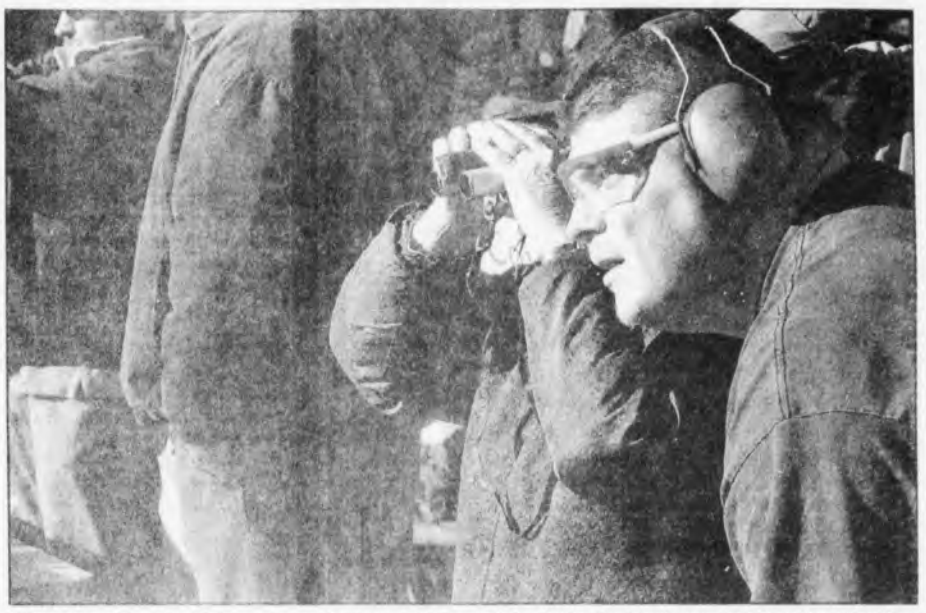
Worship Notes

Lessons & Carols

St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave., will present its Festival of Lessons and Carols at 3 p.m., on the First Sunday of Advent, Dec. 2. This service of Sacred Scripture and song traces salvation history through readings and song, presenting anthems sung by the choir, as well as hymns of the season sung by all. The Rev. Edward Kienzle will preside and music will be under the direction of choirmaster and organist David Baker. This Advent festival is a wonderful way for all to prepare hearts and minds for the celebrations of Christ's birth.

The church is handicap accessible, and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be gratefully accepted. For information, call 781-383-1083.

Cantor's concert



The public is welcome to an evening of music and inspirational speaking at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham, at 8 p.m., on Saturday, Dec. 8.

Titled "From Bimah to Broadway – A Cantor's Concert," the event will honor Herb Morse and feature Cantor Steven Weiss and Cantor Joel Colman from Temple Sinai, New Orleans, La.; Cantor Nancy Kassel from Temple Beth Tikvah, Roswell, Ga.; Cantor David Muchnick from Aventura Jewish Center, Aventura Fla.; Cantor Judy Seplowin from Temple Beth-El, Providence, R.I.; and accompanied by Eugene Kaminsky. There will also be a special tribute by Rev. Dr. Ray A. Hammond.

For more information, call the temple office at 781-749-8013, or visit the Web site at shaaray.org.

Caribbean Cruises get all shook up – in a good way

Fran Golden
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

It used to be you when you stood on deck and looked past the tiny pink umbrella on your pina colada, you knew where you were heading. The cruise ship routes were pretty standard – departing from Miami for a week in the eastern Caribbean including St. Thomas and St. Maarten, or west to places like Grand Cayman, Jamaica and Cozumel, Mexico.

But the cruise industry has been growing, changing and evolving, and so have the cruise lines' itineraries.

"The big thing about this winter in terms of the Caribbean and the Bahamas is that the cruise lines are trying to shake up the ports of call a bit," said Carolyn Spencer Brown, editor of Cruise Critic, a popular cruise information and planning Web site.

"It used to be seven days out of Miami, and now it's seven days, eight days, nine days, 11 days," Brown said. Embarkation ports, she noted, have broadened as well, with choices including additional ports in Florida (such as Port Everglades in Fort Lauderdale, Port Canaveral near Orlando and Tampa) and ports outside of Florida, including New Orleans and Galveston (Texas).

One of the biggest growing markets for Caribbean cruises is New York, with three big ships — Royal Caribbean's Explorer of the Seas, Norwegian Cruise Line's Norwegian Gem and Holland America's Noordam — cruising from the Big Apple this winter. For New Englanders, that means you no longer have to fly to get to the ship and the warm and sunny ports of the Caribbean or Bahamas – take Amtrak, catch a bus or drive.

Itineraries on the Gem include a weeklong cruise to the Bahamas, priced from $649 per person – there's an overnight in Nassau and a call at Port Canaveral with the option of visiting Disney World or Universal Studios.

The other cruises offered by the three lines range from 9 to 12 days. All include days at sea, which experienced cruisers know are the most relaxing – your big decision is whether to work out in the gym, sit in the sun by the pool, watch a movie, have a massage or participate in a deck game.

For those who don't mind a flight, southern Caribbean cruises from San Juan are also proliferating this year with the cruise lines offering more diverse itineraries than ever before. This year you can also cruise from lesser-known ports on big ships – Carnival's Destiny and Princess Cruises' Sea Princess, for instance, are both offering cruises from Barbados this winter.

A Caribbean cruise is all about fun in the sun.

All include days at sea, which experienced cruisers know are the most relaxing – your big decision is whether to work out in the gym, sit in the sun by the pool, watch a movie, have a massage or participate in a deck game.

"Southern [Caribbean] is relatively fresh and genuinely unique and different," Brown said, "the rainforest of Dominica, the French culture experience in Martinique and Guadeloupe, the rich and famous in St. Bart's, a taste of Dutch in Aruba."

Other ports that are being added to itineraries that cruise passengers may not have visited before include Freeport on Grand Bahama Island and the Turks & Caicos Islands. Cruise lines are also increasingly visiting the British Virgin Islands, calling at Tortola, and offering shore excursions to Virgin Gorda and Jost Van Dyke.

These islands are all decisively less touristy than the popular ports (St. Thomas. St. Maarten, Nassau, et al) and all boast beautiful beaches – with fun in the sun always a highlight of winter Caribbean itineraries.

Other trends for the upcoming winter Caribbean cruise season include the use of some of the newest ships on shorter routes. For instance, passengers can check out Norwegian Cruise Line's new Norwegian Pearl (which, like the Gem, boasts a bowling alley at sea) on its first season in the Caribbean on five-day cruises from Miami, priced from only $299 per person.

Cruise Critic's Brown said the shorter offerings are geared toward new cruisers who may not want to commit to a full week their first time out at sea.

Brown said pricing in general is pretty competitive this winter Caribbean cruise season, meaning there are deals to be had.

But beginning in February, a $5 per person, per day ($70 maximum per cruise) will be added to brands including Carnival, Holland America, Princess, Costa, Seabourn and Cunard, due to increasing fuel costs.

For those who like to cruise on the latest, new in the Caribbean this winter in addition to the Norwegian Gem and Norwegian Pearl, are Princess Cruises' Emerald Princess, Carnival's Freedom and Royal Caribbean's Liberty of the Seas.

On Shore Wonders

Shore excursions offered by the cruise lines are designed to help passengers explore the various ports. And the offerings just keep getting wackier.

You have your beach visits and waterfall hiking offered in Ocho Rios, Jamaica, for instance, but if you find that too ho-hum, on lines including Princess Cruises Royal Caribbean and Celebrity Cruises you can now book a dog sledding excursion. Yes, say "mush, Mon!"

The unique Jamaica Dog Sled Team is made up of former street and shelter dogs, who race their wheeled sled, with passengers onboard. Time is allowed on the excursion to play with the dogs and reward them with treats. And no, no snow is involved (the sledding is on dry land).

Those on Western Caribbean cruises operated by Carnival, Holland American and other lines, may want to take the less wacky opportunity to visit one of the new Wonders of the World, the ancient Mayan city of Chichen-Itza, which is located about two hours from the port of Progreso. Excursions that last a full day are also offered from Cozumel. Chichen-Itza's best-known structure on the site is Kukulkan's Pyramid — a square-based, stepped pyramid that is 75 feet tall.

IF YOU go...

Useful Web sites for planning your cruise include www.cruisecritic.com, which is chock full of ship reviews, destination reports, cruise news, message boards and more. Useful information and links to all the major cruise lines can also be found at www.cruising.org, the Web site of the main industry organization, Cruise Lines International Association. For reservations, call your travel agent or visit the cruise lines' individual Web sites.

It's in the books in Manchester, Vermont

Lindsey Parietti
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

IN NEW ENGLAND

Once you get past the subtly slip-covered metal detectors and less subtle shelf of tacky New England knick-knack offerings, the Northshire Bookstore in Manchester, Vt., is pure booklovers' haven.

Locals and vacationers alike lose themselves among three floors stocked with 150,000 book titles, music offerings and plenty of sunny reading nooks.

"We can't come to Vermont without coming to this bookstore. It's our favorite," said vacationing Millis, Mass. resident Cheryl Labonte as her son Chris checked out the CD collection, which ranges from Eminem to Welsh folk selections.

There's a collective booklovers spirit, and fellow shoppers aren't shy about praising your selection or recommending their favorite reads.

Dressed in woolen sweaters, employees comfortably carry books over the creaking pine floors of what was once an inn. Avid readers squat, kneel, or sit on footstools, leather chairs or rocking chairs to take in a few pages.

There's a collective booklovers spirit, and fellow shoppers aren't shy about praising your selection or recommending their favorite reads.

On a busy Saturday, co-owner Barbara Morrow was positioned behind the register, and talked about the bookstore business.

"We've always tried to stay ahead of the curve and respond to our community," said Morrow, who left a job in international travel to open a much smaller store with her husband in 1976. Demand for more selection and the continued charm of personal service encouraged the Morrows to keep expanding.

Now miles from any chain bookstore, they are clearly an independent success.

Morrow said the bookstore's event calendar – packed with musicians, authors and filmmakers – has played a big role in attracting new and repeat customers to the store. On Nov. 28, the store is hosting a local appearance (at The Equinox resort) by Ken Burns, who will discuss his PBS series, "The War."

Waltham, Mass. native Judy Shachner recently read her book, Skippyjon Jones and the Big Bones, to an enchanted group of superheroes, witches and butterflies gathered for a Halloween party on the store's third floor – a kid-friendly space with books, toys and beanbag chairs.

"Can you say chunky Chihuahas and cheese?" asked Shachner, in a performance that was equal parts musical theater, Spanish lesson and giggle-inducing tongue twisters.

Co-owner Ed Morrow seemed to be enjoying himself as much as his eager young patrons.

"Youngsters from the very beginning are learning much more [than adults]," he said. "They're just absorbing information at a fantastic rate, and to see them light up to books is just great."

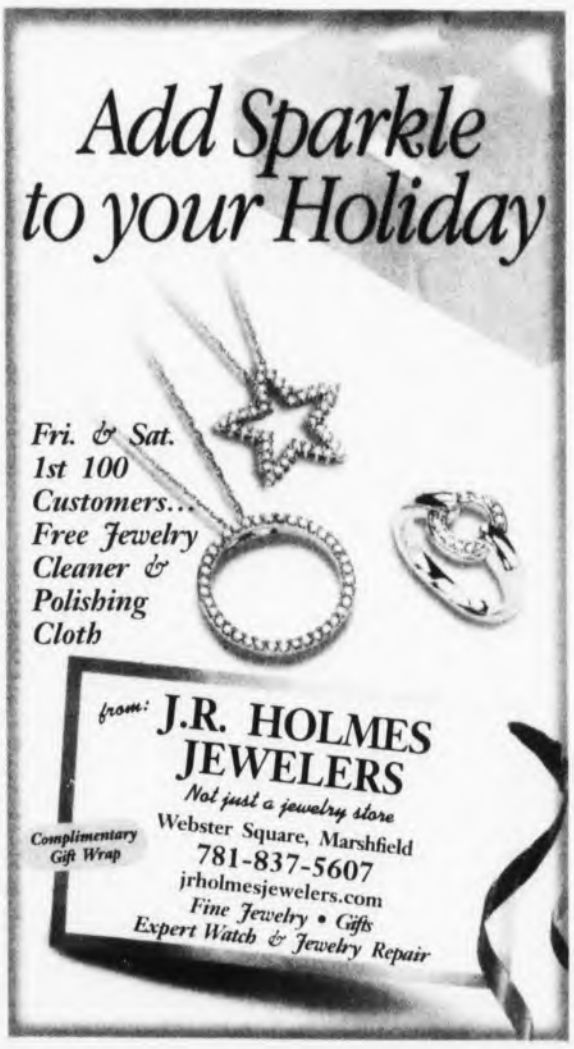
Police Status Report



Police arrested 11 last month

Cohasset Police made 11 arrests in October: two for intimidation of a witness, two for operation of a motor vehicle with a suspended license, one for operating under the influence of drugs, one for an outstanding warrant, and finally, five for protective custody, Chief James Hussey said.

During the month of October the police department investigated six motor vehicle accidents, one of which resulted in personal injury. There were 33 motor vehicle citations issued, totaling $505 in fines. Additionally, there were 21 parking tickets issued totaling $525 in fines, Hussey said.

Also in the month of October the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 711 calls for police services; of those 273 were emergency 911 calls, he said.

In the month of October there were five reports of breaking and entering; one involving a town building, two involving motor vehicles, and two involving private residences. Also, there were five criminal complaints issued for the month of October, Hussey said.

NOVEMBER 22-30, 2007

'Christmas' makes a comeback

Popular holiday show returns after five-year hiatus

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Local entertainment presenter John F. McDonald Jr. doesn't have to go any further than the Stop & Shop in Wollaston to be reminded of the enduring place his holiday show, "What Christmas Means to Me," has in the hearts of its many South Shore fans.

"At this time of year, whether I'm on the Red Line or in line at the supermarket checkout, it is inevitable that someone will stop me to ask if we're doing our Christmas show. The problem often is that we get more requests from patrons than interest and availability from our cast who are busy with their own lives raising families and singing in church choirs. We'd love to do the show annually, but we can't always get the cast together for the necessary rehearsal and performance time," explained McDonald last week by telephone from his Quincy home. "This year, after a five-year hiatus, I am very happy to be able to report that we will be doing four performances of the show at Raffael's in Hull, Dec. 6-7 and 13-14."

First presented at Woodward School for Girls in Quincy in the 1980s, "What Christmas Means to Me" has since been produced at the Common Market, St. Ann's Church, the old Raffael's, and the Fox & Hound Wood Grille in Quincy. While the venues have changed, some things about the perennial favorite remain the same.

"Sheila Fahey and I have been in every production of the show since the very first year and we'll be in it again this time around," says McDonald. "Sheila has made the story of her life experiences at Christmas, from her parents and her siblings through her own husband and children, into a now-legendary monologue that is a true highlight every time we do this show."

Fahey — a Neponset native and former Boston meter maid known for her starring role in the musical revues "Connie, Brenda, Patsy and Me" and "Guys by Dolls" — will be joined not only by McDonald this year, but also by her frequent co-stars and collaborators Patricia Lee and Maryellen Anson from Braintree, Kathy Teevens Fitzpatrick from Quincy, and Jennifer Fahey of Neponset. Each of the performers will share their favorite holiday music — including "Do You Hear What I Hear," "Silent Night" and "White Christmas" — as well as their own special memories. McDonald promises solos, full-cast medleys, a visit from a certain red-suit wearing North Pole denizen, and a monologue all his own.

Cast of "What Christmas Means to Me."

"I will probably talk about my experience as a Santa Claus at the Macy's flagship store in Manhattan many years ago. I was just one Santa away from being chosen to appear in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade. It was a very memorable time in my life and I have some great stories to share. I've loved this time of year since I was one of eight children growing up in Wollaston. Every year, my mother would sit us down in front of the television to watch the classic Christmas specials with Perry Como, Bob Hope, and Bing Crosby. That is probably why I have loved holiday music since childhood."

McDonald is keenly aware that much has changed in his own life, in the lives of his cast, and in the world since "What Christmas Means to Me" was first performed some 20 years ago.

"Our show is sentimental and there is considerable poignancy about the people we have loved and lost over the years, but we also make certain that there is a great deal of humor and fun. It makes me very proud that so many people tell us that they consider this show to be a not-to-be-missed holiday tradition. This is the one show I still do as a performer, because it means so much to me. What we set out to do is calm everyone down during these hectic weeks, remove the commercialism, and focus on the warm and fuzzy meaning of Christmas."

JM Productions will present "What Christmas Means to Me" at Raffael's at Nantasket, 25 Hull Shore Drive, Hull, on Dec. 6-7 and 13-14. Tickets for show only are $30 per person with seating at 8 p.m. Tickets for dinner and show are $50 with seating beginning at 6:30 p.m. Special hotel packages for the Clarion Hotel on Nantasket Beach are also available. For tickets, call JM Productions at 617-786-7469, Raffael's at 718-925-4515 or go online at jmproductionspresents.com.

Volunteers

HOSPICE OF THE SOUTH SHORE SEEKS VOLUNTEERS

- Greater numbers of people are turning to hospice services as they near the end of life and therefore the need for hospice volunteers is growing.

Hospice of the South Shore, a program of South Shore Hospital, is looking for volunteers to share time each week with hospice patients and their families. Volunteers do a variety of things, depending on the needs of the patient and his or her family. Activities may include providing respite for caregivers, running errands, or just keeping someone company. Many hospice volunteers describe the experience of helping individuals with advanced illness as an honor and a privilege. Hospice of the South Shore will be conducting a volunteer training class. If you are interested in becoming a hospice volunteer, call Marcia Clifford at 617-755-1314.

Facelift for Town Hall

Architect hired for restoration

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The oldest part of Town Hall is on the verge of receiving a good once over. At the Spring Town Meeting, voters earmarked $35,000 of Community Preservation funds for a historic restoration architectural firm to advise the Town on how to best repair the "old" part of Town Hall.

Subject to successful negotiation of a contract, Town Manager Bill Griffin has awarded the contract to Carr, Lynch and Sandell, the first choice of the Design Review Committee. Carr, Lynch and Sandell was recently involved with the town in the development of the village business district zoning bylaw. The firm provided its architectural expertise for both hypothetical renderings and determining what type of development the new bylaw would allow.

Resident David Farrag applied for and received the CPC funds to have professional architects devise the best way to restore the antique portion of Town Hall to its glory days. The "old" part of Town Hall houses an auditorium with

A helping hand during the holidays

Wellspring is making a difference

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull spreads abundant goodwill and cheer during the holiday season.

This year-round organization, founded 21 years ago, provides food, toys, and support to individuals and families in need — some who might otherwise have been forgotten during busy holiday times or who might not have much cause for celebration without Wellspring's helping hand.

YOUR COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER CARES

"While we help people year-round, the holidays are a joyful time of year when people are often more willing to reach out to their neighbors, even if they don't know their names," said Director Vinny Harte. "This establishes a genuine human connection, and hopefully the sense of fulfillment that comes from providing for others will carry on throughout the rest of the year with their continued involvement."

Wellspring serves residents of Hull, Hingham, Cohasset, Weymouth, Braintree, Norwell, Rockland, and other communities through direct assistance or referrals.

Its mission is to provide support and skills to people facing challenges to their financial, physical, or emotional well being in order to help them achieve independence and self-sufficiency.

Wellspring kicked off its Silver Star Project, a holiday giving program and fund-raising drive in collaboration with the Derby Street Shoppes at the recent Silver Star Soiree held at the shopping center. This event helped raise $15,000 of the $25,000 fund-raising goal. This initiative involves community and school groups, businesses, and others who want to show support for the many programs and services that Wellspring offers.

The decorative "giving stars" make attractive and meaningful tree ornaments, wall decorations, and gift tags. Each one is engraved with an inspirational quote. The stars will be sold throughout the holiday season at community, art, and church fairs, at holiday concerts, and during choral performances at the Derby Street Shoppes.

Wellspring Executive Director Vinny Harte holds up a holiday star that is being sold at both the Derby Street Shoppes and at Wellspring in Hull. The stars are $5 each and the proceeds will help benefit the programs at Wellspring. The non-profit is also one of the local charitable organizations being supported in the Mariner's Gifts of Hope campaign.

Its mission is to provide support and skills to people facing challenges to their financial, physical, or emotional well being in order to help them achieve independence and self-sufficiency.

Center staging area

Hydraulic fluid spill raises eyebrows

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

...with the staging area and a construction project comes issues with noise, traffic and accidents, like last week's hydraulic fluid spill.

As the Little Harbor sewer and water improvement project moves into the winter months, the fate of its staging area located on Jerusalem Road is still in question. The Zoning Board of Appeals is reviewing a resident's appeal of the Building Inspector's decision to allow the contractor to use the private piece of land for its central base.

A construction project of this magnitude involving several construction crews, heavy trucks, and large water and sewer pipes needs a central location — a staging area — to both store equipment and materials as well as serve as the headquarters for the multi-faceted project. But, with the staging area and a construction project comes issues with noise, traffic and accidents, like last week's hydraulic fluid spill.

As the town waits for the Zoning Board of Appeals decision (scheduled to be discussed at the ZBA monthly meeting Tuesday, Dec. 11), the Planning Board has made its recommendation in favor of the appellant, Eileen Craven of 6 Nichols Road.

"It seemed to us a lengthy intrusion to a residential area at the very least needed some public review," said Planning Board Chairman Al Moore in a phone interview earlier this week. The Zoning Board will take the Planning Board's recommendation into consideration as they make their final decision.

The agreement to use the private land at 198 Jerusalem Road is between the property owners and the town's project contractor, L M Holdings.

Before the start of the project, the town's contractor, L M Holdings, located the piece of property, less than an acre, to serve as the staging area for the duration of the project, approximately two years. The contractor got the green light from Building Inspector Bob Egan and prepared the site for use by blacktopping, fencing and placing hay bails around the section of property situated in the midst of project work.

At the ZBA hearing on the matter, neighbors spoke out against the staging area because of its presence in a residential district — a district not zoned for commercial or industrial use. However, the town's zoning bylaws allows uses like a staging area in a residential district if the town or other governmental agency was operating the use of the property.

Whether the town is operating the site is a central question. The town's agents, both the contractor and its engineering consultant, Coughlin Environmental, operate the day to day business out of the staging area.

The staging area raised some eyebrows after one of the project trucks broke its hydraulic line while in the staging area on Monday, Nov. 19. The driver of the PA Landers truck did not realize the line had broken as he pulled out of the staging area entrance onto Jerusalem Road. The truck got as far as the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Nichols Road — less than 100 feet.

"The spill may have been about 15 gallons," said Fire Chief Robert Silvia. 15 gallons was the total reservoir of the hydraulic fluid tank according to the truck's driver. Fire units responded to the scene. The DEP was notified, but did not respond, said Silvia. Cyn Environmental was contacted and assisted in the clean up of the spill.

The road was shut down for a short time so the crews could clean up the fluids on the road. Fire officials were on the scene from 3:3. to 5:40p.m. as the clean-up took place, said Silvia.

Red Lion could get round before selectmen

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The management of the Red Lion Inn could be before the selectmen in the weeks ahead after apparent violations of the establishment's liquor license the night before Thanksgiving.

Police observed patrons drinking on the porch at about 11:40 p.m. on Wednesday (Nov. 21) and spoke with the person in charge about having the people move back inside. "We were assured this would be taken care of," Chief James Hussey said. An officer also took a male patron home after he dropped a beer bottle that broke on S. Main Street. He was not underage, Hussey said, but appeared to be intoxicated.

Later on that night, police went back and saw some patrons drinking outside on the sidewalk and also saw patrons drinking inside at closing time, about 1 a.m. The officers told the bartender to turn the lights up, it was time to go, Hussey said.

"I am putting a package together to send to the town manager," Hussey said. "On its face, it appears there were violations of the liquor license, including drinking outside off the property and possibly serving people after hours."

Hussey explained that "last call" is usually between 12:30-12:45 a.m., and by 1 a.m., establishments start clearing out.

Officers also drove a Cohasset woman and a Scituate woman home. Both appeared to be intoxicated, police said.

No one at the Red Lion Inn was available to comment by press time.

Murder hoax

State Police asked Cohasset Police to do a well being check on Thanksgiving after receiving a cell phone call from a caller who claimed to have witnessed on the Internet a murder that had just occurred in Cohasset. Police went to the Old Pasture Road address and were assured by the resident that everything was fine. The resident also let police inside and there was "nothing showing," Chief Hussey said. State Police have the cell phone number of the caller.

Cohasset Police are working in conjunction with State Police to determine who that number belongs to and to see what action should be taken. "It was the false report of a crime and tied up police resources for no apparent reason," Hussey said.

Car doors

Police are investigating the apparent theft of two doors from a Jeep that was parked for repairs at a car repair business off Route 3A. The incident occurred sometime from Sunday afternoon (Nov. 18) into Monday morning (Nov. 19). Chief Hussey said each of the Jeep doors is valued at $700. He explained that a variety of markets for stolen car items, such as air bags have developed in recent years.

Laptops stolen

A number of laptops valued at $1,100 each were stolen from the Deer Hill School. The incident was reported on Monday (Nov. 19) but it is unclear when the theft occurred.

Chief Hussey said the computers were stored in a locked cabinet and were discovered missing when the technology staffer went to access the computers in order to upgrade memory and noticed that a number of them were missing. Because the incident is under investigation, police did not say how many were stolen.

MV crashes

• At about 3:30 p.m. on Monday (Nov. 19), a 2001 Lexus operated by a Cohasset man veered off North Main Street and into a tree. The Lexus was traveling southbound (toward the Village) and was in the vicinity of Dolan Lane when the incident occurred. According to witnesses, he crossed the centerline without provocation and hit a tree on the northbound side. The operator told police he was distracted and took his eyes of the road for a short time, when he looked up, it was too late to make a correction. The man said he was not injured. There was damage to the front of the Lexus, which was towed. The driver was cited for marked lanes violation.

• A three-car, chain reaction collision occurred at 10:10 p.m. on Monday (Nov. 19) at the lights at Stop & Shop on Route 3A. A 2002 Honda, driven by a Braintree man, and a 2003 Chrysler, driven by a Hingham woman, were headed north and had stopped at the lights. A Boston woman driving a 1995 Jeep tried to stop but made contact with the Chrysler, pushing it into the Honda. The Honda did not appear to be damaged. The Chrysler had extensive damage to the rear of the car and the Jeep had front-end damage. No one claimed to be injured and none of the cars were towed, Chief Hussey said.

• A 1995 Chrysler driven by a Brockton woman that was trying to turn left (north) onto Route 3A from a driveway of a business off the state highway collided with a southbound 1997 Dodge driven by a Scituate woman at about 9:25 p.m. on Sunday (Nov. 25). Police said the Brockton woman was lost and pulled into the driveway of Route 3A to turn around. Both vehicles were towed and the Brockton woman was cited for failure to use care when entering a state highway.

Self-reporting

A man who backed into an unoccupied vehicle on Highland Avenue, not only left a note with his contact information, but he also contacted the police. "This is what we would like to see happen

Temporary pipes freeze

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Twenty-eight homes woke up this past Saturday morning, turned out the faucet and nothing came out. The Little Harbor district homes were receiving water service from above ground temporary water pipes due to the ongoing Little Harbor water and sewer improvement project.

Several residents called the police department which promptly notified the Water Department. The temporary connections, which are rubber hoses, attach to the house through an outside faucet. When these temporary pipes, not the water main, froze no water could get into the individual homes.

Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt said representatives from the Water Department spoke to all the homeowners on temporary pipes and given them a connection that they can leave running to prevent another freeze.

The temporary connections, which are rubber hoses, attach to the house through an outside faucet.

"We have also attempted to add insulation to the connections," said Pratt in an e-mail.

As a result of this incident the water work in conjunction with the Little Harbor sewer project has been slightly altered. The original plan was to complete the water work on Deep Run, Whitehead Road and parts of Nichols Road this year before the freeze set in. All water work on these streets was scheduled first so the sewer work could continue through the winter months. If the weather had cooperated, the temporary pipes would have been removed before the first freeze.

"We have rearranged the work schedule and expect that none of the temporary pipes will be needed by the 15th of December," said Pratt.

The new schedule moves the remaining work on Nichols Road for the spring, Deep Run will be completed in the coming weeks and most of the Whitehead work will be able to be completed as planned.

"The overall project should not be impacted in the long run," said Pratt, "the project is scheduled to run 700-plus days."

The Little Harbor sewer and water improvement project is the largest municipal public works project (exclusive of the school buildings) to be undertaken by the town. At the end of the two-year long project, 485 homes will be added to town sewer. The homeowners benefiting from the new sewer lines will pay the $15.2 million price tag for the project.

in these incidents," Chief Hussey said. Too often, a motorist, who hits an unoccupied car and causes damage, leaves the scene without leaving any identifying information.

In this incident that was reported last Tuesday (Nov. 20) at about 10:40 p.m., there was some minor, visible damage.

"We encourage people to go that extra mile and give us a call," Hussey said. That way the other party can be assured of being notified. A note left on a windshield could blow away or be taken. "When people call us, we can then be sure the insurance companies can take it from there."

High-end bike stolen

Police are investigating the theft of a black and white "Look 585" bicycle valued a more than $1,000 from a Jerusalem Road garage sometime overnight last Wednesday into Thursday morning (Nov. 21-22). The resident called police when he saw the garage door open that morning and the bike was missing. The garage door had been closed but was unlocked, police said. Detectives gathered evidence from the scene and the serial number has been put into NCIC (National Crime Information Center) database.

Bike found

Police took custody of an 18-speed bicycle after a Clay Spring Road resident called last week to explain the bike had been leaning on the fence across from her house for two days. It was not chained and no one had been near the bike. Chief Hussey said the bike is valued at a "few hundred dollars."

ID theft

Police gave a Scituate woman an identity theft package after she reported an unauthorized purchase of $148 on her credit card issued by a bank in Cohasset. The charge was made to a shipping address in Albany, N.Y. There appeared to be no other unauthorized transactions and she cancelled the card.

Drive off

Police have not been able to match up a plate number provided by an attendant at a local gas station to a white car that drove off without paying for $50.18 in gas last week.

The attendant provided a seven-character plate number, and in Massachusetts, there are only six characters on a plate. The person, who drove off, has not returned and it is not clear if he/she left on purpose or left without realizing they had not paid for the gas.

Raccoon complaint

A frustrated caller threatened to take matters into his own hands and shoot a raccoon that was playing in the back yard with his dog last week. When police arrived, the raccoon had moved on.

Chief Hussey said that if a raccoon is behaving oddly, then callers should tell the dispatcher who will send an officer right out. In this case, the caller was put into the animal control officer's voicemail.

When he called back, he threatened to shoot the raccoon himself.

"If the animal looks sick or acting strangely then we will send an officer right down who can take care of the animal in a safe manner," Hussey said.

Architect hired for Town Hall restoration entry foyer and several second story offices for town departments.

Farrag has headed up the five person Design Selection Committee that interviewed five architectural firms for the job. Through a series of meetings and interviews, the committee narrowed down the field to their top three picks.

"It was a tough decision between the five firms," said Farrag.

The Design Review Committee was appointed by Town Manager Bill Griffin to supervise and advise the town during the project. In addition to the interviews, the committee did research into past projects of similar natures and checked references. A similar five-person committee will work hand in hand with the architect as the firm completes the project scope.

The architect will look at the building in a holistic fashion, paying attention to heating, electricity, space utilization and energy conservation as they develop what will likely be a phased restoration project, said Farrag.

One of the challenges with the Town Hall restoration is the fact the building is a working Town Hall with several town offices located on the second floor of the building.

"This is not a dead building," said Farrag, the Town Hall is host to the town election, Cohasset Dramatic Club performances and day-to-day town business.

"We want to keep the time periods for disturbances as low as possible," said Farrag.

Furthermore, the architects are limited to the "envelope of the building," said Farrag, meaning they are limited to what they can do within the current four walls of the building. The architect will need to walk the line between future functionality and historical preservation. Special care will be paid to making the building as "green" as possible. The architects working on the project are LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) certified.

The Design Review Committee's recommended Carr, Lynch and Sandell for several reasons, explained Griffin. The firm came to the interview with a specific plan of action and task list for the project. The project manager has specific experience in renovating an old theater and the engineers have experience working with an aging Town Hall. The firm plans to hire a professional cost-estimating firm to assist on the project, "where the rubber reaches the road is how much this is going to cost," says Farrag. Other benefits included one of firm's principals lives locally, and they received excellent references from other clients.

"They set forth a workable time schedule and indicated they could complete the scope of services within the allotted budget," Griffin said. Farrag estimates the feasibility study to take about two months, once the contract is signed. But, to complete the renovation and restoration will take much longer.

"There's so much to do and it will take awhile to get the funds in line," says Farrag.

Farrag foresees presenting progress at the Annual Town Meeting in March. Parts of the project could qualify for Community Preservation funds, but he hopes to find several other sources of funding to complete the restoration, including grant funding.

Cohasset Land Foundation plugging along

George M. Ingram Park in the works

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The CLF held a reception this past weekend to honor and thank Ingram and his family for working with the Land Foundation to create the park.

Step by step the Cohasset Land Foundation has been working to realize its plan for a 40-acre parcel of land off Beechwood Street/Norman Todd Road. The Land Foundation, a not-for profit group of private citizens, finalized the purchase of the land over the summer and is working on developing a small portion of the tract while leaving the majority of land for open space.

Establishing a park accessible to the public is one of the primary objectives of the Land Foundation at this time. Nearly 26 acres of land is intended for a park to be named after George M. Ingram. The CLF purchased the land from Osborne "Ozzie" Ingram. Part of the purchase and sale agreement stipulated at least 50 percent of the land remain undeveloped and be a park named in Ingram's late father's honor.

The Cohasset Land Foundation purchased nearly 40 acres of land from Osborne "Ozzie" Ingram over the summer. Nearly 26 acres of the land will be converted to George M. Ingram Park, named in Ingram's father's honor. The CLF held a reception this past weekend to honor and thank Ingram and his family for working with the Land Foundation to create the park.

The CLF held a reception this past weekend to honor and thank Ingram and his family for working with the Land Foundation to create the park.

"It was heartening to see such love between an admiring son, and his late father," said CLF Chairman Rick Swanborg in an e-mail.

Ingram's father purchased the majority of the land—31 acres—while the family was living on the North Shore in 1922. He later bought adjacent parcels and at one time owned about 50 acres of land in Cohasset.

"I hope [the park] is an appropriate memorial to the man who brought me up and worked hard all his life," said In gram in a phone interview, adding he thought it was fitting the man who preserved the land from development be honored in the park's name.

The creation of the park involves a small gravel parking area, an Ingram Park sign and some simple walking trails through the area. This parcel will add to one of three wildlife migration routes defined for future preservation needs called for in the Cohasset Master Plan drafted a few years ago, said Swanborg.

As the CLF never intended to be the owners of land, the title and management of the future Ingram Park has been conferred to another private land group, the Cohasset Conservation Trust. The Conservation Trust, which owns and cares for other properties throughout town, will hold the conservation restrictions on the land.

In addition, the abutting Vedanta Centre purchased six acres to buffer its current land and community.

"Both groups were great to work with on a very complex transaction," said Swanborg.

Ingram, too, speaks highly of working with the members of the CLF in this transaction and was glad to provide the CLF with the opportunity to do their first project, "I'm very pleased with this arrangement."

The Land Foundation presented Osborne "Ozzie" Ingram with a mock-up of the sign to designate the George M. Ingram Park. His son, Alan, and two daughters, Martha and Judy joined him at the reception last Saturday. The park will include a small gravel parking area, an Ingram Park sign and some simple walking trails.

The CLF negotiated a price tag of $1.25 million to purchase the 37.5 acres of land, a combination of wetlands, ledge and forest. The land's designation as forestland places it under a Chapter 61 statute that granted the Town the right of first refusal. The Board of Selectmen waived that right this past spring.

Members of the CLF have appeared in front of all major town boards in the last few months, including the Planning Board, Conservation Commission, Board of Health to get the permits required for development. An open house for potential developers was held in October and there were several expressions of interest, said Swanborg. Three two-acre, single-family home lots will fund the land acquisition price and investments made by the CLF.

The Cohasset Land Foundation is a public/private partnership founded to assist the town in identifying, acquiring, preserving and appropriately developing parcels of land of special interest in a manner consistent with the goals outlined in the 2003 Cohasset Master Plan. The CLF is modeled after a successful organization established in the town of Lincoln. The organization seeks further opportunities with local landowners and estates to "save what needs to be saved and develop what needs to be developed" to meet the towns future needs.

"We have started searching for other opportunities to purchase property at a fair price and convert it for meeting the objectives of the Cohasset Master Plan," said Swanborg, "Ozzie Ingram's property was a great example of our team working to pay a fair price for precious land that will be a Park, a nice land buffer for existing home owners, and limited development. We would look forward to discussions with other property owners."

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

FAIR(S) WEEKEND

Hi Cohasset. How is everyone doing this week? The start of December is here tomorrow and holiday fun and activities have arrived. Don't forget to head on down to the Common tomorrow for the Village Fair and to visit with the famed "Man of the hour in the Big Red Suit!" After that, you can head over to the wonderful Beechwood Snowflake Fair, more to follow in this column. As the holiday season continues to get underway and grow, we all need to make sure to take each day in stride with a nice deep breath and enjoy! Whether you celebrate Hanukkah, Christmas, Kwanzaa or another special day and time, we are all in this together to have a wonderful holiday season.

OH BOY!

We have some wonderful news to share about a former Cohasset resident and her family. Jennifer (Cellucci) Edgar and her husband Robert would like announce the birth of their son, Jacob Daniel Edgar. Jacob was born in Weymouth on Nov. 10, 2007 weighing 8 pounds, 2 ounces and was 20.5 inches long. Jacob's very proud and happy grandparents are Judy and Dan Cellucci of Cohasset and Pat and Bob Edgar of Hanover. Jacob and his mom and dad are residing in North Weymouth getting ready to have a wonderful holiday season. Congratulations to all as you enjoy this new little person.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

A super Happy Birthday wish is going out to a very special young lady from everyone in my household along with all of your friends and family! Abbey Johnson, a Cohasset first grader, celebrated her 7th birthday this week. You are getting to be such a big girl Miss Abbey and we are all so proud of you. Happy Happy Birthday Abba-Doo!

JOSEPH AUDITIONS

Auditions for Cohasset Dramatic Club's Spring musical, "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" by Andrew Lloyd Webber, will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall on Sunday, Dec. 9th at 6 p.m. for youth ages 10 and up and at 7:30 pm for Adults. Auditions will also be held on Monday, Dec. 10 at 6:30 p.m. for youth ages 10 and up and at 7:30 p.m. for adults. Callbacks, if needed, will be Tuesday Dec. 11th at 7 pm. Cast size can vary. Both men and women are needed, specifically as many as 17 principal men (some of these parts can be played by women) and two specific women with a women's chorus; there will also be a youth chorus of 20-24, ages 10 and up. Boys and girls are welcome. Audition requirements are a prepared 16-32 bars of an upbeat song in the style of the show. Music from the show is acceptable as well. There will be a dance movement audition as well, so dress comfortably. Some may be asked to do a cold reading.

Performance dates will be Feb. 29, March 1, 2, 7,8,9,14,15 &16 at the Cohasset Town Hall. Lisa Rafferty will direct the show, with music direction by Mark Bono. Lisa Pratt will produce it. For any questions regarding auditions or anything pertaining to the show including a more complete description of the show, please contact Lisa Pratt at 617-852-0091.

COURTESY PHOTO

If you see Judy and Dan Cellucci of Cohasset around town smiling more than usual, be sure to congratulate them! They have a brand-new grandson, Jacob Daniel Edgar, who arrived on Nov. 10.

HOLIDAY STROLL

Village merchants are busy planning the annual Cohasset Village Holiday Stroll to be held on Saturday Dec. 15th in Cohasset Village, encompassing South Main Street, Elm Street, Depot Court, Pleasant Street, and Ripley Road. From 4-7 p.m. the streets will be alive with holiday cheer as businesses stay open late with refreshments, open houses, entertainment, and special holiday celebrations. For children, there will be a hay ride and visits with Santa. Each participating business will offer a raffle prize; tickets are available at the Village businesses and all proceeds will benefit the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project. For more information visit any of the Village locations.

HOUSE TOUR

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will present "Christmas Memories", a holiday house tour on Thursday, Dec. 6, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.. This year's tour will showcase five of Cohasset's loveliest homes and the Cohasset Historical Society's Paul Pratt building, all lavishly decorated for the holiday season by garden club members. Tea and light refreshments will be served at Bates Hall in the Second Congregational Church on Highland Avenue in Cohasset. There will also be a holiday gift boutique where wreaths, garlands, and holiday decorations may be purchased. Tickets are $20 in advance and $25 on tour day and include directions to the homes and parking suggestions. The tour will be held rain or shine and is suitable for adults only. Tickets are limited so be sure to purchase your tickets as soon as possible. Tickets are now on sale locally at: Windsor Tea Shop, Buttonwood Books and Toys, Flemings, and Darilynn's. You may also purchase tickets on the day of the tour at the Second Congregational Church.

CHORAL CONCERT

They are at it again. So what do the names Avery, Game, Tebbetts, Haber, Lengyel, Kovach, Roche, Sceery, and Norman have in common? They are all members of the South Shore's Choral Arts Society, conducted by Danica A. Buckley, and composed of your neighbors and local friends from many south shore towns who love to sing. CAS will hold its glorious winter concert, Holiday Fanfare, with seasonal works of Irving Berlin, Vittoria, and Robert Shaw, followed by Ralph Vaughan Williams' stunning Hodie, on Sunday, Dec. 2 at 8pm at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, 465 First Parish Road, (corner of 3A) Scituate. The concert will benefit the work of the society and its scholarship fund. Tickets are available at Buttonwood Books in Shaw's Plaza, at the Front Street Book Shop, 88 Front St., and from choir members. $15 per person, $12. for seniors and students., This event is funded in part by the Local Arts Councils of Cohasset, Hull, Norwell and Scituate under the umbrella of the Mass Cultural Council. Come hear the dazzlingly piano performance of Susan Gilleece-Reilley, the four part harmony and exquisite solo work of the society.. It will carry you gently into the holiday spirit! For information call 617-285-6339.

VILLAGE FAIR

The Village Fair on Cohasset Common is this Saturday, Dec. 1, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., sponsored by Second Congregational, St. Stephen's Episcopal and First Parish Unitarian Universalist churches. Arts and crafts, chowder bar, bake tables, rummage sale, visit with Santa, and specially priced items for children to buy gifts. Nativity of the Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox church will sell Greek pastry and holiday greens and wreaths at the South Shore Community Center. Rusty Skippers band performs at 11 a.m. at First Parish Meeting House. Many programs are being run with the Cohasset Appalachian Service Project including the photos with Santa and the Children's Gift Room. Don't forget to come on down and enjoy the sunny, winter and holiday-like special day!

SNOWFLAKE FAIR

Stop by the Beechwood Church's Annual Snowflake Fair on Saturday, Dec. 1, to shop for the holidays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.. Have coffee and donuts and then lunch while you shop. Children will enjoy choosing interesting White Elephant items. For crafty types, check out our homemade goods: hand knit items, centerpieces, jewelry and decorated wreaths. Don't have time to bake? Buy our baked goods, especially our much sort after Beach Glass Candy. A Clam Chowder luncheon will be served at 11:30. The Beechwood Church is located on Church Street.

That is all for this week. Send me in all of your news and information no later than Tuesday by 5:00 pm.

'Tis the 'Season'

Amanda Thompson publishes second book

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Don't wait.

This is the advice Cohasset's own young author, Amanda Thompson, offers to aspiring writers because it is exactly what she did. The 18-year-old college freshman is a twice-published author and always sees writing a part of her future.

"If writing is something you love, don't wait. Write about what you want when you want. And trust me, you have more time to write in middle school and high school," Thompson explains with a smile while sitting in her living room. Twenty minutes earlier she returned home for Thanksgiving break from Gordon College in Wenham, Mass.

She describes herself as an impatient person and didn't want to wait around for the right job or higher education or more experience before she started writing and encourages other budding novelists to do the same.

Like many writers, Thompson has had the frustration of writer's block on more than one occasion. Moving beyond making something sound perfect, by instead focusing on getting the emotion behind the words on paper is key.

"You want to get the emotion out, even if you don't like it," she says the wording can always be changed down the line, "writing without emotion is not powerful."

Often Thompson uses sticky notes when creativity hits her to write down phrases or sentences to be inserted somewhere someday, "my desk at school is covered with them," she says with a laugh.

Cohasset's Amanda Thompson holds a copy of "Season," her second novel. Thompson is a freshman at Gordon College.

STAFF PHOTOS/CHRIS SHORES

Cohasset's Amanda Thompson, a college freshman and author of "Season," which is a sequel to her first young adult novel, "Millennium Girl," sits at her home computer.

Thompson's second book, "Season," is a sequel to her first young adult novel, "Millennium Girl," which came out when she was just 14-years-old. In "Season" her heroine Carolyn is growing up and discovering who she is. The story picks up where "Millenium Girl" left off with Carolyn in the midst of eighth grade.

"["Season"] is about changes and how life can't stay the same but through its challenges we discover who we are and what we stand for," says Thompson. Although "Season" and "Millennium Girl" are two distinct books and stories, she sees the books as the continuing story of one girl growing up, "life is a progression of events. I see [the books] as one thing with several pieces."

In this second installment, Carolyn deals with issues and problems with those closest to her — parents, friends, boyfriends, but most of all within herself. She hopes her readers will relate to Carolyn and her story as much as they did "Millennium Girl."

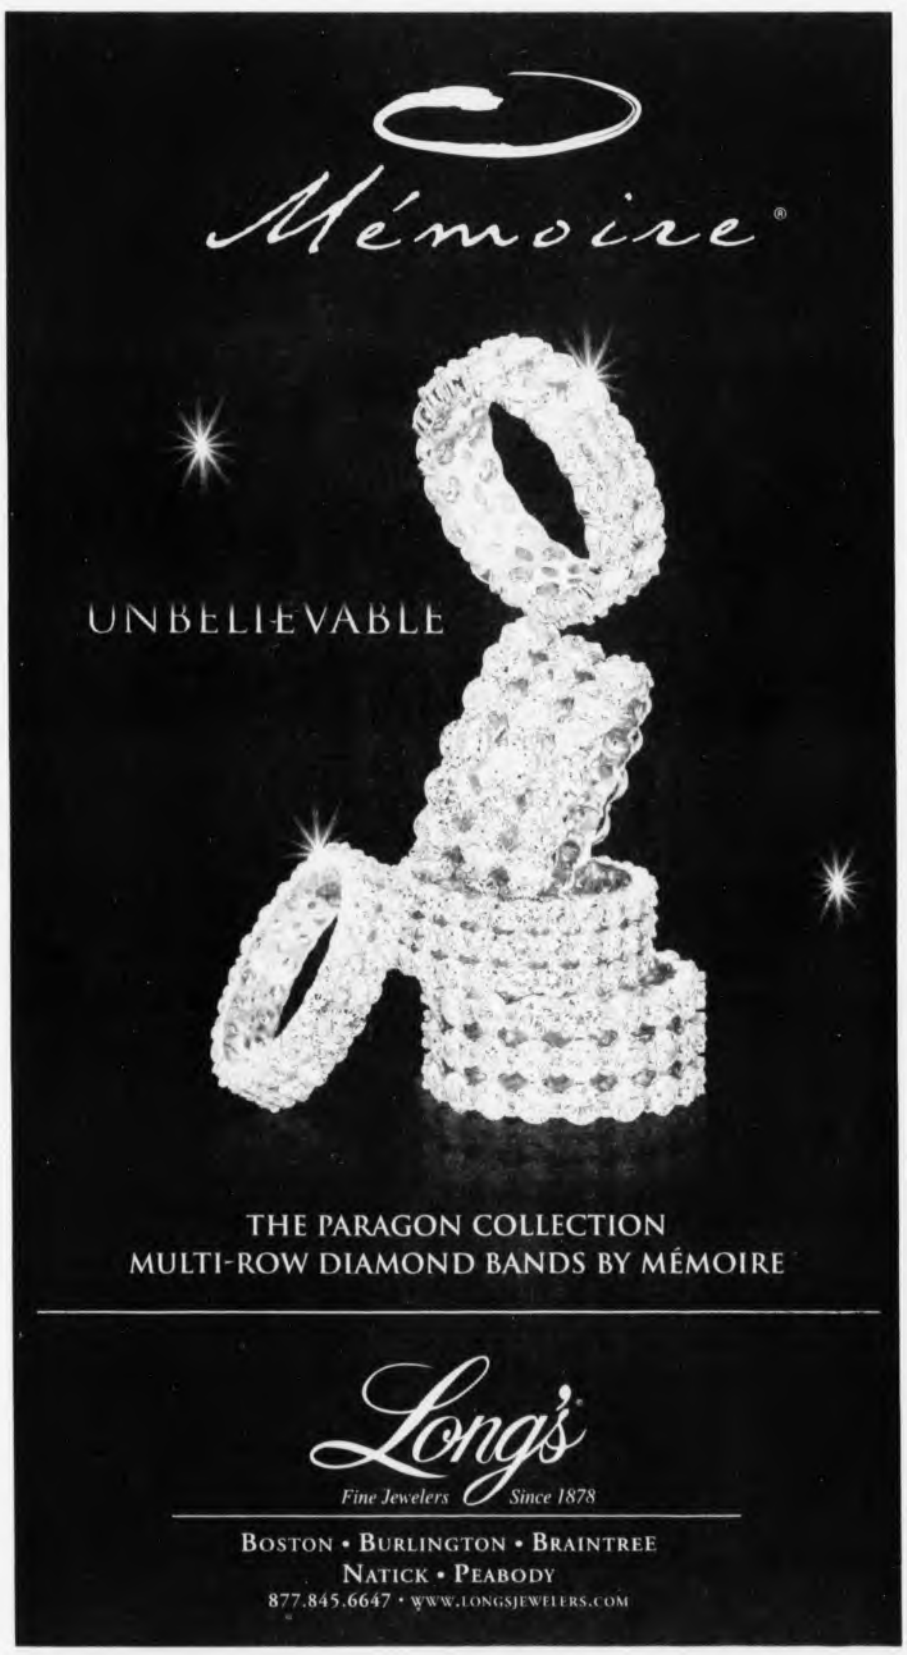
Being a published author at such a young age was a little surreal at first, says Thompson, "but after a little bit it feels normal, it doesn't feel weird."

"Writing is something I've always done and something I always see myself doing," and one of the best parts about being published is hearing feedback from her readers, "it's exciting to have an impact."

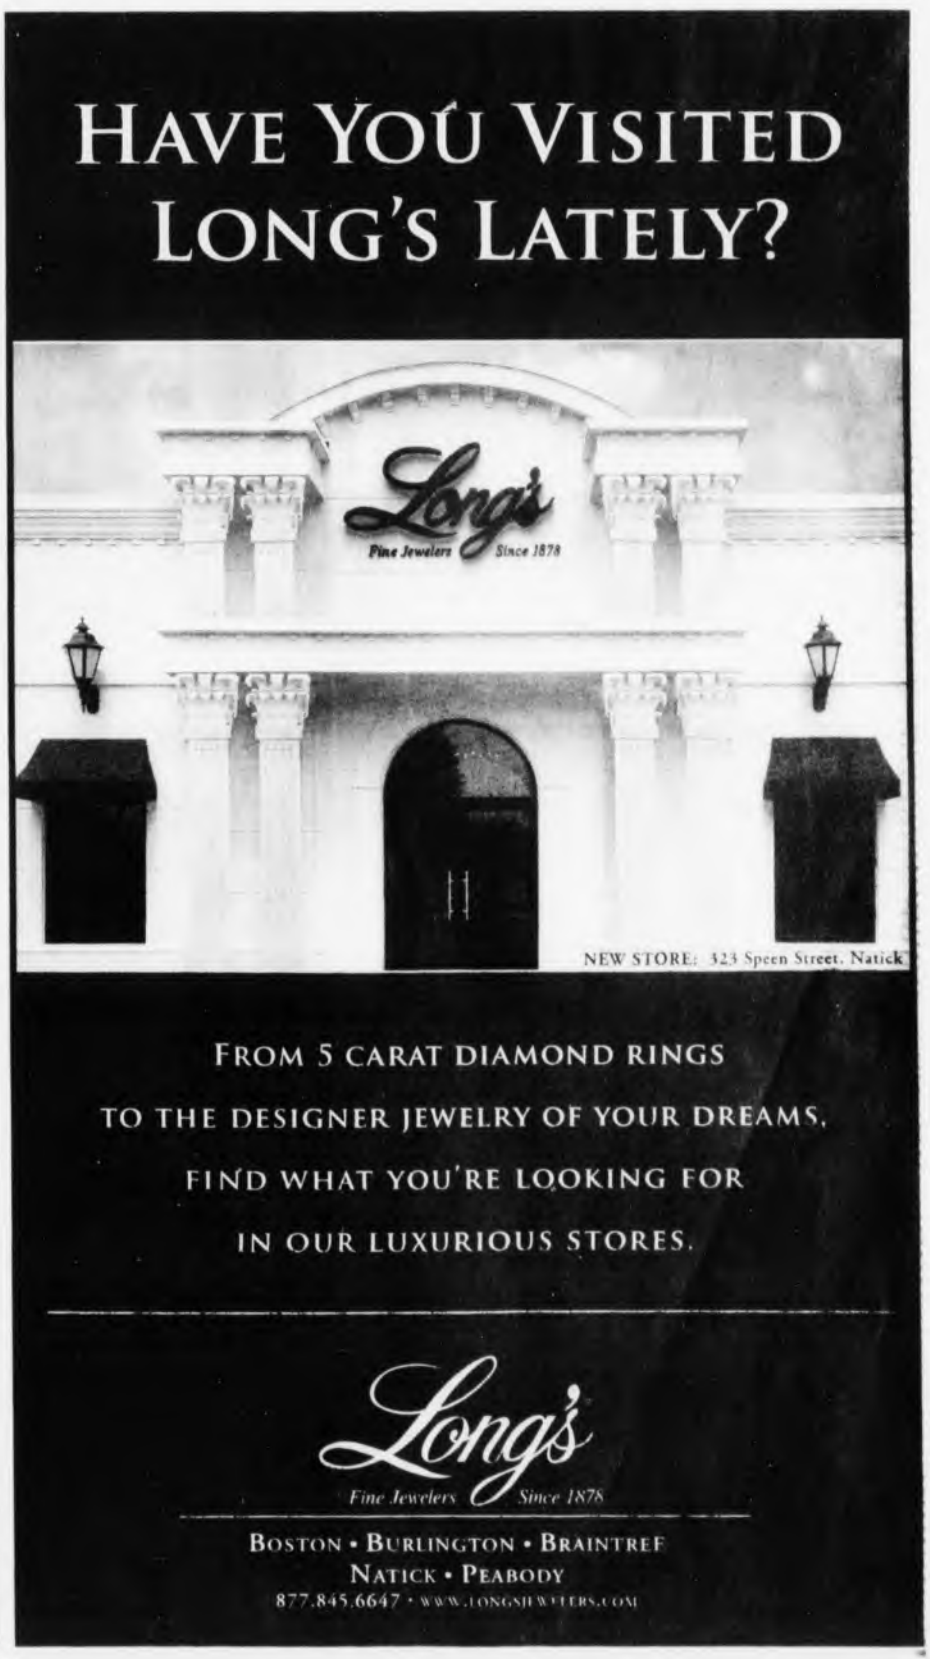
Some of the more memorable comments were about how "Millennium Girl" was really in a language teens and pre-teens could relate to, "That's the highest praise."

Writing is a part of Thompson's life in more ways than one. She's been writing since she could read and even before that she and her father would make up stories at bedtime, says Thompson's mother, Sue Thompson.

In addition to novel writing she works on poetry and songwriting. She plays a little guitar, but says she isn't yet adept to write music to go along with her lyrics. At college, she has written a few articles for the college newspaper. But, one type of writing she's never gravitated to is the short story, preferring to focus on character development and dialogue the length of novel writing allows.



At Gordon, her chosen major is communication arts partly because of the hands-on writing coursework, "I just want to dive in and write."



As for her next project, she's in the beginning stages of writing and developing a fantasy novel along the lines of the Chronicles of Narnia.

"I know I want to continue with Carolyn," says Thompson. She plans to see Carolyn, who finishes eighth grade in "Season," through high school, but for right now she is interested in writing in another genre.

While home from school on Christmas break, Thompson will be making the rounds to local bookstores to talk to readers and sign her new book. She will be at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset on Saturday, December 8 from 1 to 3 p.m. On Sunday, December 9 she's scheduled for Story Book Cove in Merchants Row in Hanover from 1 to 3 p.m.

"Season" is now available in the online bookstores of AuthorHouse.com, Barnes and Nobles, Borders and Amazon.

Garden Club to host holiday house tour

Community Garden Club of Cohasset will host "Christmas Memories," a holiday house tour, tea, and boutique from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 6. The tour will feature five beautiful Cohasset homes and the Cohasset Historical Society's Paul Pratt building. Each home has been selected for its beauty, charm, and distinctive architectural design.

"Christmas Memories" will begin at the Cohasset Historical Society where society staff members will use period furnishings and antiques to transform the Paul Pratt building into a Victorian Christmas. Garden club members will embellish the scene with fresh holiday greens and flowers.

The featured homes on the tour include: An antique sea captain's home dating back to the 18th century, which has been renovated, but retains its historic charm. Santa will have a hard time deciding what chimney to come down as there are four fireplaces which will be decorated using flowers, fruits, and fresh greens in classic arrangements to complement the home's antique architectural details; a cape-style colonial home with an open floor enhanced by detail and craftsmanship. The guesthouse on the property will also be decorated in a seaside motif; A newly built shingle-style home with sweeping views of the marshes and Little Harbor, reminiscent of the shingle-style manors of the past that dotted the east coast; a new shingle-style house with an old-fashioned beach house feel. Natural materials abound and the decorations will echo the beauty of the sea, marshes, and woodlands that surround it; and lastly, a second empire-style home with elaborate and unique details throughout. Decorations will be used to create a seaside Victorian Christmas.

To add to the festive mood of the tour, the bells of Saint Stephen's will play carols and songs of the season and a holiday tea with light refreshments will be included in the ticket price.

To add to the festive mood of the tour, the bells of Saint Stephen's will play carols and songs of the season and a holiday tea with light refreshments will be included in the ticket price. For the Christmas shopper, Bates Hall will host a holiday boutique featuring wreaths, floral arrangements, and a wide variety of hand crafted gifts and decorative holiday items made by club members and local artisans.

The tour will be held rain or shine and is suitable for adults only. Tickets cost $20 in advance and $25 on the day of the tour. Tickets are limited and can be purchased at Windsor Tea Shop, 1 Pleasant St., Cohasset; Buttonwood Books and Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Cohasset; Flemings of Cohasset Village, 24 Elm St., Cohasset; Darilynn's 64 South Main St., Cohasset; The Welch Company, 146 Front St., Scituate; Talbots 164 North St., Hingham; Johannah's 106 North St., Hingham; The Shoe Market, Derby St. Shoppes, Hingham; and Stonehouse Gardens, Main St. Norwell.

Tickets may also be purchased on the day of the tour at the Second Congregational Church. Proceeds from the house tour help fund the many programs and projects of the club, which include civic beautification, scholarships, and educational programs. Community Garden Club of Cohasset is a member of the National Garden Clubs, Inc. and the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc. From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

This gracious hostess is preparing to entertain guests in her 1903 Victorian home located at 106 South Main St., Cohasset. Her lovely house has been decorated for Christmas by the Historical Society in collaboration with the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. While her young children are at play in the nursery, guests mingle in the dining room and parlor. A woman's boudoir and man's study complete the exhibit. Objects carefully selected from the Society's collection beautifully decorate these rooms for the holidays.

Be sure to join the Community Garden Club's House Tour on Thursday, Dec. 6 to see this display as well as the other houses on tour that day. Tickets can be purchased from several local merchants and a gingerbread house made by Ginger Betty's of Quincy will be raffled at the Historical Society for $1 per chance.

From the Archives is a weekly feature provided by Cohasset Historical Society.

The Cohasset Historical Society welcomes donations. If you have something that you would consider donating to our archives please give us a call at 781-383-1434.

BRIEFLY

Caroling on the Common

Hey there, songsters. Here's a holiday treat for young and old. Once again, Cohasset's First Parish Church is sponsoring a well-loved Cohasset tradition – Caroling on the Common – on Saturday, Dec. 15.

Everyone is welcome to this community event for young and old, especially families with school-age children. Exceptional singing voices are not required; carols will be familiar and simple. Because it gets dark quickly, participants are asked to bring flashlights.

Carolers will leave from the Parish House at 4 p.m. As in the past, carolers will serenade a few homes on the Common, but this year most of our singing will be done around the duck pond – as weather permits. At approximately 4:45 p.m., everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies. Cookie donations would be appreciated.

Everyone is asked to bring a pair of socks – or two or three – which will be donated to Boston Health Care for the Homeless. Socks should be white cotton; both men's and women's sizes are welcome.

Come join friends for an old-fashioned holiday get-together, and pass the word. The more the merrier! For more information, call Sandy Bailey at 383-1100 or Woody Chittick at 383-3215.

Historical Society to host Wassail Party

Cohasset Historical Society will celebrate the holiday season with its annual Wassail Party from 2 to 4 p.m., on Sunday Dec. 9. An invitation is extended to members, guests and the public to join in the festivities at the Pratt Building, 105 South Main St. Refreshments, beverages and the traditional Wassail will be served, and musical entertainment will add to the occasion.

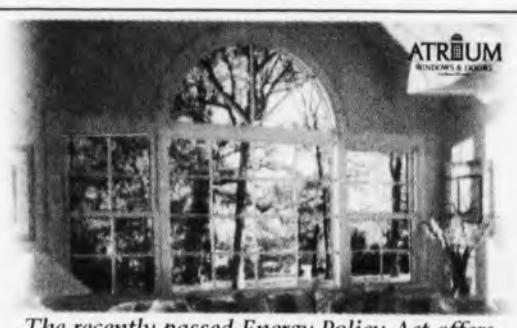
The Pratt Building will be decorated for the season as part of the Community Garden Club's Holiday House Tour with vignettes representing the Victorian era.

Rusty Skippers Holiday Concert

Rusty Skippers, Cohasset's own community concert band, will perform the annual Holiday Pops Concert at First Parish Church, Cohasset, at 11:15 a.m., on Saturday, Dec. 1. The Skippers will be playing a variety of holiday pieces including "Sleigh Ride," made famous by the Boston Pops, a selection from Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite," "Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree" and many other familiar tunes and carols in all styles. The concert will also feature a special guest, vocalist Lily Sestito. The concert is free and appropriate for all ages. A freewill cash offering for Cohasset Food Pantry will be taken.

Rusty Skippers formed in 1995 as part of the Cohasset Harborfest at the suggestion of the late Rev. Ed Atkinson of First Parish in Cohasset. Rusty Skippers play under the direction of Steve Biagini, the instrumental music teacher at Deer Hill School. After the December concert schedule is completed, the band will reconvene in March to prepare selections for appearances including the South Shore Festival of the Arts, American Cancer Society Relay for Life, Cohasset Memorial Day Parade and various nursing homes and concert series.

Rusty Skippers Band has openings in some instrumental sections. Anyone interested in joining or booking the band, can call Biagini at Deer Hill School at 781-383-6115, ext. 155, or email sbiagini@cohassetk12.org.



Holiday party

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee will host its annual holiday party from 4 to 7 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 2, at Bancroft Hall Lightkeepers Residence, Cohasset Harbor. The cost is $20 per person and $30 per couple. There will be a cash bar.

To register call Julie Guild at 781-383-6443, Polly Logan at 781-383-0031, or Kevin O'Donnell at 781-383-6118. Make checks payable to The Cohasset Republican Town Committee, Julie Guild, 363 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Contributions help fund Republican Candidates and Annual Scholarships for college bound high school seniors. Participants are asked to bring canned goods for the Cohasset Food Pantry.

Second Congregational Church debuts cookbook

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Celebrations and good food usually go hand in hand. As a testament to that fact, members of the Second Congregational Church have put together a cookbook with 418 recipes to complement each of the celebrations that go along with each season.

"Festivals and Festivities" offers recipes for appetizers, main dishes, vegetables, soups and desserts. The title came from the series of festivals the church is involved in each year: in the spring there is the Quilt Show and luncheon, in the early summer the Strawberry Festival coinciding with the Arts Festival, and this Saturday, December 1 is the annual Village Fair.

"Everything we do revolves around food," says co-chair Annette Sawchuk, which made the cookbook the perfect fit. Hot off the presses, the cookbook will be available for sale at Saturday's Village Fair.

However, the initial idea for a cookbook was born out annual requests for the dessert recipes at the quilt show and luncheon. The dessert menu boasts several items, each as equally appetizing as the next: lemon soufflé, apple pie, crème de menthe soufflé, chocolate mousse cake and carrot cake.

Last winter, a group of ladies at the Second Congregational Church decided to begin the process of putting together a cookbook, says Sawchuk. Although a committee of eight did much of the organizing and executing of the cookbook, all members of the congregation were encouraged to submit their family's favorite recipes.

Amazingly, Sawchuk says, the recipes came in were evenly distributed across the type of entrée, from appetizers to desserts, as well as a cross section of regional favorites often reflecting the background of the person whose name appears along with the recipe.

The committee has spent the better part of this year pulling together hundreds of recipes—and testing almost all of them.

"The great thing about the meetings were we ate," says Debbie Anderson, who organized the winter recipes, "we had a lot of fun together."

At the start of the project the group met monthly, but beginning in May they met almost on a weekly basis. Each meeting brought a new selection of recipes and tastes to the table.

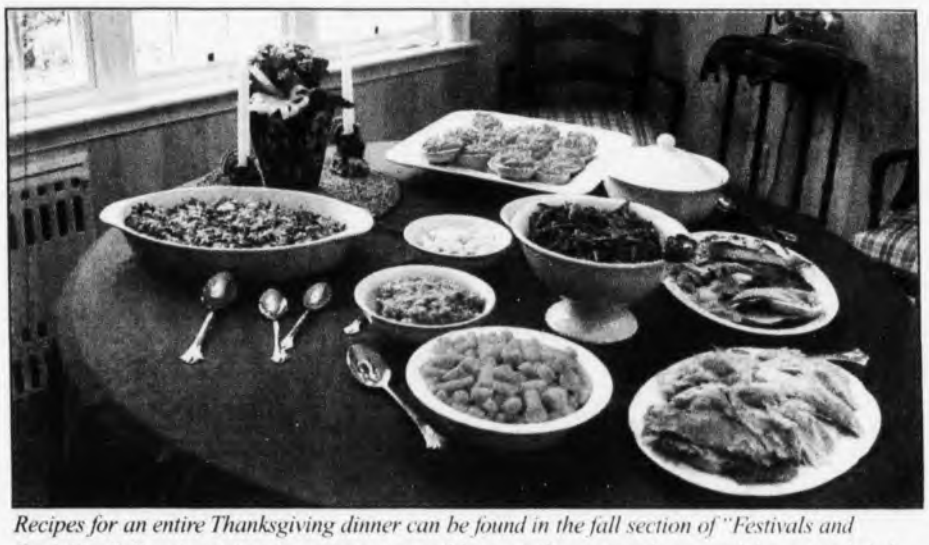
"We tested every recipe but not for taste, we wanted to make sure the recipes were fundamentally sound," says Sawchuk. Specifically, cooking times, directions clarity, oven temperatures, and correct ingredient ratios were checked for accuracy.

The cookbook's recipes are divided according to the most appropriate season. The much sought after Quilt Show luncheon dessert recipes appear in the spring section as well as recipes for an Easter ham dinner. The summer section contains recipes for a barbeques, salads and ice cream desserts. Favorites like pumpkin and pecan pie are included in the fall section. The winter portion includes recipes for hearty soups and homemade candies.

Each season contains a complete dinner party menu to make entertaining in any season simple. Peter Logan of Cohasset Liquors got them in touch with Len Presutti, a representative from Martignetti Liquors, who expertly paired the dinner menus up with a bottle of wine. A wine dinner was held in the spring where over 40 recipes were tested and tasted.

For example, the winter dinner menu includes hot crab dip, almond stuffed dates and cream of mushroom soup as appetizers, with the main course including Portuguese roast pork loin, wild rice casserole, broccoli rabe with pancetta and olives. For dessert, the recipes include red velvet cake and cheesecake.

The cookbook will be for sale at the Village Fair on Saturday, Dec. 2 and at Carmela Drew Fine Foods at 39 S. Main Street after that for $18. All proceeds from the cookbook will go into the Second Congregational Church's general fund.



At the Village Fair the church will be offering samples of five different candies featured in the cookbook: peppermint bark, toffee crunch, pistachio bark, popcorn nut crunch and chocolate fudge. About 25 other desserts and baked goods whose recipes appear in the cookbook will be available for sale.

"People can try the recipe before buying the cookbook," says Sawchuk.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Dozens of recipes for appetizers appear in "Festivals and Festivities," a collection of family favorites from members of the Second Congregational Church. Annette Sawchuk, co-chair of the cookbook committee, checks out the fig and walnut tapenade and holiday spread.

Recipes for an entire Thanksgiving dinner can be found in the fall section of "Festivals and Festivities." Sweet potatoes in orange cups, wild rice stuffing, green beans with bacon and shallots, glazed carrots, sangria cranberries, roasted turkey, make ahead turkey gravy and buttered parsnips grace the table.

Village Fair on Cohasset Common

This Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10a.m. to 3p.m. the common will be outfitted for holiday cheer. Four churches are involved in the festivities and many of the proceeds from the event will benefit local charities.

"The Village Fair is special because it brings together people in the community from different faith traditions. Something about that speaks of the spirit of Christmas in a unique way," said Colette Wood, interim assitant at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

"What is also nice this year is that organizations like the Appalachia Service Project and Wellspring will benefit from the fair, so in a way it helps people nearby and far away. Most of the churches also use the proceeds from their fair for outreach project that their church supports."

At the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church on the common they will be having a ReUUsable sale with jewelry, small furniture items, toys and Wellspring Silver star Christmas ornaments. Gingerbread Fantasia, a gingerbread cookie decorating table will be set up for the young and old.

First Parish will host the Rusty Skippers Holiday Pops Concert in the Meeting House at 11a.m. The concert is free and for all ages. Donations will be taken for the Cohasset Food Pantry.

The Nativity of the Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox Church will have Greek pastries and wreathes will be for sale in the Town Hall auditorium.

A holiday boutique and clam chowder bar will be in set up at the Second Congregational Church next to the Town Hall. Handmade gifts, decorations and stocking stuffers will be among the offerings.

St. Stephen's Church will have a Children's "Secret Room" where kids can purchase and wrap gift "in secret" from their parents and other loved ones. Appalachia Service Project volunteers will be on hand to help the children. A book sale, bake shop and country store will have goodies for the holidays as well.

Jolly old Santa Claus will stop by from 11a.m. to 2p.m. on the Common. Proceeds from photos with Santa will go toward the Appalachia Service Project.

Spirit of giving

GIFTS of HOPE
YOUR COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER CARES

This is the season for giving thanks — and for giving, as well.

Again this year we ask you, our readers, to help us in our efforts to assist those local organizations helping those on the South Shore.

"We've always tried to partner with local groups to help lessen the burden for some of our most needy in the communities," said Mark Skala, editor in chief for CNC/South. "It seems every year over the past several years the demand for help continues to rise. Our goal, in some small way, is to bring attention to the good work of so many dedicated volunteers and in the process serve as a means to generate needed funds."

Readers have a long history of helping others through the Gifts of Hope campaign. The first years of the program focused on the issue of homelessness on the South Shore. Organizations such as Fr. Bill's Place, South Shore Friends and Carolina Hill in Marshfield benefited from readers' generosity.

In 2003 CNC's Gifts of Hope campaign shifted efforts to assist the South Shore Women's Center, an organization dedicated to helping victims of domestic violence.

In 2004 the newspaper group turned its attention to local military support groups as the war in Iraq and Afghanistan escalated, supporting organizations such as the Pembroke Military Support Group; Care Packs of Weymouth; and the Quincy based operations of the National Guard's Family Readiness Groups.

In 2005 and 2006 we partnered with Project Bread and many of the local food pantries to address the issue of hunger.

Each year readers have donate between $5,000 and $8,000 to help those in need and we hope for a similar response this year as local organizations will need support more than ever.

Here at the Cohasset Mariner we have designated three local organizations: Wellspring Multi-Service Center, the Hingham/Hull Chapter of Womanade and the Social Service League of Cohasset, each of which will be featured in a story over the next three weeks.

While each group is based in different towns, Wellspring in Hull and Hingham, the Hingham/Hull Womanade Chapter in Hingham and Hull, and the Social Service League of Cohasset, in Cohasset – the warm, welcoming arms of these organizations reach beyond their individual town borders.

At the Mariner, we know we are in a unique position to tell the local stories and encourage our readers to support the organizations that benefit from that spirit of giving.

Here's how the campaign works. Each week over the course of the holiday season the paper will be running advertisements encouraging support for the charitable organizations. Readers will also see printed a weekly tally of donors. We'll also be featuring stories each week that focus on the work of the charity and the people it helps.

The people you will be helping are not strangers, but people you likely know. It is the family of the child sitting next to your own in school; it is the mother and daughter in the pew behind you in church; or maybe that friendly elderly couple who use to live in your neighborhood.

When you sit down with pen in hand this week to check your grocery list, or your Christmas list, please consider making a donation that is a gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way.

Please join The Cohasset Mariner in supporting three charities: Wellspring, Womanade, and the Social Service League in their efforts to help those in need this holiday season.

Please make your tax-deductible check or money order payable to: Wellspring, Womanade, or the Social Service League:

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Spilled milk' at staging area

TO THE EDITOR:

When my daughters spill milk at our house, we "clean (it) up using standard procedures for such events and the site return(s) to normal operation" – as John Beck soothes in his Weekly Sewer Report. When 15 gallons of hydraulic fluid spilled along Jerusalem Road and onto the staging area at 194 Jerusalem last week, "standard procedure for such events" required Cyn Environmental Emergency Services, the captain and members of the Cohasset Fire and Police departments and the Department of Environmental Protection to perform hazardous site operations. Cyn, CFD, CPD and the DEP had to make certain that the toxic hydraulic fluid did not leak into the storm drains across the street leading into Little Harbor we are trying to clean up, that the hydraulic fluid was completely cleaned and removed, that the hydraulic fluid did not get into residents' drinking water, that the hydraulic fluid did not contaminate land at White's organic farm and that the hydraulic fuel spill did not impact any of the many residents and children who live adjacent to the site.

The heavy truck and equipment warehousing/staging area on Jerusalem Road is in a residential neighborhood. The neighborhood is not zoned for warehousing or staging. The staging area should not be here and we should not be dealing with Cyn and toxic spills near our children and our homes. Abutting neighbors were not notified or given the opportunity to be heard before the staging area was summarily planted in a residential neighborhood. The landowners of 194 Jerusalem, Leland and Leonora Jenkins, rented their property to the contractor, LM Holdings, LLC – the Town of Cohasset is not a party to the lease. The town is not operating the site according to town bylaws and LM Holdings signage at the site. Assuming for argument sake, that the town is actually operating the site – why then, was the location lease never put to an open bid as required by law for town contracts, or better yet, placed at least cost, on town owned commercially zoned land appropriate for site use? The town cannot have it both ways.

Did you get a good deal? We are being told not to cry over spilled milk. I teach my daughters to be responsible for their slips and to clean up their spills.

Paula L. Becker
185 Jerusalem Road

Delay will add to costs

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset is uniquely blessed not only by its physical attributes, but more importantly by the plethora of citizens and citizen organizations that seek to enhance the quality of their neighbors lives and of our natural and man-made environment. For a few examples: our active churches, the Community Center, the Sailing Club, the Appalachian Service Project, the Historical Society, the Center for Coastal Research, the Scouts, the garden clubs, Meals-on Wheels, Fish. There are numerous other organizations and activities that demonstrate the good-hearted public-spiritedness of individuals whose mission is to be constructive.

On the other end of the scale, we have some, fortunately few, whose impact is negative. For example, the small cluster of self-centered individuals whining about the staging area for the Little Harbor Water and Sewer Project. With the help of a lawyer, they seek to have the permit for the staging area nullified, heedless that the long-awaited project could be delayed at considerable cost and inconvenience to their fellow townspeople.

Incredibly, and naively, they think the extra cost will be absorbed by "the town" or its contractor, not by their neighbors and other taxpayers.

Even more incredibly, (or perhaps shamefully is a better word), the Planning Board took an equally unrealistic and irresponsible position on the matter. Hopefully, on Dec. 11 the ZBA will leaven their decision with common sense.

Some people enjoy a fulfilling life because they unselfishly add something constructive to the lives of others; others are perennially unhappy – because they don't. Pity them!

HEALTH NOTES

Hearing loss not all that disquieting

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A consensus seems to be that the two major threats to hearing is continued exposure to loud noises and old age.

The world around us has become a noisier place. Despite the recent modification of aircraft flight paths over Cohasset through several years of dedicated work by a Town committee, one noise source is being replaced by others such as cars, construction and the train. Let's face it, we live in noisy times. Disturbing from a health standpoint is the occasional car passing from which the sound of a sub whoofer may be heard. Losing ones ability to hear, particularly at a younger age is not particularly disquieting for those to whom it's happening. All activity starts to lessen each year starting shortly after birth. Which of us could, or would want to, replicate the activity of a four year old? It's just that we don't notice the change. Hearing is much the same following a pattern of degradation with beginnings, depending on one's expe-

Crazy driver skirts school bus

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

The saga of Cohasset drivers continues – One of the school bus drivers reported observing an interesting maneuver the other day. As you may know, it is the law that all school busss must stop at all railroad crossings, open their doors and look both ways down the tracks, before they can proceed across the tracks. While this bus driver was in the process of executing this safety maneuver, an impatient driver went around them on the other side of the road and crossed the tracks. Talk about crazy! We constantly hear citizen comments about waiting for a serious accident to initiate the resumption of the horn blowing. With drivers like this, we won't have to wait long. But the sad thing is that as long as drivers are this cavalier, horns won't do any good anyway.

Greenbush happenings – Last Sunday night, when the last train passed the Sestito Lane private crossing at 11:54 p.m. the crossing gates worked as they should, without a problem. That is, until the train passed by. Unfortunately, the gates went back to their upright position, but the bells and lights stayed on. Needless to say, this did not delight the abutters. They promptly called the Cohasset Police Department, which is the easiest and proper thing to do whenever someone sees any apparent railroad equipment malfunction. The Police promptly called the MBTA Central Dispatch to inform them of the problem. The MBTA dispatched a work crew to the site and had the problem corrected by 4:22 a.m.

Now, there are two separate things we'd like you to know about this situation. First, whenever a problem is reported to MBTA Central Dispatch, the railroad crossing involved in the problem is placed under Manual Control. Manual Control means that a train cannot go through that crossing unless railroad personnel are at the crossing to assure safety of vehicles, pedestrians, and yes, the trains, too. Central Dispatch immediately notifies the train that it is under Manual Control in the problem area. In this particular instance, no trains were due until service resumed in the a.m., so the MBTA had time to get a crew out and fix the problem before service resumed. But, had this occurred during normal service hours here's what might have happened for any crossing under Manual Control. The train will approach the crossing and stop. The conductor will leave the train and act as a flagman to stop the traffic before the train can continue across the road. Then the conductor would reboard the train and it can continue on its way. In lieu of the conductor leaving the train, the MBTA can also dispatch a flagman who has the responsibility to regulate the vehicular and pedestrian traffic and the trains. Under Manual Control, the train must still come to a complete stop and can only proceed when the flagman signals it is safe to proceed. The moral here is: If you see a problem report it promptly. And, after the trouble is reported the Manual Control procedures assure safety at the crossings.

The Beechwood sidewalk has received its base coat of asphalt and part of its topcoat.

Sunday night, the gates at the Sesito Lane crossing went up but the bells and lights stayed on.

The second thing to be determined from this incident is what really happened and was safety compromised? The gate system as designed for the Greenbush is a failsafe system. That is, if a component fails to operate properly, the balance of the systems falls back into a "safe" mode. In this particular case, there is a sensor that senses that the gate is in the "up" position. This sensor tells the control system that the gates are "up" and the crossing is in a safe condition for traffic to flow. In this past Sunday instance, the sensor was misadjusted or faulty, so the control system never received the "gate is in the up position" signal. Consequently, the bells and lights continued to flash, even though the gate was physically "up." As you have read here and in other articles about crossings, if the bells are ringing and the lights are flashing, stay off of the tracks.

In summary, between the "fail safe" design along with the use of the Manual Control procedures, the integrity of the safety system is maintained.

Sidewalk grading along King Street is progressing rapidly.

Sidewalk, sidewalk and more sidewalk – The Beechwood sidewalk has received its base coat of asphalt and part of its top coat. After the topcoat is completed the only remaining work is a protective handrail on the N. Main Street side of the tracks against the drop off at the wetland. We have let the contract to have the fence fabricated and it should be installed as soon as the fabrication is complete. By the way, the Water Department has been grinding and repaving on either side of the tracks so there has been a lot of construction activity on Beechwood Street this week.

Meanwhile, the Lower King Street sidewalk is really kicking into high gear. Grading is underway as we write this and it is possible that the base asphalt coat, weather permitting, may be started this week, as well. Since the area where this sidewalk is being constructed is relatively wide open as compared with the Beechwood area, the King Street construction has progressed quite rapidly. Down near the Route 3A end of the sidewalk the path intrudes into a small wetland area. This wetland is a part of the Bancroft Bird Sanctuary and is on the back side of Sanctuary Pond. The Town has agreed to do a wetland replication alongside the sidewalk in a nearby wetland area to compensate for our construction. The excavation will be done shortly with any planting taking place next spring. The Cohasset Conservation Commission approved this reconstruction late this past summer.

A Cohasset Christmas

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

It was ten-thirty-seven on Christmas Eve night,
And Cohasset's good children were all tucked in tight.
The village was silent, the harbor was dark,
No wave splashed the sea wall and no collies barked.

The tree on the common shone bright as a flame,
Putting even the old Minot Lighthouse to shame.
Each window in each sturdy home was a frame,
For a single white candle accenting each pane.

Through one of these windows, behind the light's glow,
A bunk could be seen with another below.
The people asleep in this snug bottom bed,
Were a six-year-old girl and a doll with a sled.

Now a sled and a doll can be sharp on the back,
But the tired girl slept till she felt the toy crack.
She opened her eyes, lay the doll on the floor,
And tilted her head toward the half-open door.

A little tree stood out of sight down the hall,
But its presence was known by the light on the wall,
Blinking red, and then green, and then nothing at all,
Such a comfort it was while to sleep she would fall.

Did she hear a soft tap on the window? She did.
It was snowing! Like sugar from heaven to kids.
She jumped from the bed and looked out at the yard,
But what caught her eye first was the sky, which was starred.
Not a cloud blocked the moon or the planets beyond,
Yet a blanket of snow covered fields, hills, and ponds.

Now the boy in the top bunk behind the girl stirred,
And the black cat ensconced in his left arm pit purred,
But before his young sister could utter a word,
An event unlike any she'd witnessed occurred.

Down the road toward her house galloped eight little deer
Who were towing a sleigh driven hard from the rear.
She could hear the man yip at them as they flew near,
Their momentum so wild he was fighting to steer.
It was then, as they shot through her yard like a spear,
That his plan to collide with her house became clear.

For he bore down upon her not slowing a lick.
Then he lifted the reins, simply gave them a flick,
And the deer nimbly ran up the kitchen's north side,
Pulling driver and sleigh to the roof in one glide.

The effect wasn't quiet. The house was still quaking.
She wondered how anyone slept through this shaking.
But brother and cat were still soundly asleep,
As if sleigh landings made not so much as a peep.

She dashed to the hallway and ran down the stair,
Nearly tripped on a fruit cake but she didn't care,
A team of eight deer and a sleigh on your roof
Is a sight you don't see every day—that's the truth.

She was throwing her boots on and grabbing her hat,
When a light in the room where the Christmas tree sat
Cast a flickering eerie blue glow on the wall,
So she quietly tiptoed back down the front hall,
And peeked into the room with the fireplace and tree.
What she saw was a red-suited man on TV.

He was standing on top of a house, near a sleigh.
He adjusted and tuned an antenna array.
Then from out of a sack he pulled presents and candy,
And appeared to be setting them where they'd be handy.

Now leaving behind all the toys, sleigh, and team,
He squeezed into the camera and out of the screen.

The girl stood in shock as he crashed to the floor
And then rolled to his feet as if ready for more.
When he noticed he wasn't alone there he smiled,
"Did my tromping around on your roof wake you, child?"

She was too shy to speak, so he did all the talking.
"The first thing I do is I fill up each stocking."
He walked to the TV, poked both his arms through,
Pulled a gift from the roof and a popcorn ball too.

As Santa Claus worked, the girl saw through the snow
That the neighbors' new den had the same bluish glow.
Down the whole street, in fact, televisions were going,
With the same rooftop scene that her TV was showing.

And the same Santa placing gifts under her tree,
The same one eating cookies and drinking hot tea
Was at that moment setting up trains at her cousin's.
Every house had its Santa. There must have been dozens.

Santa said to her as he prepared now to leave,
"I am only one man, and there's one Christmas Eve.
I can't visit your house and then all of the rest.
It would take me five lifetimes; your mom will attest.
So I broadcast myself like a live tennis match.
I can visit a million and five in a batch!"

As he climbed through the TV and onto the snow
There was one puzzling thing the girl needed to know.

"But how are the presents all different?" she said.
"Remember," he answered while settling the sled,
"We can watch the same show, hear the same song or book,
But you don't take away the same things that I took."

Then her TV went dark—all the other ones too.
And she ran to the window to see what they'd do.
Santa yipped at his team, they ran straight down the shingling,
Took off on a run with the sleigh bells ajingling,
Careened through the woods and were soon out of sight.
And the girl didn't sleep for the rest of the night.

Christmas in the 21st century

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I wonder how many kids write to Santa Claus anymore.

I used to do it but I can't recall Santa ever bringing me any of the exotic things I asked him for. "Maybe he ran out of electric trains," my father used to say. Besides, although I was too excited to realize it, we didn't have electricity on the farm on Lombard Road in the wilds of Hubbardston.

I went out to the old homestead a couple of years ago. There are houses every hundred feet or so on Lombard Road and Hubbardston has become a bedroom suburb for commuters to Worcester, Gardner and Fitchburg. And they've had electricity for as long as the oldest current inhabitant can recall.

But I digress . . .

I thought about my letters to Santa Claus the other day when I learned that the U. S. Postal Service isn't delivering them anymore. Or rather, the mailman won't drop them off at the Old Gentleman's workshop at the North Pole until he has run them past his attorney. Operation Santa has collided with the trial lawyers.

I thought about my letters to Santa Claus the other day when I learned that the U. S. Postal Service isn't delivering them anymore.

Since 1912, the Post Office has passed many of Santa's letters on to charitable groups who investigate them and answer the requests of the needy among them. But this year it won't be that easy.

In order to get the letters, volunteers will have to show a photo ID and sign a waiver releasing the Post Office from "all causes of action, claims, liens, rights or interests of any kind or type whatsoever." No, the mailman hasn't been sued but in times like these, who's waiting?

Sue Brennan, spokeswoman for the Postal Service, told USA Today, the change was made "to protect the children and to protect the integrity of the program and the Postal Service. We were giving out information about these kids to people we didn't know."

The Post Office isn't the only purveyor of Christmas cheer to needy youngsters that has bumped up against the safety concerns of the 21st century. Would you believe that the U. S. Marine Corps is getting nervous over its highly successful Toys for Tots program?

For years, the Marines have collected millions of new and unopened boxes of toys each year for distribution to needy children. But the recent recall of millions of toys, mostly from Red China, that contain lead paint or loose magnets that could choke a child, has complicated even the donation of new toys.

The Marines have asked those who plan to donate to check and see if their toy has been recalled before they buy it and the Toys for Tots Foundation will check the serial numbers before giving them out. All of which will probably mean fewer toys for the kids who need them the most.

"We need toys for children desperately," said Stephanie Tocchi, coordinator for the Foundation's Massachusetts chapter, "but what we don't want to do is raise doubts in parents' minds. People should not be afraid of any toys they get from us because we've already screened them."

And I'm still waiting for Santa to bring those electric trains now that we've got electricity.

Register to vote for Presidential Primary

The Governor signed legislation on Monday, Nov. 26, to move the date of the Presidential Primary to Tuesday, Feb. 5, 2008. The last day to register to vote will be Wednesday, Jan. 16. Registration will take place at the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a Town Meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If people move, they may register to vote as soon as they move into a new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each Town Meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If people register during a closed period, they will be eligible to vote only in later Town Meetings or elections.

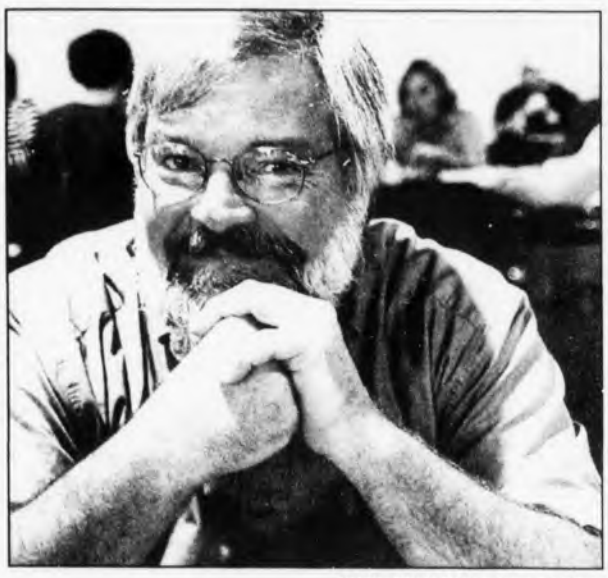
'Mr. Mag' packs his bags

By Anna Haggerty
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Editor's note: this was published in the Thanksgiving issue of the CHS Spinnaker.



For the past 25 years, Mr. Magnussen has been a favorite teacher of the CHS student body. As his teaching career winds down, students wave farewell to one of the most valuable teachers in the Cohasset Public Schools. Not only is this school losing its science department head, but also a caring and amiable person. Every day students are intrigued by the amount of information Mr. Magnussen has to share. His classes consist of a balance of knowledgeable lectures and hands on experiences that create an enjoyable learning environment.

Having grown up in Holbrook, Mr. Magnussen was fortunate enough to live next to about 400 acres of woods where he could spend most of his time outdoors and learn to love the scientific aspects of life. Mr. Mag did not own a television until he was 10 or 12 years old and said, "I never missed it so I spent a lot of time in the woods," where he spent the majority of his time exploring the nature surrounding him. As far as education, Mr. Magnussen has an undergraduate degree in Biology and Psychology from Bates College and a Master's Degree from Harvard University.

Students have been known to thrive on his wide range of knowledge, and everyday walk out of class with insightful information. Determined to fully prepare his students for college, Mr. Mag is known for teaching techniques that are conducive to success. For example, when most students think of Mr. Magnussen, one of the first things that come to mind is the acronym RHUC: Read, Highlight, Underline, and Circle. Having mastered this skill, students can pick out the necessary information within a chapter, which helps them when it comes time to study later on.

Mr. Magnussen is also known for having an active classroom. Students often find themselves doing hands-on activities where they can explore the material beyond what the textbook provides. As Mr. Magnussen preaches, "Science is a verb; you have to go do things." Students enjoy his many field trips where they can expand their knowledge to an even greater extent. In the past, he has even led groups to Belize and Costa Rica, allowing students to "see an environment they've never seen before."

Mr. Magnussen shared that his favorite thing in Belize was the coral reef and, "The two most enjoyable things in Costa Rica were watching leatherback turtles lay their eggs at midnight on a beach in a full moon and seven miles of zip lines" in the rainforest. Mr. Leary, a good friend and former CHS English teacher, states, "I was always fascinated by the Belize parasites crawling out of his skin. On a serious side, I consider him a consummate professional who always put his students first."

Mr. Magnussen is going to be missed by his students. This is the first in an occasional series by the Spinnaker about teachers who will be retiring this spring.

Having grown up in Holbrook, Mr. Magnussen was fortunate enough to live next to about 400 acres of woods where he could spend most of his time outdoors and learn to love the scientific aspects of life.

Mr. Magnussen reports that embarrassing moments occur all the time while teaching. However, one particular moment stands out in his mind. Mr. Mag first started teaching when he was 23 years old in a small town in Maine. At 8 a.m. on the first day of school, he began his classes teaching the seventh grade. At 10 a.m., there was a knock on his door. It was the principal telling him he needed to speak to him immediately in his office. He was brought into the office, which overlooked the courtyard. Directly opposite, stood Mr. Magnussen's room with the window open. Although it was only the third of September, to Mr. Mag's amazement, the courtyard was covered in white. As he looked closer, he could see that the white was really hundreds of paper airplanes that had been flown out of his window while his back was turned to the class.

Since then, Mr. Magnussen hasn't been so easily fooled. Although there have been several embarrassing moments, Mr. Mag has enjoyed his many teaching experiences. As he heads for retirement, Mr. Magnussen will miss the ability to talk to students about his love of science. He states, "I will miss that opportunity to interact with kids and to be with them when they're learning things."

As far as plans for retirement, nothing is set. However, he intends to do a decent amount of traveling and in a few years he plans to move up north to Maine where he can enjoy activities such as fishing and bird watching.

After he leaves, the halls of CHS will greatly miss Mr. Magnussen's presence. Science department colleague, Dr. Thomae, describes Mr. Mag as a, "Warm, father figure to everyone. He looks like Santa Claus and is hilarious in a wet suit. I've never met anyone more dedicated to students and that's what teaching is all about." With that in mind, the faculty and students of CHS will certainly miss Mr. Magnussen and his many contributions to this school.

HEALTH NOTES

Hearing loss not all that disquieting

rience and environment, at a very young age but more after age 65. Of course, at an earlier time, few lived to that age, so hearing loss was seldom a major problem. Now, in more frenetic times, having a greater number of loud noises drowning out voice communications, and with more people living longer, loss of hearing and the incomplete understanding of spoken words is becoming more of a problem. Also, audiologists report an increasing number of younger persons with hearing problems.

Sound is measured using a unit called a decibel (dB). A plane overhead is about 130 dB a freight train or a food blender, about 90. A consensus seems to be that the two major threats to hearing is continued exposure to loud noises and old age. Most sources indicate damage to your ear starts at about 85 dB. Some car speakers can reach 100 dB; about the same as a motorcycle running alongside. It's generally acknowledged that cumulative exposure to such sounds is a major cause of hearing loss but for those lacking such exposure, the major culprit is growing older.

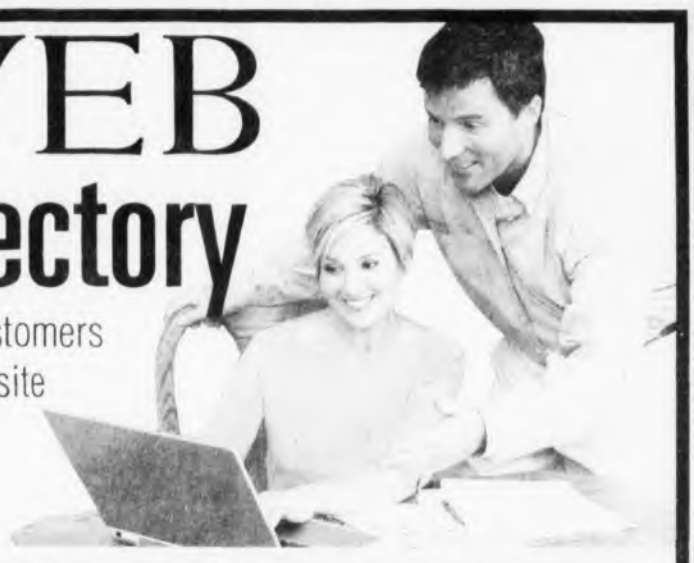
The inner ear has a set of tiny receptor hair cells of different length that pick up sound waves such as the ring of a doorbell or telephone, words being spoken or the honk of a car horn, and transform them into nerve impulses the brain then interprets. The combination of pitches or frequencies give different sounds their distinctive qualities. The brain also uses the source and direction of the sound and loudness as clues to decipher messages.

At about age 18 we slowly start an irreversible process in which we lose the smallest, more easily damaged cells. These make higher frequency sounds such as "s" and "th" more difficult to distinguish. Voices of women and children can be more difficult to understand. Others find loud noises and sounds especially distracting. Understanding consonant sounds in speech is dependent upon our ability to hear high frequency. Cells are also damaged by loud noises and sometimes medication such as gentamicin, an intravenous antibiotic typically used for severe infection; cisplatin, a chemotherapy agent; and some diuretic drugs, such as furosemide (Lasix).

Hearing loss generally becomes noticeable after age 50 and affects approximately one-third of people over age 65. By age 75 and older, 40 percent to 50 percent are affected. According to the National Institute of Health, about a third of US adults and about half 75 and older have some degree of hearing loss.

Without being aware of it, people may make small adjustments over time, for example, standing closer to someone who is speaking or turning up the TV volume that allow them to perceive the sounds and cues they otherwise would miss.

Hearing loss is just one of the parts of aging. To ensure it comes later than sooner, the following advice is useful: Limit the amount of noise that enters your ear. Maintain normal volume for music and other forms of entertainment. Protect your hearing by wearing earplugs in noisy environments, such as when mowing the lawn or using power equipment.



At some point, though, the loss may become too severe. Then it's time to consider a hearing aid; a process we can take up when we first receive the advice "Get a Hearing Aid!"

Federal and State regulations cover hearing aids and other devices used to prevent, diagnose, and treat hearing loss to rule out a medical problem and ensure that they are safe and effective. Most health insurance covers diagnosis and some treatment, but generally not the devices themselves. When hearing loss is suspected, visit a primary care doctor or an ear, nose and throat specialist to determine if any treatable conditions are contributing to hearing loss. An audiologist can confirm the loss and offer ways to improve communication, including behavior changes, the use of hearing aids, or both. Getting fitted for a hearing aid is an involved process consisting of a test, and consultation with a licensed hearing aid dispenser. The best advice about shopping for a hearing aid is do your homework. Also, remember, cell phones and hearing aids may not work well together because of electromagnetic interference. Ask your dispenser which hearing aid models are compatible with your mobile phone.

Local philanthropist being honored with Cantors' Concert

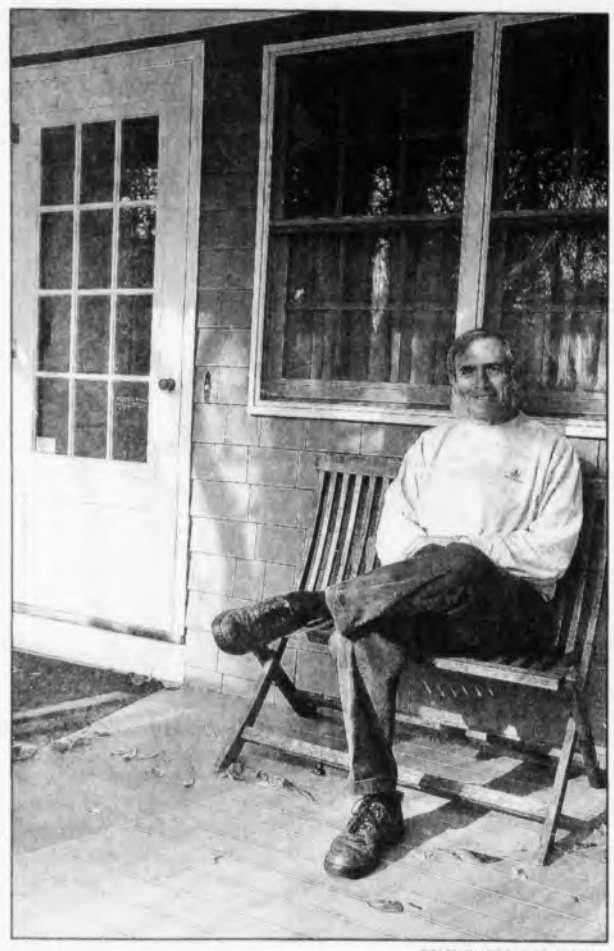
By Sara Mason Ader
CORRESPONDENT

When the Rev. Dr. Ray Hammond of Boston's Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church visits Hingham on Saturday night, he will lend his voice to a group of cantors from five states who are gathering at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom for a concert Dec. 8 honoring local philanthropist Herbert Morse.

Rev. Hammond won't be singing at the event titled "From Bimah to Broadway: A Cantors' Concert Honoring Herb Morse." Rather, he will speak about Morse's achievements on the boards of The Boston Foundation and the Salvation Army.

"He has been an exemplary member of the board of the Boston Foundation, the chairman of our audit committee, and a wonderful supporter of the Salvation Army. And that's just a sampling of the volunteer civic service he gives, " Rev. Hammond recently wrote in an email. "More than our working together, I've come to consider him a colleague and a friend."

As chairman of The Boston Foundation's board, Rev. Hammond is also involved in numerous community and charitable endeavors. Notably, he is the founder and chair of the Ten Point Coalition, a group of Christian clergy and lay leaders working to mobilize the greater Boston community around issues affecting black youth.



"It will be an honor to have Rev. Hammond participating," said Cantor Steven Weiss of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom. "We are very excited about the concert and the opportunity to recognize Herb Morse for all of the things he's done for the community. He really will have a lasting physical and cultural impact on the city of Boston for years to come."

Morse first moved to Hingham in 1970. He has been a longtime member and lay leader in many capacities at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom. He is currently spearheading the temple's five-year multimillion-dollar capital campaign.

Morse first moved to Hingham in 1970. He has been a longtime member and lay leader in many capacities at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom.

In 1995, Morse retired from his work in the business world after a 35-year career spent entirely with international accounting firm KPMG. In addition to serving on the company's board of directors, Morse was managing partner of KPMG's Boston and New York offices.

Retirement has allowed Morse to spend more time with his philanthropic work. About five years ago, he joined the board of the Boston Foundation at the request of the foundation's president Paul Grogan. Morse serves on the executive committee and participates in much of the financial and business work of the board. The Boston Foundation serves as the community organization for the Greater Boston area, awarding grants to nonprofits, partnering with other philanthropic organizations and serving as a hub for community resources and information.

Herb Morse is going to be honored at 8 p.m., on Saturday, Dec. 8 at a concert at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom for his work with Boston Foundation and the Salvation Army.

Another of Morse's major achievements was his effort leading the Salvation Army's committee to secure more than $80 million in grant money from Kroc Foundation in 2006 to build a 90,000 square-foot community center in the Uphams Corner section of Dorchester. With fundraising well underway for the remaining $20 million needed to complete the work, the project is on track to break ground next year and open to the public in 2009, Morse said.

Morse first joined the executive board of the Salvation Army in 1982. He said he had always had "soft spot" for the organization because his father was a Boston police officer who often spoke of how the Salvation Army was always willing to take in the poor or downtrodden.

"I was so impressed with the way they provide basic human services to people who are down and out," Morse said.

Morse has been involved with other organizations, including the United Way and Girl Scouts of America. However, he said he concentrates on the Boston Foundation, the Salvation Army and Congregation Sha'aray Shalom. Morse has three grown children and six grandchildren.

The concert honoring Morse is the third orchestrated by Weiss during his four-year tenure in Hingham. Last year's concert honored a local couple, David and Renee Rudolph, for their significant contributions to the Jewish and medical communities in the Boston area and beyond.

The first half of Saturday's program will feature traditional Jewish music and Hanukkah songs. The second half will be songs from newer Broadway shows including "Wicked" and "Spamalot," as well as classics from "Fiddler on the Roof" and "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum."

In addition to Hingham's Cantor Weiss, the other cantors participating in the concert include Joel Colman of Temple Sinai in New Orleans; Nancy Kassel of Temple Beth Tikvah in Roswell, Ga.; David Muchnick of Aventura Jewish Center of Aventura, Fl; and Judy Seplowin of Temple Beth-El of Providence, R.I. Pianist Eugene Kaminsky, an international performer and faculty member of the South Shore Conservatory, will accompany the vocalists.

Tickets for event are available for $25 per person. For more information about the concert or to purchase tickets, call the temple office at 781-749-8103 or visit www.shaaray.org.

Library

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Movie Matinee – Come for a free showing of the film "Singing' in the Rain" starring Gene Kelly, Debbie Reynolds and Donald O'Connor at 11 a.m., Friday, Dec. 7. Light refreshments will be provided by Friends of the Library. The movie site license is sponsored by Friends of the Library and Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "Fraulein" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, Dec. 20. Reza left Belgrade more than 25 years ago to seek a new life in Zurich. Now in her 50s, she has completely detached herself from the past. She owns a cafeteria and maintains an orderly, joyless existence. Ana, a young, itinerant woman who has fled Sarajevo, breezes into the cafeteria looking for work. Reza hires her but is annoyed by Ana's impulsive and spirited efforts to inject life into the cafeteria. Ana, who hides a tragic secret under her passionate spirit, begins to thaw Reza's chill, and their relationship will change both women in ways they never anticipated. Swiss-German, German, Bosnian, Croatian and Serbian with English subtitles. 81 minutes. Free admission and refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

New Titles– New DVDs have just arrived. "Santa Baby" starring Jenny McCarthy; "Shanghai Kiss" starring Hayden Panettiere and Ken Leung; "Waitress" starring Keri Russell; "Mr. Bean's Holiday" starring Rowan Atkinson; and "The Namesake," a movie based on Jhumpa Lahiri's book of the same name.

Come to the AISNE Private School Fair
Sunday, December 2nd, 2007 1:00 - 4:00 p.m.
Westin Hotel, 70 Third Ave. Waltham, MA 02451-7523
Finding the right school takes time. The keys to success are knowing your child and learning as much as you can about the schools you might consider. At the AISNE Fair you will meet with representatives from a number of Independent Schools in New England, including elementary and secondary schools, day schools and boarding schools, and single-sex and coed schools.
Come to the Private School Fair sponsored by the Association of Independent Schools in New England (AISNE) to consider private school options for next September and get a head start on the school search process for the 2009-2010 school year.
To learn more about the Private School Fair, please visit us on the web at WWW.AISNE.ORG or give us a call at (781)843-8440.

Volunteers will be on-hand to sell the stars and to personalize them with engraved names or sayings if desired. The stars can then be placed on the lighted trees to be picked up after the holiday season, or donors may take the stars home with them. The stars may also be purchased at 98 Derby Street, Suite 460, located behind Crate & Barrel in the shopping center.

Donations of food, toys, and money are especially welcome during busy holiday times.

"Cash donations give us options to meet a number of different needs that might not otherwise be met," said Harte. "This allows us the flexibility to vary the types of help we can give."

Through the holiday Adopt-a-Kid program, Wellspring reaches out to families in need, tailoring children's gifts to their individual age, gender, needs (from pajamas to socks), and wants (such as dolls, footballs, or gift cards). "Individuals and groups then 'adopt' a family, anonymously if they wish," Harte said. The identities of and information about the recipients is kept in strictest confidence.

Donors make their purchases from the list of needed and desired items provided by Wellspring and then drop them off at the Nantasket Avenue headquarters. "That's Santa Claus for some people," Harte said.

These gifts of hope not only provide joy to the recipients, but also to the givers. "Donors often have a vision of a child waking up on Christmas morning and of his or her delight at discovering the presents under the tree."

Harte is quick to note that Wellspring's holiday program is geared toward not only Christmas but also to other special days celebrated by a number of different faiths.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Wellspring executive director Vinny Harte is reflected in one of the stars that is being sold at both Wellspring and at the Derby Street Shoppes to help raise money for the various programs at Wellspring which include a food pantry and adult classes for the GED. The stars are $5 each.

Wellspring is a private non-profit organization that offers "A Hand Up, Not a Handout." Its goal is to reach beyond providing emergency services to help people become more independent and productive members of the community.

In keeping with its slogan, Wellspring keeps in close contact with local churches and organizations to ensure there is no duplication of services provided to the same clients. "We want to be sure there's a real need and that we are giving an appropriate amount to the right families," Harte said. "We supplement Globe Santa and local police department and other efforts."

Donations of gift certificates are welcome. Ones for supermarkets allow clients to purchase items that might not be available at the food pantry. Gift certificates for book stores or ones that specialize in CDs, DVDs, and other similar items and accessories would allow, for example, a teenager who is not used to having his own money in his pocket to visit a store and make his own decision about how to spend the gift certificate.

"This takes away the embarrassment of not having what everyone else has, giving him a sense of enjoyment and independence he might not have experienced before," Harte said.

Wellspring also provides full holiday meals to individuals and families in need, donated by various houses of worship, organizations, and individuals.

In addition, Wellspring has a year-round food pantry that serves Hull residents only because the other towns have their own. All of these activities are in conjunction with Wellspring's annual fund-raising campaign, which will continue through December. This involves sending appeal letters to Hingham, Hull, and Cohasset households "to raise not only funds, but also awareness of our organization," Harte said.

Wellspring helps to bring various community resources together and offers many volunteer opportunities.

This year Wellspring is one of the charities being supported by the Mariner's annual Gifts of Hope Campaign (please see editorial on page 10). Checks should be made out to Wellspring and sent to Gifts of Hope Program; c/o Anne Rodwell; Community Newspaper Company; 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050

For further information about the Star Project, the Adopt-a-Kid holiday program, the food pantry, or other Wellspring offerings, call (781) 925-3211 or visit their website www.wellspring-hull.org. The star ornaments may also be purchased online.

Donations of non-perishable items are preferred, but perishables may be dropped off on Tuesday afternoons before 4 p.m. prior to the regular 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Wednesday food pantry hours. Non-perishable items such as soup, tuna, and other canned goods with a long shelf life, peanut butter, and pasta may be dropped off during regular Wellspring business hours, Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 814 Nantasket Ave, Hull.

Even a few donated items can make a difference in the fight against not having enough to eat. "A loaf of bread and a jar of peanut butter go a long way," Harte said.

Non-food items such as razors, diapers, feminine hygiene products, shampoo, and shaving cream are also needed.

These holiday stars are being sold at the Derby Street Shoppes and at Wellspring in Hull. Proceeds from the sale of the star will go to all the programs at Wellspring.

How you can help

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For 15 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join The Cohasset Mariner in supporting three charities: Wellspring, Womanade, and the Social Service League in their efforts to help those in need this holiday season. A donation of any size goes a long way. (For more information, see editorial page 14).

Please make your tax-deductible check or money order payable to: Wellspring, Womanade or the Social Service League.

Foggy finale

Skippers nail down eighth win of the season against Hull

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

When Cohasset football coach Pete Afanasiw said to throw those records out the window heading into the Thanksgiving Day game he wasn't kidding. It didn't matter that Hull had only two wins heading into Thursday's game and it didn't matter that Cohasset was coming off wins over league champion Abington and a seven win Norwell team.

When it comes to Cohasset against Hull on the holiday, it is almost always an instant classic, as was this year's game in which the Skippers pulled out a late fourth quarter comeback to knock off the Pirates, 15-12.

Leading, 12-8, with six minutes to go in the fourth quarter Hull faced a critical third-and-six deep in its own territory. A first down could have spelled doom for the Skippers, but as he had done all day, defensive lineman Jake Cuneo broke through for an all-important sack, forcing a Pirates punt.

"He had a big game," Afanasiw said about the two-way starter. "He opened up some big holes, had that critical sack and had two or three tackles for losses – he was playing like a man possessed."

The huge second half defensive performance spiked the final game-winning drive for the Skippers.

With the ball at midfield, Cohasset had just enough time to drive down and take a lead or face a second straight Thanksgiving Day loss to Hull.

The weather was murky and warm, but as the Skippers offense took the field for their final drive rolling plumes of fog swept off the nearby Atlantic.

"There was this ominous feeling to the whole thing," Afanasiw said. "I was thinking, 'if we have to throw the ball will we be able to see it.'"

Instead the Skippers ran hard and executed a near perfect 10-play, 50-yard drive that was capped off by a PJ McCaw 2-yard run into the end zone. Pat Doonan added the extra point and Cohasset led, 15-12, with two minutes to play.

Cohasset fumbled on its own 5-yard line to start the game and Hull took advantage scoring an eventual touchdown on a John Caparrotta 7-yard run. Cohasset continued to turn the ball over in the first half and went into the locker room trailing, 12-8.

Kyle Pinkus recorded a 34-yard touchdown run in the first and David Snowdale added the two-point conversion to give Cohasset its initial eight points. Pinkus played outstanding running for 120-yards with the TD on offense and handing out 12 tackles on defense.

"Our defense played very well, and Hull played one heck of a game, but we never felt like we were letting it slip away," Afanasiw said. "Our confidence never waned, getting the ball with six minutes left and al our timeouts remaining we felt good going into that last drive.

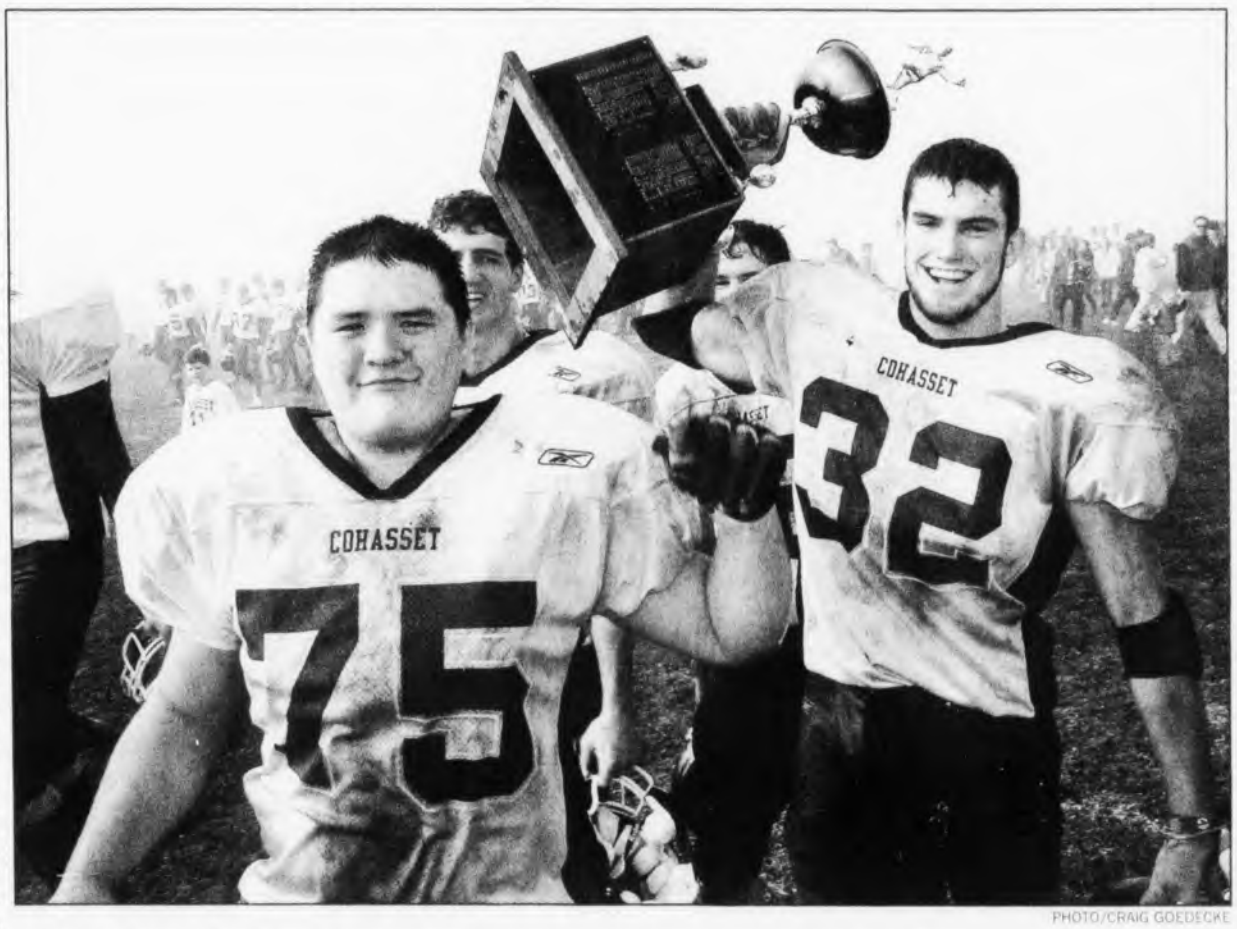
"I told the seniors inside the huddle that it's all about your season, it's your time to take the last five minutes. They didn't get shell-shocked they executed and although we made a lot of mistakes we never lost our cool."

Doonan's defense in the secondary and the job he did in the kicking game were vital in the win.

"He shut down whoever he was covering and Hull had bad field position all game because of his kicking," Afanasiw said.

This was Afanasiw's first Thanksgiving Day win as a coach.

"It was a nice win there were a lot of different emotions," he said. "It's different as a coach and a player, you know you are going to spend time with your family (losing) detracts from the holiday. It's nice being able to enjoy and relish the holiday."



Cohasset finished the season with an 8-2 record, 4-2 in the South Shore League. Thursday capped off an amazing season for a group of seniors that came to play game in and game out.

It wasn't easy handing in the helmets after the game – it never is.

"The kids didn't want to come off the field," Afanasiw said.

When the Skippers made it back to the locker room many of the seniors and coaches just sat and talked, realizing it would be their last time as a group together.

"They didn't want to leave and I cant blame them. I was the same way when I played," Afanasiw said. "But (winning) was a nice way to send them off."

Finals ouster fuels fire for strong returning cast of CHS lady booters

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Don't get them wrong; all those associated with the Cohasset High girls' soccer team were devastated by the 1-0 loss to archrival Norwell in the South Sectional finals earlier this month.

But even in the hours following that heart-wrenching Nov. 11 ouster it's difficult to believe that many weren't already switching their focus to September of '08.

"I looked at what we accomplished as a team this year, and then I look at that team and realize 22 of the 24 players I had for the tourney can come back next year," noted Lady Skippers veteran coach Deb Beal. "It's pretty exciting."

Especially when you consider that among those 22 potential returnees are the team's six all-stars.

The juniors voted in by league coaches were keeper Johanna Brophy, sweeper Sammi Lehr, stopper Maggy McGoldrick, defensive center-midfielder Sarah Coggins and offensive center mid-fielder Torey Hart. Hart (27 points) tied for the team lead in scoring with the sixth All-Star: freshman phenom Kaci Kucinski (18 goals, 9 assists).

"Obviously, the strength of my team is right up the middle with these five juniors," said Beal, "and then Kaci came in and helped take us to another level."

The 5-foot-2 Brophy, as fiery as she is fearless and athletic, pounces on everything in the goal area like a pit bull on raw meat.

"I think JoJo's thumb is hanging on by a thread at this point it's been bent back so many times, but she always says the same thing: 'I'm fine coach'," said Beal. "Sometimes you get a lump in your throat watching the way she dives to take the ball off (opposing players') feet, but you realize it's the only way she knows how to compete."

It's almost comical to see Brophy stand beside and quite literally in the shadow of her "final line of defense", fluid "5'9" athlete Lehr at sweeper.

"It sometimes looks like Sammi can cover the whole defensive zone from sideline to sideline," said Beal. "She's such a fun athlete to watch play. She definitely looks like someone who's going to play a sport at the (college) level, be it basketball or soccer."

McGoldrick and Coggins seem virtually interchangeable at stopper and defensive middie, respectively. In fact, even Beal had trouble discerning how to best use them, as she flipped their positions midway through the season. The two play he game year round, often on the same team.

"Maggie and Sarah are both tireless, smart players who control things in the middle of the field," lauded Beal. "Honestly, I'd love to see them both on the attack. I feel tempted at times to do just that because those positions are kind of the thankless ones that don't get a lot of attention or press, but they really are so valuable to us right where they're playing."

Speaking of press and attention, not to mention adulation, Hart has seen plenty of that in her three-year career as a scoring star, and Kucinski managed to draw a spotlight of her own this season with her 18-goal freshman debut.

Hart, a starter since her freshman year, scored 20 goals last season as a striker, but Beal moved her back to offensive center-mid this year in order to get her more touches and increased control on the flow of the offense.

"Torey could have had at least twice as many goals this year if she'd played up front, but she did everything I asked by moving back and letting the offense flow through her," said Beal. "It definitely made us a better team."

And Kucinski was clearly the main beneficiary of that.

"Kaci and Torey learned to work so well of one another as the season went along," said Beal. "Kaci is just so fast that it's almost impossible to keep her from getting space, and then Torey did such a nice job of finding her."

"Maggie and Sarah are both tireless, smart players who control things in the middle of the field. Honestly, I'd love to see them both on the attack. I feel tempted at times to do just that because those positions are kind of the thankless ones that don't get a lot of attention or press, but they really are so valuable to us right where they're playing."
Lady Skippers veteran coach Deb Beal

Containing Kucinski turned out to be an even more difficult task once Beal turned loose another super-speedy freshman at the other striker position in Caroline Fein.

Fein scored two goals during the Lady Skippers postseason run, including the lone goal of the semifinals win over unbeaten number one seed Sacred Heart.

"I look at those two freshmen gaining a lot of maturity before next season, and then give them another year working with Corey, and that's going to be a pretty scary thing for opposing defenses to figure out," offered Beal. "Which one of those three do you concentrate on shutting down?"

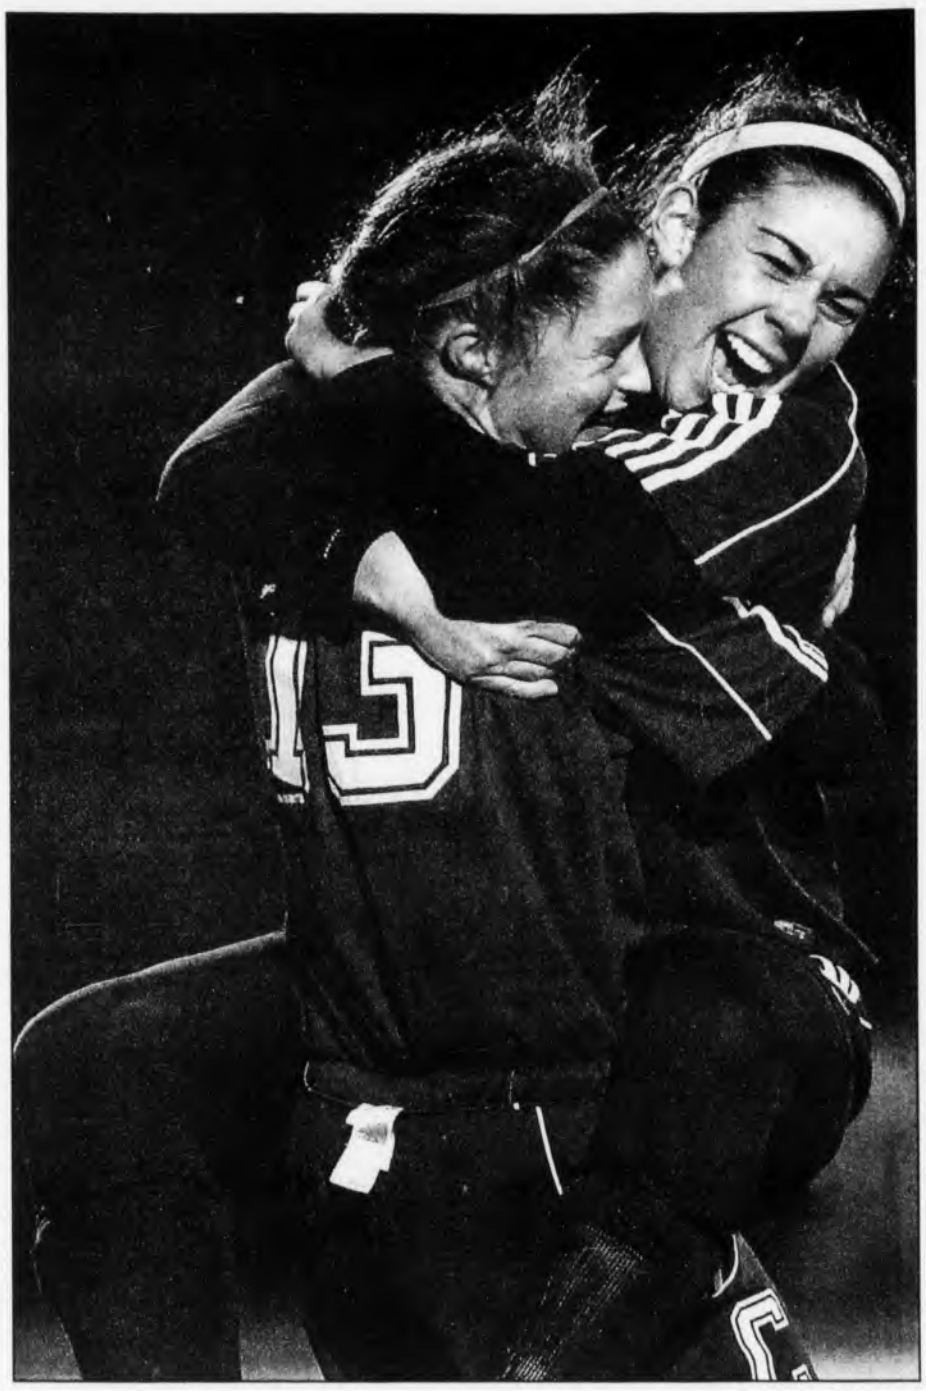
Beal also made a point to note how thrilled she'd been over the development of junior fullback Meredith Kelly, sophomore wing Christine Coner and freshman front field fill-in Mackenzie Hart (Torey's sister).

What is more, with the JV team finishing this fall with a winning record, Beal sounded confident over the prospect of developing one of the South Shore League's best benches next season.

"No doubt about it, we get an awful lot of talent back, and it's pretty exciting," said Beal, who directed the Lady Skippers to a record of 16-4-3, including her career best three postseason wins. "The way I look at it is we're taking a short break, and then getting right back to it."

This is not to say Beal and her charges won't miss players number 23 and 24—senior co-captains Meg Anderson and Anna Haggerty.

Haggerty was a stalwart at right fullback. Anderson was a key member of the varsity team for several years, but mononucleosis cost her most of her final season. Fortunately, she was cleared to play just before the start of the state tourney. Of course, she never came close to getting her legs all the way back under her.



"Both Anna and Meg did everything I asked of them," said Beal. "They were very good captains.

"The big thing with Anna is she was just so consistent in games and in practices. It probably wasn't easy for her, being the only senior and only captain there for a lot of practices. She's more of a leader by example type. But she always showed up to do the best she could.

"And you had to feel so bad for Meg. I'm just glad she was able to come back at the end and be a part of what we did in the (state) tourney."

Several of the Lady Skippers remain active in athletics year round, several doing soccer in all three off seasons.

"I'd like to think all of our players will make it a point to stay active and stay in shape," said Beal. "I'd like to think how close we came this year only fuels their fire. This was great experience for these girls who got there to play on the big stage, but in some ways that adds to the pressure to take that next step. I hope they all take that seriously."

Centenarian has her special day

Helen Murphy turns 101

A member of the community, Helen Murphy, turned 101 on Oct. 26, 2007. When asked about her birthday, she said that "birthdays are for the young." After all, she should know, she does have 101 years of experience.

Helen is enjoying life at Sunrise of Cohasset. She is a fixture in the community and greets everyone as they go about their day. As she sits in contentment, her smile lets you know it's going to be a good day. Family and friends are very active in her life, but she is just as independent, strong and modest as ever.

I read this, said Elisabeth Marbury, and it reminded me of Helen: "Years in themselves mean nothing. How we live them means everything." May we all live our years as well as Helen has continued to live hers.

Helen, on your birthday we send you our love and a traditional birthday wish: "May you live as long as you want, and never want as long as you live! Happy Birthday."

...big congratulations to the boy's Varsity Football team, which beat Hull in the annual Thanksgiving Day showdown!

Hopefully, everyone recovered well from last weekend's food filled festivities. Say goodbye to the extended family, elastic waist pants and (big sigh of relief)... the leftovers, because it's time to re-enter regular life! The days of finding new ways to make leftovers more exciting are over or at least until the next holiday season. Though my dad and I are no Top Chefs, may we recommend making a little Turkey Dinner Casserole.... for those who watch the Today Show, you know what I'm talking about!

On a different note, this week the senior girls were able to walk with their heads held high after dominating the juniors in the annual, and may I add, fierce Powderpuff football game. These girls came to kick butt and represent their grade! Fighting for the respect of their peers, the senior skippers were on their A game. Warning to next year's juniors, those footballers can bring it!

Also, big congratulations to the boy's Varsity Football team, which beat Hull in the annual Thanksgiving Day showdown! This nail biting game attracted a large crowd of people, who packed into the stands to watch the exciting competition. Great season guys!

Now, it is time for some shameless promotion of the school newspaper. Recently, the year's first issue of the award-winning High School newspaper, The Spinnaker, was released. For these hardworking journalists, the debut of the paper proved to be a proud moment. Do not let the opportunity pass you by, subscribe today.

It's time for the week's main events:

- Monday, Nov. 26: The Winter Athletic Programs began, meaning no more footballs and smelly cleats. This means it's now time to wash sweaty singlets and lace up the Air Jordans!
- Tuesday, Nov. 27: Is there a new Kate Bosworth in town? Maybe the Drama Workshop knows, after meeting in the auditorium to practice their acting skills.
- Wednesday, Nov. 28: The Yearbook staff met a night earlier. For the seniors who have not yet handed in their senior write-ups and pictures, the clock is ticking. Don't be the names without faces... bring in the write-ups and pictures before it is too late!
- Thursday, Nov. 29: Another normal day at CHS.
- Friday, Nov. 30 : For those who like to get an early start on holiday decorating, then it is time make room for the Christmas tree, Menorah, or any other holiday trappings because December first is only a day away.

That's it for me this week. Have a great weekend!

Extra Credit instead of apples

Take time this holiday season to honor our local educators by participating in the CEF Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit. You can make a tax-deductible donation to the CEF in a teacher's name, and you will both thank that educator for a job well done, as well as help fund CEF grant programs that foster innovation and excellence in teaching throughout the entire Cohasset public school system. Checks should be made payable to The Cohasset Education Foundation and mailed to The Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O. Box 309, Cohasset, MA. 02025 or visit cohasseteducation.org.

Integrated Preschool has some openings

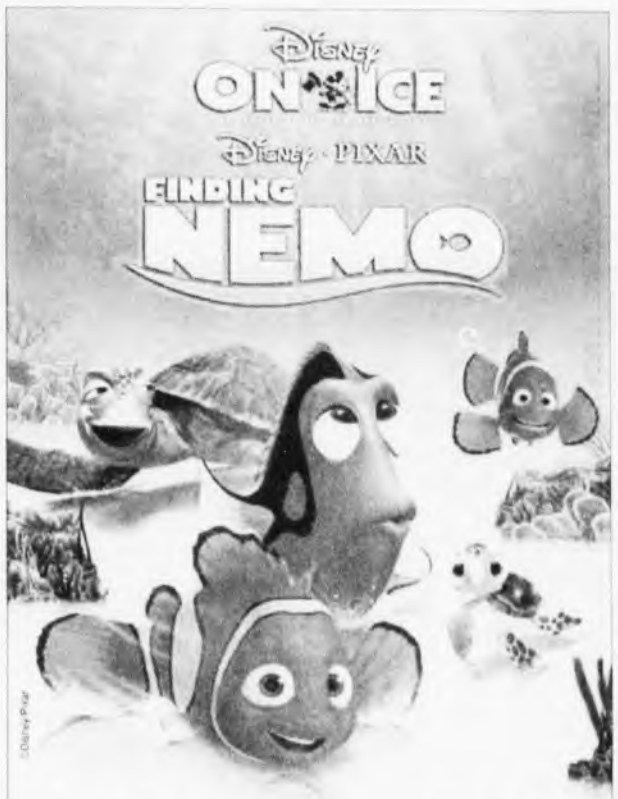
The Integrated Preschool at Osgood School currently has a few openings for typically developing peers in its morning program. Children need to be age 3 by Sept. 1, 2007. Cost for the program is $1,500 for the school year and would be pro-rated for the remaining months.

Parents who are interested in having their child attend this four-morning a week program should call the Student Services office at 781-383-6104 for an application and more information.

Teen dance Nov. 30

Cohasset Youth Resources will host a Midnight Blue Dance for students in grades six through eight at the Teen Center from 7 to 10 p.m., on Friday, Nov. 30. There will be a door charge of $5 per person, and those attending will be required to show a student ID when signing in for the dance.

Students should be sure they gain admittance to the dance before their ride lives, as once full capacity is reached no further admittance will be allowed. There will be no admittance after 8:30 p.m.



Snacks and refreshments will be on sale. This is not a school function.

The Bay of Islands, north of Auckland, has long drawn the yachting and fishing set for its stunning scenery and the chance to catch a giant marlin.

More recently, the seaside area is drawing foodies and wine aficionados hoping to catch an amazing meal and a stunning vintage.

Fusion is king and local products are the norm for local chefs. Maybe it's the clear blue sea and the sky – scientifically proven to be among the bluest on the planet – that encourages them.

Meanwhile, artisanal food producers are proliferating in the countryside. And boutique vineyards are gaining attention.

A recently established Northland Wine & Food Trail suggests driving routes through the laidback, historic towns of Kerikeri, Pahia and Russell, the country's first capital, and highlights nearly 75 food- and wine-related attractions.

Epicenter of the local food scene is the homey Sunday morning Bay of Islands Farmer's Market in Kerikeri, a town of 6,000 that's the area's commercial center.

While buskers perform nearby, vendors in covered stalls offer thin-skinned Maori potatoes and handmade sausages using local meat. There is Manuka honey, saffron, dried oyster mushrooms and mini kiwis known as kiwi berries. Popular products also include macadamia nuts and locally grown and roasted coffee beans.

These same local products appear on restaurant menus.

"Northland is fast becoming a serious food tourism destination," said Hughie Blues, chef/owner of the Waikokopu Café at the Waitangi Treaty Grounds in Pahia – where the Maoris and British signed a major treaty in 1840.

He described the local cuisine as whatever the chef prefers — Asian, Mediterranean, classic French — combined with anything that's local and fresh. Blues' creations include a Maori potato and chickpea blini with Moroccan spices, pumpkin, roasted eggplant and a fig reduction.

A few miles away at Puretastes in Pahia, Paul Jobin — who gained acclaim in Auckland as one of the country's top chefs — serves "modern global food" at a newly opened venue, one of several chefs drawn to the area's inspirational environment.

The wine scene is vibrant here are well — small compared to other New Zealand wine areas, but growing.

There are three boutique vineyards in Kerikeri, eight in the Northland region. Several have restaurants and offer free wine tastings.

At the Cottle Hill Winery in Kerikeri (www.cottlehill.co.nz) ex-pat Michael Webb tells visitors how he sailed here from San Diego in the 1990s with his wife Barbara on their 35-foot Island Packet and fell in love with the place. The Webbs gave up their previous careers, he as a plumbing contractor and she as a CPA, to open their boutique winery.

Between pouring big tastes of his homegrown chardonnay and pinot noir – and sampling quite a few tastes himself too, – Webb said his philosophy for the wine business is "wines for every day and everybody," which he said fits in well with the local ethic.

"People go fishing and have lives here. They have barbeques and all the stuff you read [about New Zealand] in America," Webb explained. "I'm a winemaker but I also take out the trash."

Webb's wines sell from $11 to $19 per bottle.

Down the road at the Marsden Estate in Kerikeri (www.marsdenestate.co.nz) lunch is romantically served on an outdoor patio and is a relaxed affair with grapevines in the view. The vineyard produces the award-winning Black Rocks Chardonnay, as well as other red and white varieties ($13 to $25 per bottle).

Vintner Rod MacIvor may be tending the vines and offer an impromptu tour that will include a diagnosis of this year's crop and a friendly offer to taste some grapes.

Visiting local food producers also brings rewards. At Mahoe Farmhouse Cheese in Kerikeri you might glimpse some of the 100 cows, but the attraction is the samples at the factory shop including the Very Old Edam, which has won national cheese awards.

The farm doesn't offer tours but you can peek into the cheese factory attached to the shop. Nearby the Fibres Gallery, run by the farmer's wife, is one of the best places in the area for local crafts, including lovely handmade cushion covers and Mohair sweaters.

Another noteworthy stop is Ludbrook House in Ohaeawai (near Kerikeri), a 1,000-acre beef and sheep farm where Chris Ludbrook has gained a reputation as a jam maker extraordinaire. Her products – sold here and at gourmet shops throughout the country – include fig jam, quince jelly and kiwi marmalade.

Ludbrook also offers luxurious farmhouse accommodations.

Recognizing people are coming to the area to eat and drink, local caterer Cedar Corban got the idea visitors may also be interested in learning some cooking techniques.

At her Magnolia House, a dessert grape vineyard in Kerikeri, Corban — great granddaughter of the founder of New Zealand's famous Corban Wines — offers tours that combine visits to the Kerikeri vineyards and food producers with cooking workshops.

You can also stop by to buy dessert grapes and talk food. The smells from Corban's kitchen may include ginger pork meatballs or grape jam tartlets.

Just like in the rest of Northland, seems there's always something cooking.

Sleeping with the Grapes

Time in a vineyard is a quintessential Bay of Islands experience.

You can visit for lunch or dinner or to taste the goods at the vineyard's shop. But to fully immerse yourself, stay overnight.

At the fabulous Omata Estate in Russell, up to 12 guests are housed in luxurious accommodations with views of vines and the sea.

Omata produces a well-known syrah, a merlot and a full-bodied chardonnay – the most expensive bottle is $55.

The vineyard also boasts one of the Northland's most acclaimed dining venues, specializing in rustic, Mediterranean cuisine with a New Zealand twist – the New Zealand antipasto that includes green-lipped mussels and raw oysters along with cheese, olives and salami.

At lunch, a popular choice is the fish and chips, made with tempura batter and Spanish onion caper sauce. At dinner, enjoy main courses including New Zealand lamb loin with chickpeas, ruby chard and minted yogurt.

For reservations, visit www.omata.co.nz. Room rates from $259-$386 per night; main courses in the restaurant from $15-$18 at lunch, $25-$27 at dinner.

New Spa Oasis on Cape

IN NEW ENGLAND

"There is equipment there that scares the hell out of me," joked hotel general manager Paul Zuest at the recent grand opening party for The Spa at Chatham Bars Inn on the Cape.

But it is just that equipment – including a fancy Vichy shower room – that will no doubt draw spa aficionados to Chatham and the historic resort.

The new $25 million spa is modern and gorgeous – light shades of purple and sea foam green adding to an ambience that just makes you say "ahhh" from the get-go.

Zuest called the place "our little spa," but it's more than that.

The Spa is built lagoon-like, with a heated pool where private cabanas can be used for open-air treatments, weather-permitting.

The 2,500-square-foot indoor space includes a women's area with sauna and three private steam rooms, and a men's area with steam rooms and a plasma TV – where sporting events will be shown. Treatment rooms come in the dry and wet variety, the latter featuring the multi-head Vichy shower and hydrotherapy tubs.

The menu at The Spa features Vinotherapy, which originated in France's Bordeaux region in 1999, and makes use of antioxidant qualities of grape seeds. A Shiraz Body Scrub uses grape seeds from Napa Valley and is followed by a lavish lavender massage, 60 minutes, $120.

Book a Vinotherapy Weekend Package and you and your significant other can enjoy a Shiraz Body Scrub for two, a welcome wine amenity, and two nights' accommodations with breakfast, priced from $875.

More standard treatments include one-hour massages priced from $110. A variety of packages combining various treatments are also available.

For the ultimate indulgence weekend, stay in one of the resort's new spa suites, located in a building adjacent to The Spa, and each equipped with its own state-of-the-art hydrotherapy tub big enough for two, a steam shower and a sauna. They are sexy spaces for couples, and you can even order up a massage in your room (the suites have plasma TVs, fireplaces and Bose sound systems, as well).

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

"Everything is geared to meeting the needs of the work force. We're not preparing people for a doctorate in history. It's very practice-oriented."

Janet L. Castleman, dean of Framingham State graduate and continuing education

Time is on your side at Framingham State College

FRAMINGHAM – Finding time for school is almost always a struggle for working adults, as they have to balance studies, work and family responsibilities while earning a college degree.

At Framingham State College, students are discovering they can work toward a better education - and meet day-to-day obligations.

"Obviously, I have some time, but I didn't want all my time taken up with classes," said Framingham's Justin Lutz, who is studying for his master's degree in business administration at Framingham State College.

But he, like other adults who return to college, have to balance school with other responsibilities.

In Lutz' case, that means spending time with his books and training full time for the U.S. Olympic Team's track and field trials next summer. He's able to train full time as an active duty sergeant with the Marine Corps.

"I've always had running as a passion in my life. ... It happens that physical fitness is highly regarded in the Marine Corps," said Lutz, a veteran of two tours of duty in the Iraq war. He's on a leave of absence as an engineer with Raytheon.

Because he's a veteran, Lutz can attend a public college or university at no cost, he said.

"I looked at it as an opportunity to get a free MBA," said Lutz.

Janet L. Castleman, dean of Framingham State's graduate and continuing education department, said FSC's graduate programs are designed to help students get ahead on the job.

Many of the students in the school's graduate program are school teachers working on advanced degrees required by their profession. Other popular programs include health care, public administration and counseling, plus food and nutrition.

Janet L. Castleman

"Everything is geared to meeting the needs of the work force," Castleman said, and later added, "We're not preparing people for a doctorate in history. It's very practice-oriented."

The graduate program - and undergraduate continuing education - is designed to work around students who have to juggle school with work and family life responsibilities through afternoon and evening courses.

Since 1998, the school has also offered online courses - about 140 now - which allow students to go to class at their own convenience, she said. This semester alone there have been 3,000 enrollments in online courses (students can sign up for more than one, she noted).

But the college is trying to make education possible for working people, not make the curriculum easy.

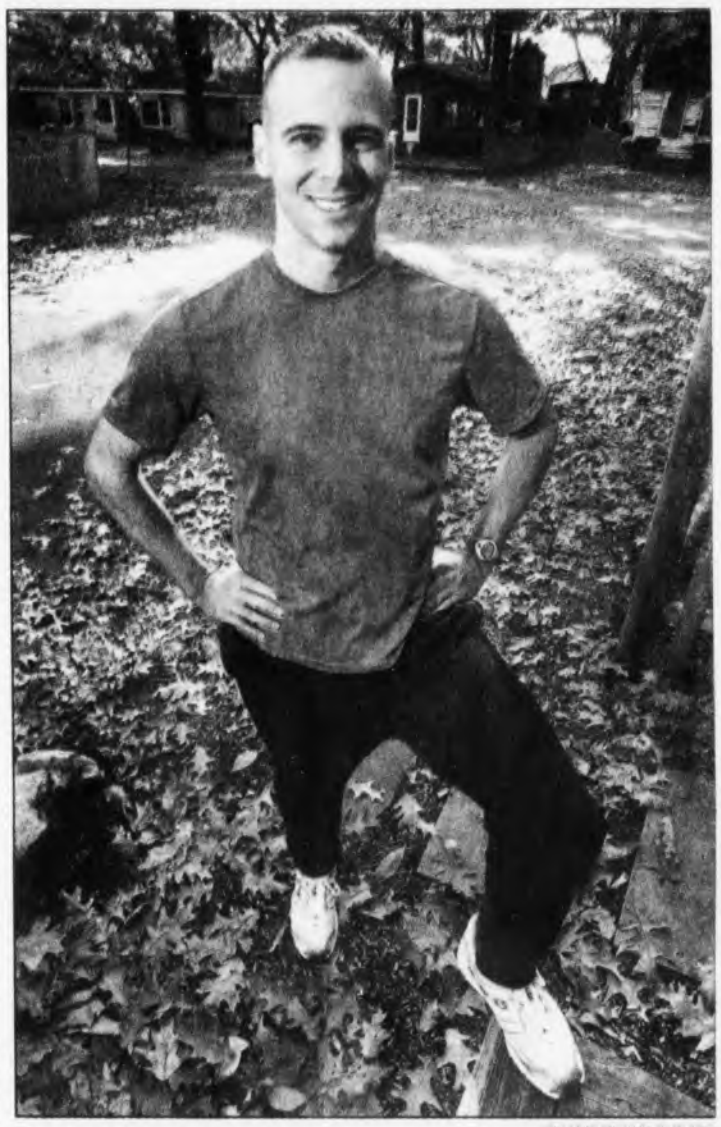
"Graduate school is hard. College is hard. Students are expected ... to do a lot of outside work," said Castleman. "We're giving them the tools to succeed, but it's not going to happen without a lot of effort and a lot of time."

The school's undergraduate programs, too, have attracted adult students, such as Janet Fannon, who now works as FSC's graduate program assistant.

She took several college courses after high school, but did not pursue a college degree full-time until her three children earned their own degrees, she wrote in an e-mail.

She worked part time and majored in geography with an English minor.

"Because I had waited so long to fulfill my dream, I was much more focused on what interested me than what would lead me to a job," wrote Fannon.



She said the challenge she faced was fitting in with traditional college students, and she co-founded the Adults Returning to College club in the 2003-04 school year.

"We felt a need to come together with other adult students as a group for emotional support and friendship as we went through this unfamiliar journey," she said.

Now she's eyeing a master of education degree and becoming an English-as-a-second-language teacher.

"My geography students have made me feel as much like a global citizen as an American citizen and I think that teaching English will enable me to connect with all types of international people," she said.

Justin Lutz of Framingham, a Marine Corps sergeant, is enrolled in the MBA program at Framingham State College. At the same time, he's training for the U.S. Olympic track and field trials.

College: A worthy investment

By Patricia McGowan Samson
DEAN COLLEGE

As more people consider the cost of higher education, many may question its value. Is it worth choosing college over full-time employment?

COMMENTARY

Statistics show there is a considerable rate of return on an investment in higher education. Though the earning differential of a high school graduate versus a college graduate is minimal at first, it grows exponentially over time.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, a high school graduate earns an average of $1.2 million during their working life. Associate's degree holders earn about $1.6 million and bachelor's degree holders earn about $2.1 million. Those with college degrees earn nearly double the amount of high school graduates.

How does that break out in yearly terms? The Census Bureau indicates that workers 18 and over with a bachelor's degree earn an average of $57,200 a year; while those with a high school diploma earn $35,725. Workers with a master's degree make an average of $71,530, and workers without a high school diploma average about $26,200.

Though a college degree isn't always necessary in some fields, a degree does qualify you for many jobs that wouldn't be available to you otherwise. Career advancement is also easier because some job promotions require at least some college courses or a full degree.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, a high school graduate earns an average of $1.2 million during their working life. Those with college degrees earn nearly double the amount of high school graduates.

In addition to increased earning potential, there are other benefits to receiving a college degree. In a report published by the Institute for Higher Education Policy, individual benefits enjoyed by college graduates include higher levels of savings, increased personal and professional mobility, improved quality of life for their children, better consumer decision making and more hobbies and leisure activities.

Research in the early 21st century indicates that those who have pursued higher education also have a tendency toward good health, not only for oneself, but for one's children. Also, a number of studies have shown a correlation between education, cultural and family values, and economic growth. A 1992 report by Elchanan Cohn and Terry Geske shows that "college graduates appear to have a more optimistic view of their past and future personal progress."

Should you further your education? What is the best choice for you? Now that there are many more options to the traditional academic year college offerings, those wishing to pursue or complete a college degree have many options that will fit into the schedules of working students and non-traditional students.

Evening, online and continuing education programs are good alternatives for working students, allowing for flexible scheduling.

Many colleges and universities are offering programs on an accelerated schedule, including Dean College. In January, students can take up to three courses in a two-week time period between the end of the fall semester and the beginning of the spring semester.

What will work best for you? That's something only you can answer, and the best way to start is by contacting your local college or university to find out more.

A Cohasset cat waits to be blessed during last year's Blessing of the Animals.

Community welcome at Blessing of the Animals

It's time once again to bless animal companions in the annual Blessing of the Animals at First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset at 3 p.m., on Sunday, Dec. 2. The public is invited to this blessing of four-legged, feathered, swimming and slithering pets. This translates into cats, dogs, birds, fish, snakes, lizards and more. Last year two alpacas made a grand entrance at benediction time, joining Socks the cat and many other creatures for a service of song, story, poetry, prayer and the blessing of each and every animal at the chancel.

This is a community event, and all animal friends are welcome – live, stuffed or photographed. Live pets must be house-trained and leashed or in a carrier.

For more information, call First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset at 781-383-1100. Come and share the blessings.

Edna F. Fielding

Longtime resident of Cohasset

Edna F. Fielding, 93, died Aug. 12, 2007, in Union, Washington.

Born in Newark, N.J., she attended Newark Teachers College. She married Herbert Fielding and moved to Yakima, Wash., during World War II, where her husband was stationed while serving in the military. In 1954, Mrs. Fielding and her husband moved to Cohasset, where they raised six children. Mrs. Fielding was active in the schools, working as a substitute teacher and serving as President of the PTA. She also volunteered as a Cub Scout leader and worked as a salesperson for the World Book Encyclopedia.

Mrs. Fielding was an active member of St. Anthony's Parish and sang in the church choir. She lived in Cohasset for 37 years, until moving in 1991. She lived in St. Petersburg, Fla., for 12 years before moving to Union, Wash., to live with her daughter.

Edna F. Fielding

Wife of 29 years to the late Herbert C. Fielding, she leaves her sons, Richard Fielding of Washington, D.C., Robert Fielding of Los Angeles, Calif., Ronald Fielding of Rochester, N.Y., and Ken Fielding of Lake Tahoe, Calif.; her daughters, Elizabeth Fielding of Wilmot, N.H., and Barbara McDonald of Union, Wash.; 10 grandchildren; and one great-grandson.

A memorial service will be held at noon, Saturday, Dec. 1, at Woodside Cemetery, North Main St., Cohasset. In lieu of flowers, donation can be made in her memory to the hospice organization of one's choice.

Austin F. O'Toole

WWII Veteran and pioneer builder of affordable housing

Austin F. O'Toole, 86, of Cohasset, died Nov. 22, 2007, at Harbor House Rehab and Nursing Facility in Hingham, following complications from pneumonia and congestive heart failure.

Born the son of Irish immigrants, he was raised in the St. Peters section of Dorchester, and as a youth sang in St. Peter's Parish Liturgical Choir. Mr. O'Toole sold and delivered newspapers after school while attending English High School in Boston, where he was Vice President of both his junior and senior class. He was awarded a partial college scholarship from Burroughs Newspaper Foundation and attended Boston College, but his studies were interrupted as a result of World War II.

He enlisted in the Marines and served as a First Lieutenant and platoon leader in the Pacific Amphibian Assault Battalion. After serving in the war, Mr. O'Toole completed his college education at Dartmouth College, graduating in 1947. Upon graduation he went on to attend Columbia University. While suffering from a temporary deterioration in eyesight due to pernicious anemia, he managed to study for and graduate with an MBA with the help of his wife Nancy, who would read for him. Mr. and Mrs. O'Toole were married Oct. 1, 1947, and began their lifelong partnership, which continued until her sudden death in March 2007.

After college, he co-founded Greater Boston Builders with his wife. Together they built more than 800 units of housing, including apartments, homes and condominiums, both in Boston and the South Shore. Mr. O'Toole was driven by his belief in affordable housing, particularly for the generation of veterans of which he was a part. He was a former President of the Boston Home Builders Association, Director of the Mass State Builders Association, and Director of the National Association of Home Builders.

Mr. O'Toole was a 45-year resident of Cohasset and an active member in his community, serving as Treasurer and Director of the Cohasset Council of Elder Affairs. For ten years he was a member of the Cohasset Conservation Commission. He and his wife Nancy were long time members of Hatherly Country Club, where they devoted their free time to golf and friendship. Mr. and Mrs. O'Toole also enjoyed traveling, setting out annually to visit the far reaches of the world, later in life spending their winter months in Naples, Fla.

Mr. O'Toole was a second-degree member of the Knights of Columbus who enjoyed poetry and loved singing. For several years he was a member of St. Anthony's choir, in Cohasset. Family and friends fondly recall his keen memory and spontaneous recitation of classical poems, college anthems, and Latin phrases.

He leaves his daughters, Lisa Vivian, Lynn Durkin and her husband Joseph, and Clover Weinstein and her husband Robbie; his son, Austin O'Toole; and his grandchildren, Madeline Vivian, Alison Vivian, Joseph Durkin, Lindsay Durkin, Terence Durkin, Jake Durkin, Megan Durkin, and Lee Ann Weinstein.

Arrangements were handled by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset. Interment is private.

Donations in his memory may be made to Homes For Our Troops, 37 Main St., Taunton, MA., 02780, or to the Marine Corps Scholarship Foundation, P.O. Box 3008, Princeton, N.J. 08543-3008.

Lessons & Carols

St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave., will present its Festival of Lessons and Carols at 3 p.m., on the First Sunday of Advent, Dec. 2. This service of Sacred Scripture and song traces salvation history through readings and song, presenting anthems sung by the choir, as well as hymns of the season sung by all. The Rev. Edward Kienzle will preside and music will be under the direction of choirmaster and organist David Baker. This Advent festival is a wonderful way for all to prepare hearts and minds for the celebrations of Christ's birth.

The church is handicap accessible, and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be gratefully accepted. For information, call 781-383-1083.

Cantors' concert

The public is welcome to an evening of music and inspirational speaking at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham, at 8 p.m., on Saturday, Dec. 8.

Titled "From Bimah to Broadway – A Cantor's Concert," the event will honor Herb Morse and feature Cantor Steven Weiss and Cantor Joel Colman from Temple Sinai, New Orleans, La.; Cantor Nancy Kassel from Temple Beth Tikvah, Roswell, Ga.; Cantor David Muchnick from Aventura Jewish Center, Aventura Fla.; Cantor Judy Seplowin from Temple Beth-El, Providence, R.I.; and accompanied by Eugene Kaminsky. There will also be a special tribute by Rev. Dr. Ray A. Hammond.

Dancer gets down to show business

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Broadway performer Todd Lattimore moved from Falmouth to Easton in September, but the dancer — and sometime retailer — may be logging more time in Boston than in his new hometown this holiday season.

"I'm spending my days at 'Marc by Marc Jacobs' on Newbury Street, where I'm a sales associate, and my nights onstage at the Wang Theatre in 'Irving Berlin's White Christmas,'" explained Lattimore by telephone recently during a rehearsal break. Lattimore sold his store, The Lily Pad, in Mashpee Commons in July and he and husband, advertising executive Brian Merrill, left the Cape to complete work on their new home.

"Our house was built in 1890 as a church and operated from 1960 to 2005 as a Masonic Temple. We were drawn to the uniqueness of the space so we gutted the building completely and turned it into our home," says Lattimore, whose Broadway credits include the 2001 Tony Award-winning "42nd Street" revival. "Brian and I were married two years ago, but we didn't have a big wedding so when we finally settled in Easton we reenacted our marriage ceremony at the Easton Historical Society and then we had a combined house warming and wedding reception at our home for all our friends and family."

Todd Lattimore

With his days as a storeowner at least temporarily behind him, Lattimore is once again concentrating on a career he began pursuing while a student at the Boson Conservatory.

"Theater is in my blood so, no matter what else I do, I can never really turn off my desire to perform. Now, no longer owning my own business, I can jump on work on a moment's notice. And, when I get a call to do something on stage, I go."

In the past few years, Lattimore has done "Of Thee I Sing" and "Face The Music" with the New York City Center "Encores!" series. And, through Dec. 23, he can be seen in "White Christmas," the stage musical based on the 1954 feature film musical of the same name. As in 2005 when the musical first played the Wang, Lattimore is part of the ensemble of the show that tells the tale of two show business friends who decide to stage a musical spectacular at a quaint Vermont inn. Directed by Broadway veteran Walter Bobbie ("Chicago"), and with choreography by Randy Skinner ("42nd Street"), "White Christmas" was first produced on stage in San Francisco in 2004. While holiday-themed, the show has played some non-traditional dates.

DAVID ALLEN 2004 ORIGINAL COMPANY

Finale: Irving Berlin's "White Christmas."

"In the summer of 2006, I did the show at The Muny in St. Louis, which is the oldest and largest outdoor theater in the country. I had always wanted to play the Muny and 'White Christmas' gave me that opportunity," recalls Lattimore. "It was Christmas in July, but the response was terrific. The Muny audiences are very polite."

The Auburn, N.Y., native expects similar warmth at the Wang.

"Boston loves this show. And what's not to love? We've got the A-Team cast of Brian D'Arcy James, Jeffry Denman, Meredith Patterson, and Kerry O'Malley. Being able to work with each of them is like its own master class in performing for me. And we built quite a following with our 2004 run. People who saw the show last time around are calling me for tickets, because they can't wait to see it again."

"Irving Berlin's White Christmas" will be at the Citi Performing Arts Center's Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont St., Boston, through Dec. 23. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 800-447-7400 or go online at citicenter.org.

Volunteers

HOSPICE OFTHE SOUTH SHORE SEEKS VOLUNTEERS Greater numbers of people are turning to hospice services as they near the end of life and therefore the need for hospice volunteers is growing.

Hospice of the South Shore, a program of South Shore Hospital, is looking for volunteers to share time each week with hospice patients and their families. Volunteers do a variety of things, depending on the needs of the patient and his or her family. Activities may include providing respite for caregivers, running errands, or just keeping someone company. Many hospice volunteers describe the experience of helping individuals with advanced illness as an honor and a privilege. Hospice of the South Shore will be conducting a volunteer training class. If you are interested in becoming a hospice volunteer, call Marcia Clifford at 617 755-1314.

Theater review

'Streamers' shows its age

While Billy (Brad Fleischer, r.) looks on, Richie (Hale Appleman, center), comforts Martin (Charlie Hewson, l.) whose fear of being shipped to Vietnam has led to a suicide attempt in the Huntington Theatre Company's production of "Streamers," directed by Scott Ellis and playing at the Huntington's B.U. Theatre thru Dec. 9.

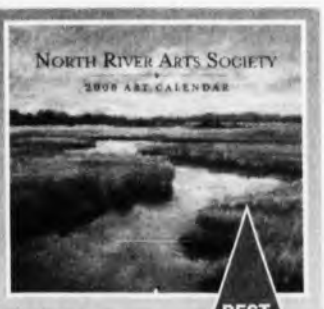
When Bob Dylan recorded his now-classic protest song "The Times They Are A-Changin" in 1964, the Vietnam conflict was about to escalate into a war that would claim too many American lives and divide a nation along pro- and ant-war lines not unlike those drawn by the current war in Iraq. While the Huntington Theatre Company's current staging of David Rabe's critically acclaimed "Streamers," set in a Virginia boot camp in 1965, has real artistic merit as a production, it also proves that the times have changed and the play's message now resounds with much less impact.

In the early 1970s, while the Vietnam war still raged, playwright David Rabe — a grad school dropout drafted in 1965 and deployed to a military hospital in Vietnam — made a name for himself with a series of Vietnam-set plays including the trilogy "The Basic Training of Pavlo Hummel," "Sticks and Bones," and "The Orphan," and 1976's "Streamers."

In the latter, four young soldiers are witness to the conflict becoming a war as they anxiously await deployment and struggle to make sense of their new, highly regimented lives and of what awaits them in Vietnam. Tensions rise over race, sexuality and class, culminating in an act of senseless violence foreshadowing what they face in Southeast Asia.

Scott Ellis

Director Scott Ellis, a longtime Rabe friend and collaborator whose Broadway credits include the current Kander and Ebb musical "Curtains," last season's much-talked-about off-Broadway-to-Broadway transfer "The Little Dog Laughed," and 2004's acclaimed Round-about Theatre Company production of "Twelve Angry Men," clearly knows how to work this subject matter. How-ever, it is subject matter that sometimes just no longer works.



What more than 30 years ago may have had audiences sitting up straight now may have them wondering if they haven't seen it all before. There is a flouncy gay character (Richie, played by Hale Appleman) from a moneyed background, a salt-of-the-earth if perhaps sexually conflicted Midwesterner (Brad Fleischer's Billy), an earnest and hardworking African American (Roger, portrayed by J.D. Williams), another, less well-meaning, black man (the powerful Ato Essandoh as Carlyle), and two drunken louts who just happen to be the sergeants in charge (Larry Clarke and John Sharlan). Rabe's writing is good, but his message now feels of a time instead of timeless.

The problems with the script aside, this first major regional theater revival of "Streamers" does boast an excellent cast and crisp direction from Ellis, but any contribution that the claustrophobia of too-close quarters might have made to the conflicts between these men is undercut by scenic designer Neil Patel's too-spacious barracks.

The Huntington Theatre Company production of "Streamers" will be at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue, Boston, through Dec. 9. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-0800, or go online at huntingtontheate.org.

Dirty water

Cleaning up the manganese a priority

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

After every Fenway Park win, Red Sox fans celebrate with a little "Dirty water" as the 1966 Standells hit song is played over the speakers. But, love for dirty water only goes so far. In recent months, the Water Department has received complaints all over town about discolored water coming out of their faucets.

On Monday night, the Water Commission came before Selectmen to let them know its is fully aware of the issue and currently working on several efforts to address the problem both in the short-term and long-term.

Although the water is leaving the Lily Pond Treatment Plant clear, the discolored water results from disturbances in the flow of water in the water mains (i.e. a fire hydrant is opened, a break in a water main, or during construction activity). The disturbance of water shakes loose the sediment that coats the water mains. The sediment is primarily pre-

Avalon update

Developer working with DEP

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's another development in the lack of development of the Avalon project. But, Avalon is still working toward the day where it can break ground.

In recent weeks, the Department of Environmental Protection and Avalon have signed a formal extension, or administrative consent order, to conclude DEP mandated testing following a site audit back in the spring. Concerns were raised as to the lingering environmental impact from a former manufacturing company that occupied the site and the DEP issued a Notice of non-compliance requesting additional testing be done.

"An administrative consent order is an enforcement document (the DEP) negotiates with the owner of the property or the responsible party when they are not in compliance with DEP regulations," said Theresa Barao of the DEP Public Affairs office in Lakeville, Mass. in a phone interview. Fines can be a part of an administrative consent order, but no fines were applied in this instance.

Avalon has completed and filed the majority of the tests called for in the notice of non-compliance, but was unable to complete testing on the adjacent, down gradient site, Whitney-Thayer Woods within the initial DEP 60-day timeframe.

In June, the DEP issued a Notice of

The art of quietly helping others

Local group assists those in need

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Quietly going about their business without fanfare, four friends from Hingham and neighboring Hull are finding a sense of joy and satisfaction in extending a helping hand to South Shore residents in need.

Kate Pershing, Marycatherine Mamary, and Julia Powers of Hingham and Hull resident Leisa Setlin formed a local chapter of Womanade in 2004, and they're still going strong.

This grassroots organization has helped families in Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Hull, Weymouth, Quincy, Norwell, Brockton and Easton.

"Womanade started because the four of us wanted to help people who are less fortunate than ourselves," said Pershing. "Although the name of our

Round 2: Cat Dam

Committee will oversee operation

Cat Dam is owned by the town but historically has been maintained and operated by the abutters.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Neighbors surrounding Little Harbor are still at odds over what to do about "Cat Dam" — a 50-year-old mechanism to slow the flow of water out of inner Little Harbor. The Board of Selectmen denied a group of neighbors' request to put the operation of the town-owned structure into the hands of a town board, specifically the Conservation Commission.

After lengthy discussion, the Selectmen uniformly determined the operation of Cat Dam would remain under the direction of nearby neighbors, at least for the time being. They requested a committee of five, representative of all neighbors, be established to oversee the operation of Cat Dam going forward.

The conversation on Cat Dam was a follow-up to an initial meeting with the Selectmen in mid-October. At that meeting, the Selectmen's office was jam packed with interested neighbors, many of whom stood to hear the hour-long discussion. At the close of the meeting, the Selectmen requested the neighbors, of whom there are two distinct sides, work together to set a new schedule for opening Cat Dam.

At its simplest terms, Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil broke done the two sides of the issue like this: some neighbor would like to see increased flushing of the harbor, while others would like to leave the current flushing schedule the same.

The neighbors advocating for increased flushing cite environmental concerns — increased algae blooms during the early summer, increased phragmite growth and the deterioration of Peck's Meadow. The other side, Vanderweil said, was concerned with leaving a water cover in Little Harbor for aesthetic and property value reasons.

The increased flushing group, spearheaded by Steve and Margie Brown of 275 Jerusalem Road, explained they would like to see a town board take over the operation of the dam.

"[Little Harbor] is a public resource and its health cannot be monitored by neighbors who don't have the proper environmental background," to determine what's best for Little Harbor, said Margie Brown. She said the Conservation Commission could hire an expert to assist them in determining the best course of action with the dam and Little Harbor. Steve Brown said preliminary estimates for a complete study of Cat Dam and Little Harbor could cost in the neighborhood of $200,000.

At the first meeting, the group came to request the town seek a free, non-binding study by the state Coastal Zone Management to evaluate the effects of the dam. However, concerns were raised that CZM was not an objective party and has an agenda to promote flushing wherever possible.

In the meantime, Vanderweil said the Sewer Commission has begun monitoring nutrient levels in Little Harbor in conjunction with the Little Harbor sewer project. It is expected the completion of the project will reduce the amount of nutrients in Little Harbor and improve its overall health, but homes will not be on the sewer system until approximately 2012.

Cat Dam is owned by the town but historically has been maintained and operated by the abutters. For the past few decades, the operational schedule leaves the dam completely open three months of the year (January, February and March) and open three days out of every other month. The rest of the time the tide gates/dam are left closed.

A tentative agreement on a new operational schedule had been discussed to increase the opening of the tide gates by a few days each month. In April and July through December the gates would be left open four days per month. In May and June, the gates would left open four to five days every two weeks during the algae bloom season.

The to-be-established committee would work to fine-tune the operational schedule. The Selectmen and the main proponents on each side agreed some new faces to the committee might be helpful in bringing the issue to a resolution. The neighbors were charged with finding the members of the committee and return to the Selectmen in January.

"If you come back with some names for the committee, we'll empower it. Otherwise, we'll set the schedule," said Vanderweil.

POLICE BEAT

Boston man on crack cocaine frightens women

This time, she wanted to be sure that he was not following her so she drove to Route 3A and made a right onto Kilby street. Soon he was behind her again and was flashing his headlights.

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

At about 10:50 p.m. on Nov. 30, Hingham police put out a BOLO (Be On the Look Out) to other area departments for a brown Toyota Corolla involved in two incidents in that town.

About 40 minutes later, a Cohasset woman contacted Cohasset police about a suspicious man in her driveway.

Hingham police were initially alerted by a North Street woman who pulled into her driveway and found a black man described as being about 40 years old sitting in a brown Toyota. The man appeared to be smoking a glass pipe. She pulled by the car and went into her house and called police. When the man saw her go inside, he drove away.

About 30 minutes later, a woman was walking on South Street in downtown Hingham when a black man in a Toyota approached her and started making harassing comments. She turned and walked in the opposite direction, went home and called police.

At 11:30 p.m. a woman called Cohasset police saying that her mother had just pulled into her driveway off Hull Street in Cohasset and was followed by a brown Toyota.

The second call to Cohasset dispatch was from the woman herself. She reported that the man did pull into her driveway and was asking her questions.

According to Hingham police, who later arrested the man in the Toyota, the Cohasset woman reported she asked him what he wanted and he said he needed directions to Boston. He also reportedly leaned toward her car and said his name was "Smitty." The woman later told police she did not think a normal person would be asking directions at that hour. She put her car into reverse and pulled out onto Hull Street. The man in the Toyota followed her and at this point she called Cohasset police and provided a plate number and description of the car.

She drove down Hull Street and saw him turn down Canterbury Street. This time, she wanted to be sure that he was not following her so she drove to Route 3A and made a right onto Kilby Street. Soon he was behind her again and was flashing his headlights. She turned right onto Rockland Street and pulled behind Hingham Police Officer Phil Tracey's cruiser. He saw her flash her lights and he pulled over; she pulled up beside the officer and explained that she had called the police and that the Toyota was behind her.

The officer told her to drive home and she drove past with the Toyota following. Tracey pulled out behind the Toyota, which was weaving all over the road and radioed for backups. After about 1/4 of a mile, the Toyota stopped. Tracey walked up to the driver's side and Officer Ryan O'Shea walked up to the passenger side. In asking for the operator's license and registration, the officers saw him reach down to the floor. Tracey grabbed his hands and O'Shea pushed him out the driver's side door.

Further investigation revealed a glass, crack cocaine pipe under the seat. The man was identified as Freraud Smith, 52, of 1200 Adams St., Dorchester. He allegedly admitted to having smoked about $100 in crack cocaine that evening and was charged with illegal possession of a Class B substance and operating under the influence of drugs (cocaine). He was also charged with disturbing the peace and cited for marked lanes violation.

Smith told police he had become lost and that is how he ended up in Hingham and Cohasset.

Cohasset Chief James Hussey said in this case the women reported the incidents right away.

"It is important that suspicious activity is reported when it is occurring," he said. "By making that call right away, it is more likely we will be able to prevent a crime or determine the activity was legitimate."

Not registered

At about 11 a.m. on Monday (Nov. 26), an officer driving on Elm Street saw a 1986 Buick Le Sabre that was parked half on the sidewalk and had to be moved. A computer check revealed that the vehicle was unregistered and belonged to a Burlington woman. As it turned out the woman's husband had the car and was doing some carpentry work in town. Police spoke to him to apprise him of the situation and obtain the keys. The woman was cited for allowing an unregistered car to be driven, Chief Hussey said.

MV accidents

• A motorist whose view was blocked by an oncoming car was cited for failure to yield the right of way following an accident last week. Chief Hussey said at 11:36 a.m. on Monday (Nov. 26), a 1999 Toyota driven by a Cohasset resident attempted to pull out of a driveway in the 800 block of Chief Justice Cushing Highway and turn left (north) on Route 3A. A car immediately in front of a southbound 2005 Toyota that was driven by a Scituate resident made a right-hand turn into the driveway, blocking the view. The 1999 Toyota pulled out and hit the 2005 Toyota. No one was transported following the accident, police said.

• A Weymouth man refused medical attention after he hit a stonewall with his 1997 Toyota last Tuesday at 1:15 a.m., on Jerusalem Road. A caller reported hearing a loud crash

Cleaning up manganese in water priority for Water Commission

cipitated manganese and iron, natural constituents of water, Water Commissioner John McNabb explained.

The manganese has always been in the water but, in the last two years, the issue has intensified after the treatment process was altered to address another problem. In 2005, the Water Department changed their treatment process to comply with new federal requirements to reduce the levels of a potential carcinogen Total Trihalomethanes (TTHM) in the drinking water.

To reduce the levels of TTHMs, the Water Department stopped pre-chlorinating the raw water as it entered as it entered the treatment plant and only adds chlorine as one of the last steps in the treatment process. However, the pre-chlorination step was used to remove iron and manganese and the levels of manganese in the treated water have risen.

"Once you do one thing, something else happens," said McNabb.

This past summer, the problem was exacerbated due to increased demand during the drought and summer construction work on the distribution system, particularly in Little Harbor. A total of 97 discolored water calls came into the Water Department in June. In addition, because the Water Commission was encouraging water conservation during the drought this past summer, it didn't feel it was appropriate to be flushing the water mains as much as they would have liked said Glenn Pratt, Water Commission chairman.

"Once you do one thing, something else happens."
— John McNabb, Water Commission

The Water Commission has been aware and working on the manganese issue since it intensified with the treatment process change. In recent months, the Water Commission has been pulling together all its consultants' advice and is looking at all the options available to combat this problem. Currently, six options are underway and ten are under consideration.

The most immediate step will be the installation of an aeration system to Lily Pond. The in-pond aeration system consists of five aeration disks installed in the deeper sections of Lily Pond. The system will be ready for start-up testing and operation by the end of the year. The introduction of oxygen to the pond will help prevent the manganese from being dissolved in the raw water. The result will be less manganese in the raw water entering the plant.

"It's an investment we think holds promise," said Water Commissioner Nathaniel Palmer. The manufacturer says a 90 percent reduction of manganese, but heavy vegetation in Lily Pond may prevent such dramatic results, said Palmer.

"Of all alternatives this was among the least expensive and potentially most effective," Palmer said.

As a side benefit, the increased dissolved oxygen levels will promote a healthy ecosystem in Lily Pond. However, the aeration system will prevent ice skating on Lily Pond this winter.

"We know the aeration system will have an effect on how the ice forms, but it's going to be unpredictable," said Palmer in a phone interview, "it's a public safety issue."

After this winter season, the continued aeration of the pond would depend on the results and could be limited to the three other seasons as not to affect the future use of Lily Pond for ice skating.

In the longer view, a major, $5-6 million retrofit of the Lily Pond Treatment Plant will include the installation of the pre-treatment MIEX system.

"In the pilot program, we found the MIEX system to have a high removal of manganese," said McNabb, the system will also help to reduce the TTHM levels in the water even more. The Water Commission expects to put the project out to bid in spring and begin the two-year construction in the summer. The installation is expected to be complete by the end of 2009.

Targeted flushing of water mains in areas where there were several instances will continue in the spring months.

"If people don't tell us about the problems, we can't do anything about it," said McNabb. "We urge people to call the plant — day or night — about discolored water."

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer suggested a hotline be established for the issue so residents know where to call when they have a problem. He stressed it was important to know the date and time of the incidents so the Water Department could investigate and pinpoint the specific cause(s).

Gymnastic team opened to eighth graders

For 10 years, Cohasset and Norwell high schools have pooled their students' talents on a gymnastics team. However, the cooperative team currently only has one Cohasset High member. Athletic Director Ron Ford came before the committee to request permission to open the varsity gymnastics team to eighth graders.

Six team members are required for a team to participate in a gymnastics meet, Norwell only has six returning gymnasts. Ford feared the team would run the risk of forfeit if any of the gymnasts got injured. After talking with Ruthann Ardizzoni, gymnastics director at the South Shore Community Center, Ford said there were 4 to 6 gymnasts in the eighth grade.

Although the School Committee had previously expressed concerns with having eighth graders participate in high school sports, they seemed to think this was an exception.

"I think this was the mechanism we were looking for," said School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy, "I don't want to see a team not be able to participate."

School Committee chairman Rick Flynn said gymnastics was a more personal sport with limited contact so age and size would make less of a difference. Member Alfred Slanetz raised concerns as to the eighth graders being ready "psychosocially" to participate with the older team members. Ford said it was likely the eighth graders would take on a slightly lesser practice schedule and would mesh well with the team.

"I'd really hate to lose the momentum of this team," said Ford. The School Committee voted 4-0 (member Steve Fusco was absent) to allow eighth graders the opportunity to join the gymnastics team. Ford still needs to seek approval from the league and the MIAA to proceed.

POLICE BEAT

and the investigating officer went to the scene and saw a car with heavy front-end and some rear-end damage. The operator appeared uninjured and explained that he was unfamiliar with the roads and misjudged the turn. The operator was cited for marked lanes violation. There was some damage to the town-owned stonewall and the town will be looking to seek restitution from the man's insurance company, Chief Hussey said.

• Police are hoping to locate the pickup truck that a witness said took the driver's side mirror off a car that was parked on North Main Street near the common last Thursday (Nov. 29). The incident occurred about 1:30 p.m. The damaged car is a 1998 Volvo registered to a Winchester woman. The witness provided a plate number but police have been unable to match it up. Police are trying different combinations of numbers to see if they can locate the pickup.

Foolish fun

Police were able to hunt down one of the cars involved in a foolish incident last week. Police responded after a concerned caller at 3:10 p.m. on Monday (Nov. 26) reported teens traveling in two cars on Route 3A were "all over the road" and "sticking their entire bodies out the windows."

Police spoke to the driver of one of the cars and the other teens in the car and told them to "knock it off," Chief Hussey said. Police did not locate the second car.

Being charged

A 21-year-old Hull woman who, police believe, was involved in a theft of jewelry from a local antique shop is being summoned to court on charges of receiving stolen property valued at more than $250.

Good police work by patrol officers has led to the recovery of the jewelry items that were stolen, Chief Hussey said in a prior interview.

Intoxicated teen

Police took a 16-year-old Cohasset boy in protective custody after finding him "weaving and bobbing" along South Main Street in the village last Friday (Nov. 30) at about 7:30 p.m. Chief Hussey said an officer saw the teen who appeared intoxicated; in speaking with him, he could smell alcohol on his breath. The officer took the teen to the station where he was held until his parents could take custody of him. Police have been unable to determine where the boy obtained the alcohol.

Flashlight

Chief Hussey urges residents who see something suspicious to contact police right away. Last week a caller reported eight hours after the incident, seeing a pickup truck that was "dark in color and loud" in her driveway with two white males inside. The incident occurred sometime between 2-3 a.m., Tuesday (Nov. 27). The caller reported that one of the men got out, went to her side door and started shining a flashlight through the window of the door and looking around inside. He then got back into the car and pulled out, shining the flashlight on houses as they drove off. The incident was reported at 10 a.m. that morning.

Hussey said no plate number was provided. He said the activity is one of concern and that police need to be contacted right away in order to have the opportunity of finding the suspicious men.

A& B charge

A man who lives in another town is facing assault and battery charges after he allegedly hit his girlfriend and kicked her out of the car last week, after they had both reportedly been drinking heavily. Police found the woman near Shaw's; she had been punched in the eye and had been sitting in the cold for several hours. Police in the town where the man lives assisted with his arrest. His girlfriend was transported to the hospital; and later he was also transported after complaining about feeling dizzy and not taking his medication.

Drunk

A medical condition may have contributed to a man's inebriated condition, police said. After receiving a call from a local establishment about a drunk and unruly customer, police went to the location and took the man home to his Cohasset residence. The establishment told police that he had arrived in that condition.

Chief Hussey praised the management for not allowing the man to drive. The incident occurred last Friday (Nov. 30) at about 9:50 p.m.

Mailbox damage

A caller is trying to provide police with information about the vehicle, believed to be a charter bus that damaged a mailbox on Lamberts Lane recently. The caller read about the item in the newspaper and witnessed the incident. The caller is gathering information and will be back in touch, police said.

Attend Town Meeting

The Special Town Meeting last month was not well attended and left at least two School Committee members feeling a little disappointed. School Committee member Lucia Flibotte said she'd like to figure out a way to get more residents to realize the importance of Town Meeting so they will attend.

"Town Meeting barely had a 100-person quorum," said Flibotte. School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy agreed.

"As a town we need to make people understand our form of government," said MacCarthy, explaining how a vote at Town Meeting to raise water rates affects all town departments, including the schools.

School Committee chairman Rick Flynn said the recent special town meeting was "a benign town meeting." But, Flibotte said even at the spring Annual Town Meeting — a budget meeting — didn't bring in a crowd.

Fire lane

The fire lanes around the Cohasset Middle-High School have recently been re-painted in yellow striping. School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy encouraged those visiting the school for basketball games or special events to adhere to the no parking signs and striping of the fire lanes.

"Anyone parking in the fire lane can be ticketed or towed," said MacCarthy, adding she understood the inconvenience especially in the cold of parking in the far lot. However, if cars are parked in the fire lane it will be difficult for an ambulance or a fire truck to maneuver to the school's back doors (near the gymnasium).

"Someone's life could depend on it," said MacCarthy.

SPED van on order

The schools will have a new special education van in the next couple of weeks. At the recent Special Town Meeting voters allocated $45,000 in capital funds to pay for a replacement special education van. The need became a crisis shortly before Town Meeting when the brakes went out on the aging special education van the schools had been using.

School business manager Dave DeGennaro reported he was able to find a new Ford E-250 van for $33,600, a significant savings from the amount allotted by Town Meeting. The van is currently being retrofitted to be handicap accessible and he expects to take delivery in the next two weeks. The schools have been borrowing a van from Scituate to cover the need while a new van is ordered.

Donations accepted

The School Committee accepted donations from the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) and Cohasset Dunkin' Donuts on Wednesday night.

The CEF donated at total of $23,984 in funds for the purchase of several technology items for all three school buildings. The new technology will support and enhance the established curriculum. Osgood classrooms will receive eight new LCD computer monitors to go with classroom computers (12,800). Three digital presenters will be purchased for Deer Hill ($5124). New projectors will be purchased for the Middle School.

"The CEF donations are a fabulous way to jump start and super-charge our programs," said Superintendent Denise Walsh, adding the schools would not be in the place they are now with curriculum development without the technological support made possible by CEF.

"We all appreciate what they've been doing," said Walsh.

The Cohasset Dunkin' Donuts donated $1500 to support the high school swim team. The School Committee accepted both donations unanimously.

Free legal clinic

Do you have a legal question or are you confused about a legal issue? The Bar Association of Norfolk County will sponsor a free legal clinic as a public service to the community from 6 to 8 p.m., Dec. 11, at Quincy District Court, 1 Dennis F. Ryan Parkway, Quincy Center.

A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for one-on-one consultations to discuss legal questions. All consultations are strictly confidential.

Town to stick with single tax rate

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Given the low percentage of commercial properties, the Board of Assessors did not recommend the town opt for a split rate.

Property tax rates will stay uniform for both residential and commercial property for another fiscal year, the Board of Selectmen voted Monday night.

The town's property is valued at over $2.4 billion, including residential, commercial, industrial, and personal property, said Deputy Assessor Mary Quill. Only 6.8 percent of the town's total valuation is commercial, industrial and personal property, leaving over 93 percent of the tax burden on residential properties.

"Cohasset has never had a split rate," said Quill. Given the low percentage of commercial properties, the Board of Assessors did not recommend the town opt for a split rate. A split rate means there would be a higher tax rate for commercial properties. A split tax rate often discourages businesses from locating to a community, said Quill.

"Generally, a split rate should not be considered unless the combined valuation of commercial, industrial and personal property equals 25 percent of the total taxable valuation of the town," stated Quill in a letter to the Selectmen.

The tax rate for Fiscal 2008 is anticipated to increase by 10 cents per $1,000 of assessed valuation, from $10.50 to $10.60. The tax rate will be finalized by the Department of Revenue in the next couple of weeks.

With the 10-cent increase in tax rates, coupled with an average increased property valuation, residents should see an average increase of 3.6 percent.

In the past year, the average valuation of residential property (including single family homes, condominiums and multi-family homes), increased from $750,000 to $770,000. In the same vein, the average tax bill will increase from $7,875 to $8,162, or a $287 increase.

The average valued single family home is assessed at $848,000, a jump from last year's assessed value of $825,000. For the average valued single family home the tax bill will be $8988.

The new tax rate will be reflected in the third quarter tax bills.

Tax bills vary depending on a property's assessed value. By taking the assessed value of the property and dividing it by $1,000 and then multiplying it by the tax rate, a homeowner can compute his property taxes.

Saturday collection for troops at Stop & Shop

Deirdre Wigmore and Ann Marie Goff of the American Legion Women's Auxiliary will be at Stop & Shop from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday collecting items for deployed troops.

They are seeking donations of toiletries and other items for those deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan.

Donations may also be dropped off at the Legion Post on Summer Street daily after 3 p.m. or at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank branches on 3A or in the village.

Monetary donations are also accepted. Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with "Soldiers Project" written in the memo line on the check. Checks can be mailed to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. The following items are being collected at the American Legion for deployed servicemen and women:

Batteries AA and AAA, razors, mouthwash, Chapstick, nuts, shaving cream Ziploc bags of all sizes, hand warmers, baby wipes, pens and notepaper, Pringles, toothbrushes, toothpaste and floss.

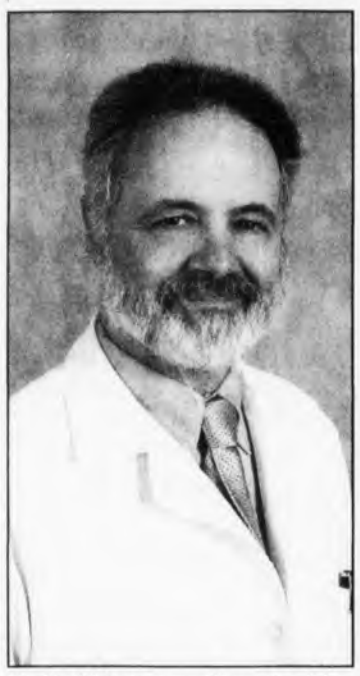
AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Happy Holidays Cohasset to all. The season is here no matter what you celebrate with your family and friends and there are so many wonderful activities, fairs and more happening all around the area. Take the time to enjoy when you can the different events whether they are at home or someone else's home, at a local venue or wherever. Before we know it, 2008 will be here. The weather has decided to meet the season that is for sure. I did here though that this weekend is supposed to warm up a little bit which will be nice. I had a few of my morning walks this past week where it was really beautiful at 7:30 in the am but really, really cold. Well, on with the news and column.



NEW ARRIVAL

Congratulations are in order for Nicole (Barry) Carnes and her husband Brian, along with big sister Delaney as they welcomed a bouncing baby boy into their family on Nov. 2nd. Ronan Gerard Carnes weighed in at 7 pounds. Grandparents are Paul and Edna Barry of Cohasset and Gerry and Mary Ann Carnes of Hingham.

Enjoy this handsome new addition to the family and best of wishes to all.

BC HIGH HONORS

The following Cohasset students achieved high honors, earning at least a 3.8 quality point average for the first quarter at Boston College High School: Thomas J. Chase, 2008; Erikk L. Hokenson 2008; Eric Peter Vanderpool 2009; Keegan Robert Flynn 2010; Paul Oliver Forrer 2010; John McHugh Kearney 2010; Maxwell Otto Shipp 2010; Charles Dirkson Coffman 2011; William Travers Craven 2011; James Vincent McKelvey 2011; Colin Lewis Quinlan 2011; Scott Franklin Wilson 2011; and Christopher Franklin Wilson 2011.

Dr. Paul Musto recently received the distinction of one of the "Best Doctors in America."

The following students achieved honors, earning at least a 3.2 quality point average for the first quarter: Alexander Shipp 2008; Kyle T. DeSisto 2009; Patrick E. Hurley 2009; David M. Hernon 2010; Robert Christopher McCunney 2010; Thomas Joseph Pecca 2010; Mark H. Dick 2011; Anthony J. Testa 2011; and Michael F. Troy 2011.

TOP DOC

Cohasset resident Dr. Paul C. Musto, from the Quincy office of Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology, recently received the distinction of one of the "Best Doctors in America" in Medical Oncology and Hematology for 2007-2008. CHO is the largest community-based private cancer care group in New England.

Compiled by Boston-based Best Doctors Inc., the "Best Doctors in America" is derived from a peer-reviewed survey of more than 40,000 physicians in the United States. This survey asked which specialists they would choose for care of themselves or a loved one. Only those doctors recognized in the top 3 to 5 percent of their specialty earn this honor.

Dr. Musto is board certified in hematology, medical oncology and internal medicine, and has hospital appointments at Quincy Medical Center, Caritas Carney Hospital, Milton Hospital and South Shore Hospital. He received his doctor of medicine degree from Michigan State University College of Human Medicine and his bachelor of science degree from Michigan State University Honors College.

N. SCITUATE

This weekend North Scituate will be hosting its Holiday Celebration. The Sandbar (artisan coop and eco-friendly boutique) owned by Cohasset resident, Margie Koenig, will be serving wine on Friday evening and roasting marshmallows on Saturday. In addition, you will receive 15 percent off all store purchases. Buy One Get One Blessing Ring Bookmark and/or Necklace (great stocking stuffers for boys or girls or teacher gifts...$8), 25 percent off all custom hand-stamped jewelry by MeKoenig (personalized discs/hearts with your special message, kids names, special dates, or whatever else you want to make it special!) The Holiday Celebration will happen on Dec. 7 from 5 -8 pm with shops open until 8. There will be Strolling Carolers, Holiday Lights, Wine Tasting and Refreshments with more surprises in store. On Saturday, Dec. 8, the times are from 11 am-3 pm with Open Houses, Treats for all,. This event is sponsored by the North Scituate Village Merchants and the Scituate Chamber of Commerce and even though it is not in Cohasset, it is a wonderful family event for all and Margie would love to see you all there!

Lordy, lordy, looks who's 40!

Laura (Pompeo) Ritz is making 40 the new 30! Laura turned the BIG 4-0 on Dec. 5. If you see her around town, be sure to wish her a Happy Birthday! With love from her family, friends and adoring fans.

CDC AUDITIONS

This is the weekend for auditions for Cohasset Dramatic Club's Spring musical, "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" by Andrew Lloyd Webber, will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall, on Sunday, Dec. 9 at 6 pm for youth ages 10 and up and at 7:30 pm for Adults. Auditions will also be held on Monday, Dec. 10 at 6:30 p.m. for youth ages 10 and up and at 7:30 p.m. for adults. Callbacks, if needed, will be Tuesday, Dec. 11 at 7 pm. Cast size can vary. Both men and women are needed, specifically as many as 17 principal men (some of these parts can be played by women) and 2 specific women with a women's chorus; there will also be a youth chorus of 20-24, ages 10 and up. Boys and girls are welcome. Audition requirements are a prepared 16-32 bars of an upbeat song in the style of the show. Music from the show is acceptable as well. There will be a dance movement audition as well, so dress comfortably. Some may be asked to do a cold reading. Performance dates will be Feb. 29, March 1, 2, 7,8,9,14,15,16 at the Cohasset Town Hall. The show will be directed by Lisa Rafferty, with music direction by Mark Bono. It will be produced by Lisa Pratt. For any questions regarding auditions or anything pertaining to the show including a more complete description of the show, please contact Lisa Pratt at 617-852-0091.

HOLIDAY STROLL

Here is information on our super community Holiday event for downtown. Village merchants are busy planning the annual Cohasset Village Holiday Stroll to be held on Saturday Dec. 15 in Cohasset Village, encompassing South Main Street, Elm Street, Depot Court, Pleasant Street, and Ripley Road. From 4-7 p.m. the streets will be alive with holiday cheer as businesses stay open late with refreshments, open houses, entertainment, and special holiday celebrations. For children, there will be a hay ride and visits with Santa. Each participating business will offer a raffle prize; tickets are available at the Village businesses and all proceeds will benefit the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project. For more information visit any of the Village locations.

That is all for this week. Send me in all of your news and information no later than Tuesday by 5 pm.

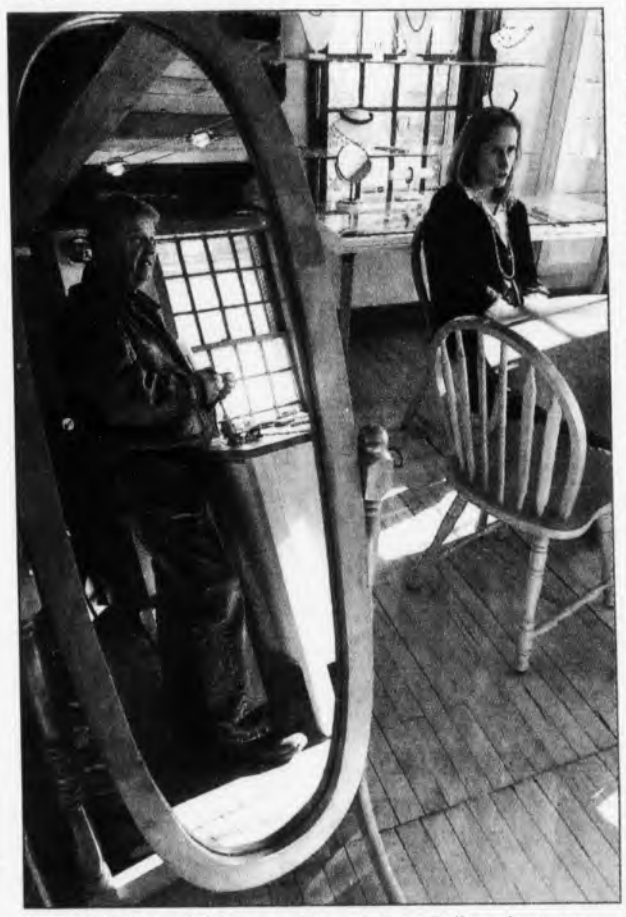
Beads, jewelry focus of new village shop

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A mixture of light, color and a bit of sparkle welcome visitors to the recently opened shop, Sagestone Beads, in Cohasset Village. The tiny but historic building on Elm Street, once home to a blacksmith, has been re-incarnated as a hand-crafted jewelry and bead shop.



"The building is magical," says Sagestone Beads owner Sage Belber as she sits at her worktable at the rear of the building. The former Donna Green Studio now has walls lined with hanging strings of vibrant beads and finished necklaces. Glass cases hold colorful gemstones just waiting to be transformed into someone's favorite piece of jewelry. Midday light floods the one-room building and spotlights shine on each of the cases and its contents creating a bright and cheery atmosphere.

Sagestone Beads offers hand crafted finished pieces of gemstone jewelry and materials (and instruction, if desired) for those with creative inspiration.

"Even if you've never made anything in your life, come in and we'll sit down and walk you through the process," says Sage, a Scituate resident.

The village shop opened its doors the week before Thanksgiving, but Cohasset Farmer's Market regulars will recognize Sage and her one-of-a-kind jewelry. She has been a fixture at the weekly summer event for the last six years. Up until she opened Sagestone, farmer's markets including the one in Harvard Square and Copley Square, were her main mode of sale.

"I never thought I would have a store," says Sage, but when the opportunity came to occupy her current space in Cohasset she seriously thought about it, "I already had the stock," so it seemed a logical next step.

Steve Hill, left, of Cohasset talks with Sage Belber about a possible new men's line of jewelry that the two of them are working on while buying a leather string for some Tibetan Prayer beads.

Sage has been making jewelry since she was a teenager, but started doing it professionally in 2001 under the name "Jewelry by Sage". Always an artist, she studied painting and photography in undergraduate and graduate school and was primarily an oil painter.

However, while pregnant with her first daughter, Cleo, she decided to pursue this new artistic endeavor and hasn't looked back yet. Her first materials were shells and beads she has picked up while visiting New Mexico.

"I just used what I had and when I made a sale I kept putting the money back into the business," says Sage.

Now, at Sagestone there are literally thousands of beads to choose from and to peruse — all high quality, the majority of which are hand cut stones from India.

"Indian cut stone is really the best," explains Sage. The colorful gemstones are each hand cut and have fine facets to show off the color and allow light into the stone. The industry is mostly family-owned businesses, "it's a skill passed down by generations," she says.

Each bead is unique and she's learned that if she sees something she likes she needs to buy it then and there, "there's no looking back, you just won't see it again."

A few times each year, Sage travels to New York City to buy stones from dealers who make regular trips to India. Bead prices start at10 cents, "you can make a nice pair of earrings for as little as $10," says Sage.

Sage hopes to do children and adult parties in the future. She's already started a beginner group class for those who want to learn how to make jewelry.

Sage's own jewelry creations are like treats for the eye. Chunky necklaces with big beads in bold colors, earthy leather adorned with a mix of gemstones — iolite, topaz, green and red garnet, and bracelets with dozens of pure white pearls are just a few of the standouts.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Sage Belber, owner of Sagestone Beads, stands next to a colorful array of beads on display at her new store in Cohasset Village on Elm Street.

"My favorite pieces to do are the one of a kind ones that are really extravagant. I like to push myself to the limit to create something I have yet accomplished before," says Sage. As an example she brings out a delicate necklace dripping with gemstones hung on a very fine chain. Upon closer scrutiny, Sage explains she crocheted the 14-karat gold chain then added the stones — quartz and citrine, in shades of gold and auburn — as she went along. A bracelet with the same type of crocheted chain and dozens of pink tourmaline and purple tanzanite beads is another example, "I try to let the stone speak for itself," says Sage.

While her inspiration often comes from the stones, she often turns to nature for her muse — trees, colors in the sky, birds. She'll scan the photos in National Geographic looking for colors and new ideas for her jewelry.

Sage's jewelry ranges in prices from a pair of earrings for $38 to an elaborate necklace for over $1000.

Recently, Sage's jewelry has caught the attention of Hollywood. Her brother-in-law, Stephen Belber, a screenwriter and director is currently working on a movie "Management" and told the costume designer about Sage's jewelry. Consequently, some of her pieces will be featured in the upcoming feature film starring Hollywood A-lister Jennifer Aniston. The costume designer then gave Aniston a catalog and she purchased 11 pieces from the catalog for her personal collection.

In addition to her own creations, Sage sells a selection of pieces from two other artisans. Heather Hoffman of Rosindale is a fellow jewelry maker who has unique necklaces, bracelets and rings.

"I don't do rings so her jewelry is a nice complement to my pieces," says Sage. Like Sage's jewelry, Hoffman's pieces are all handmade and one of a kind.

If you're looking for something more tactile than a necklace or a ring, there are hand knit sweaters by Jan McKillip, who owns the shop on Block Island. The sweaters are both colorful and whimsical and each is a one of a kind creation.

Sage is looking forward to seeing familiar Farmer's Market faces and meeting new customers. "I'd like to be a meeting place for people. They can come, have fun and make jewelry," says Sage. "I feel so lucky to be in such a beautiful little spot."

Sagestone Beads is open 10a.m. to 6p.m. Wednesday to Saturday and noon to 5p.m. on Sunday. For more information, call 781-383-6766 or visit www.jewelrybysage.biz.

The art of quietly helping others

group is Womanade, we serve all people, not just women."

As part of its outreach effort this holiday season, Womanade is contributing gift cards to the Hingham Interfaith Food Pantry at Second Parish to be included in 80 gift baskets that will be distributed to needy South Shore residents.

The Hingham/Hull Womanade is an offshoot of a group started in 2002 known as "Washington [D.C.] Womanade." Similar groups have formed around the country.

The four women go about their business in an efficient yet unobtrusive way, providing much-needed assistance and hope during difficult times. Their good works range from providing warm clothing for a child whose single mother had just lost her job to giving assistance, through DOVE, Inc. (Domestic Violence Ended) in Quincy, to a woman who had left an abusive situation to live on her own.

While the help Womanade offers is wide-reaching, the formula is simple — avoid meetings, paperwork, and overhead costs by holding women's gatherings several times a year and asking the guests to make a donation of at least $35.

The women who accept these invitations are also asked to be the eyes and ears of the group by submitting the name of a family or individual they may know to be in need along with their donations.

Every cent goes directly to people in need of assistance. The Womanade board covers all administrative costs.

Womanade benefits individuals and families who are homeless, poor, ill, or in need of a small amount of cash to meet everyday needs. This could mean paying a doctor or a delinquent utility bill, making rent payments to avoid eviction, or providing money for groceries, clothing, eyeglasses, or to fill a prescription.

So far this year, the Hingham/Hull chapter has made 65 donations to local individuals and families totaling more than $20,000, or an average of $313 per family.

"We are not a large organization, but I think we help families in small, but meaningful, ways," said Powers.

The charity augments efforts by other agencies and consults with social workers and school counselors to screen and subsequently designate those who are eligible for assistance.

"We have developed great working relationships with the Hingham Public Schools, St. Paul's, Notre Dame, the Hingham Interfaith Food Pantry, the Veterans Agency, the Hingham Department of Elder Services, South Shore Visiting Nurses, DOVE, Wellspring in Hull, and several other agencies," Pershing said. "We are able to legally donate to an agency without us having to know the recipient's name." This protects their clients' privacy.

"The recipients tend to be mostly families, many in single-women households," said Pershing, "but we have also helped families with dads heading up the household who are struggling to make ends meet as well as single people trying to get back on their feet after a major illness or disaster."

The group also helps elderly couples with fuel bills and co-pays for their prescriptions and provides them with grocery store gift cards. All requests for help are confidential.

In the past, Womanade helped pay for funeral expenses for a young child and contributed gift cards for the baskets distributed to more than 60 families during the holidays by the Hingham Interfaith Food Pantry at Second Parish Church.

Wellspring in Hull is one example of the partnership Womanade fosters with local agencies. "We have a great connection with Womanade," said Vinny Harte, executive director of Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull. "A lot of times, people who are working toward independence can't do it alone. Often our first friend in helping them to get out of that hole and move forward is Womanade."

Wellspring's mission is to provide support and skills to people facing challenges to their financial, physical, or emotional well being in order to help them achieve independence and self-sufficiency. Wellspring provides "a hand up, not a hand-out."

"Womanade asks the right questions but doesn't tie things up in red tape," Harte said. "One hundred percent of the money raised is used to help people, not to pay rent on office space or to pay salaries."

This year Womanade is one of the charities being supported by the Journal's annual Gifts of Hope Campaign). Checks should be made out to Womanade and sent to Gifts of Hope Program; c/o Anne Rodwell; Community Newspaper Company; 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050

How you can help

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For 15 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join The Cohasset Mariner in supporting three charities: Wellspring, Womanade, and the Social Service League in their efforts to help those in need this holiday season. A donation of any size goes a long way.

Please make your tax-deductible check or money order payable to: Wellspring, Womanade or the Social Service League.

Avalon continuing to work with DEP

non-compliance for the prospective Avalon site, which is on 62 acres on the west side of Route 3A. The notice came as a result of a DEP audit performed on the Avalon property in April and outlined certain tests, analysis and reporting that needed to be completed in the next 60 days, or by Aug. 20.

When the deadline passed, the DEP issued an informal extension. In September, Barao said the DEP had seen a "good faith effort" by the developer to submit all the required information. Avalon has submitted the bulk of the required information, however, it was unable to gain access to Whitney-Thayer Woods owned by the Trustees of Reservations. The notice of non-compliance requires groundwater and soil testing to be completed on the property.

The administrative consent order mandates Avalon complete the necessary testing on the down gradient property (Whitney-Thayer Woods) within 150 days of receiving access to it. Within seven days of receiving written approval for access, Avalon is required to notify the DEP. The DEP's deadline of 150 days does not begin until Avalon receives access to Whitney-Thayer Woods.

Scott Dale, Avalon Vice President of development, said Avalon has resolved the access issue and is ready to move forward with the testing. He estimates being able to complete the testing and file the findings with the DEP within 90 days.

The testing required on the Avalon property has been completed, said Dale.

"All the testing just recently performed confirmed the conclusions reached previously were valid," said Dale and he does not expect the additional testing on the Whitney-Thayer Woods to be any different.

Avalon has provided the DEP with interim information as they work on completing the post-audit statement, but the scope of testing required couldn't be completed in the initial 60-day time period, "it was a timing issue."

"We're as concerned as anyone, we're not doing these tests reluctantly. It gives us a greater level of confidence."

— Scott Dale, Avalon vice president

"We're as concerned as anyone, we're not doing these tests reluctantly," said Dale, "it gives us a greater level of confidence."

Once the final testing is complete, Avalon will need to send in a revision of the documents previously submitted to address the DEP's concerns. The other option would be to retract the existing reports and, essentially, start over again.

The current Avalon property is the former location of several manufacturing companies, most recently the Webb-Norfolk Conveyor, a n airport conveyor belt manufacturer that occupied the site from 1975 to 1995. The DEP's audit report stated Webb-Norfolk had a "long history of oil and hazardous materials use marked by poor storage and disposal practices," citing several DEP violations over the years.

The Water Commission requested the audit in the early spring out of its long concern hazardous contamination remained on the site from the prior owners.

The Avalon project was issued a comprehensive permit from the ZBA for 200 apartments more than three years ago. It was approved as a 40-B project. Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

Sewer issue under appeal

The Avalon Cohasset has pursued two avenues for sewer connection: a town sewer tie-in and on-site groundwater discharge. Currently, both options are in an appeal process.

The Water Commission appealed the DEP's approval of the on-site groundwater discharge permit in August. Lily Pond, which is the prime source of the town's drinking water, is located approximately one-mile from the proposed Avalon site. The commission was concerned the wastewater treatment system would contribute to groundwater pollutants, increase nutrient loading and adversely impact water quality in Lily Pond. The appeal is currently under review by the DEP.

Avalon representatives have said a town sewer tie-in is the preferred mode for wastewater treatment. After being denied sewer tie-in at the local Zoning Board of Appeals level, Avalon appealed to the state Housing Appeals Committee, the division of the state Department of Housing and Community Development that rules on 40-B issues if they are denied at the local Zoning Board of Appeals level and the town is under the 10 percent affordable threshold. In September, the Housing Appeals Committee upheld the ZBA's decision to deny Avalon a town sewer tie-in. Avalon has now appealed that decision to Superior Court.

Relief from airplane noise

By Ralph Dormitzer
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In October of this year the FAA issued a Record of Decision (ROD) authorizing a significant change in flight routes into and out of Logan International Airport. The effect of this change will be to reduce noise in most communities on the North and South shores by rerouting air traffic and by raising the altitude of over flights as they cross the shoreline.

The ROD is the culmination of efforts by the Community Advisory Committee (CAC), the FAA, and Massport in Phase I of the Boston Logan Airport Noise Study to enhance existing or develop new noise-abatement measures applicable to aircraft over flights.

The effort to reduce noise pollution over Cohasset began in March 2001 with an appropriation of $30,000 by Town Meeting plus additional appropriations of $18,500 and $30,000 in 2002, to support a lawsuit brought against Massport by communities that would be affected by the proposed building of a new runway. The lawsuit was unsuccessful, and in August 2002 the FAA authorized the building of new runway 14/32 at Logan. The ROD that authorized the runway, however, contained a series of mitigation measures, one of which was the Boston Logan Airport Noise Study funded by the FAA and Massport. Now, after six years of meetings, studies, and negotiations, and $3 million later, the CAC, FAA, and Massport have agreed on seven specific measures that will significantly improve the noise environment in Cohasset and many other towns.

For Cohasset the major change is that departing flights will be higher before crossing the shoreline and will remain east of Minot's Light before making the turn south or west.

Prior to the Noise Study and the new runway, approximately 80 percent of all the air traffic from Logan flew over Cohasset. This results from the fact that Logan is north and east of most destinations and Cohasset is the preferred shoreline crossing for flights to the South and West. Two major runway configurations (9/4 and 22/27) cause departures over Cohasset, and one major runway configuration (27/33) causes arrivals over Cohasset. Runways are identified by geographic heading. Add a "0" to each number to obtain the runway heading. The first number is the departure and the second is the arrival e.g., 9/4 means the initial departure heading is 90 degrees and the arrival 40 degrees.

Of the seven over flight measures that will be implemented, four affect departures and three affect arrivals. For Cohasset the major change is that departing flights will be higher before crossing the shoreline and will remain east of Minot's Light before making the turn south or west. Today departing flights cross the town at between 6,000 and 9,000 feet altitude. With the change, over flights will cross the town at between 10,000 and 14,000 feet altitude. In addition, approximately 40 percent of the flights will cross the shoreline south of Cohasset and still higher in altitude. Arriving flights, principally those landing on runway 33 will have an over-the-water alternative using the mouth of Boston Harbor as an arrival corridor. As this is a visual procedure without the benefit of the instrument landing systems at Logan, it will be used only in good-visibility and low-traffic conditions. Several of these changes will be implemented in the next three or four months and the remainder, those that depend on GPS and computer- directed flight management systems on board aircraft, in approximately one year.

Finally, even though none of the over flight measures have been implemented, Cohasset has benefited unexpectedly from the addition of the 14/32 runway. It has enabled Logan to reverse the 27/33 configuration. Now, in northwest winds above 10 knots, runway 33, previously used for arrivals (with planes crossing Cohasset at between 1,500 and 3,000 feet) is used for departures and runways 27 and 32 are used for arrivals. None of these cross Cohasset. I anticipate that, when fully implemented, the sum of all these changes will provide significant relief from aircraft noise for Cohasset.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer is Cohasset's representative to the Community Advisory Committee.

Village holiday stroll is Saturday, Dec. 15

Village merchants are busy planning the annual Cohasset Village Holiday Stroll to be held on Saturday, Dec. 15th in Cohasset Village, encompassing South Main Street, Elm Street, Depot Court, Pleasant Street, and Ripley Road. From 4-7 p.m. the streets will be alive with holiday cheer as businesses stay open late with refreshments, open houses, entertainment, and special holiday celebrations. For children, there will be a hay ride and visits with Santa.

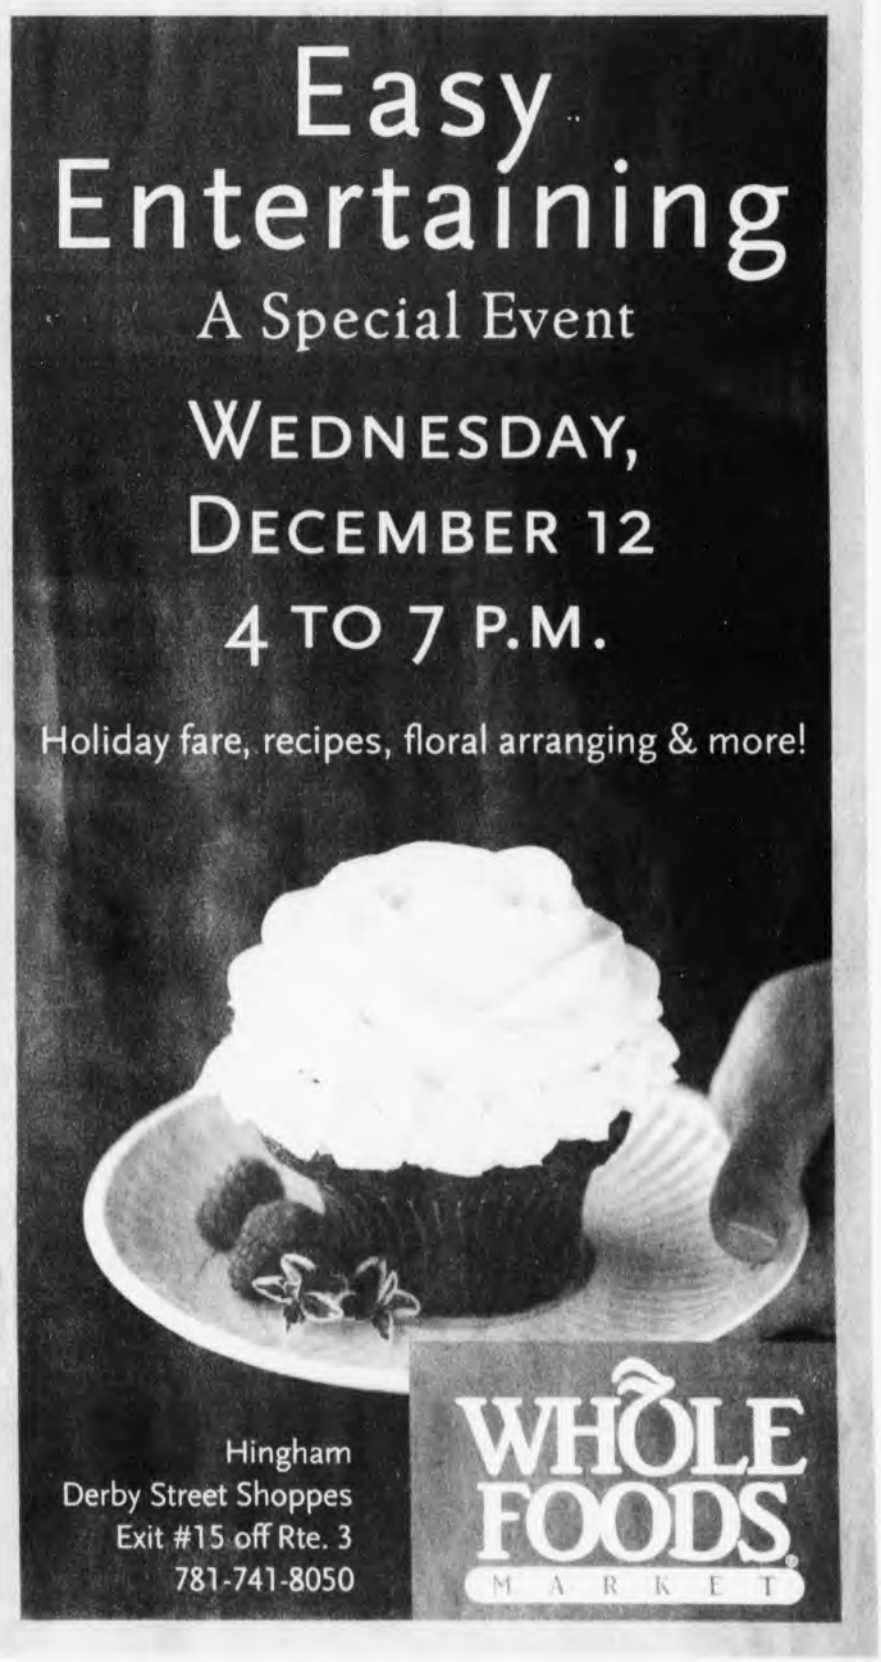
Each participating business will offer a raffle prize; tickets are available at the Village businesses and all proceeds will benefit the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project.

For more information visit any of the Village locations.

Cohasset Triathlon field almost full

The Cohasset Triathlon Association announces that there are just 200 spots left in the second annual Cohasset Sprint Triathlon. The race is set for Sunday, June 29, 2008, with a start time of 8 a.m.

According to founder and race director Bill Burnett, "The overwhelming response to our 2008 race is a fantastic tribute the successful of our race this year."



The race field is limited to 700 individual and two to three-person relay teams. The race will consist of a quarter-mile ocean swim, followed by a 12.5-mile bike course and a 3.2-mile run. This USAT sanctioned race is expected to draw both first-time triathlon participants as well as ranked elite athletes.

At the inaugural race this year, the top three male finishers were Scott Colton of Riviera Beach, Fla., with a time of 56:47.00; Joe Walsmith of Scituate, with a time of 1:00.39; and Brian Noyes of Duxbury, with a time of 1:00.49.

The top three female finishers were Pamela Roesch of Whitman, with a time of 1:09.37; Judy Stavis of Cohasset, with a time of 1:10.47; and Erica Allen of Boston, with a time of 1:11.28.

The Cohasset Triathlon supports the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, which helps kids with the lifelong disease. The event's net proceeds will go directly to JDRF, and participants are encouraged to gather sponsors to help find a cure for juvenile diabetes and its life-threatening complications. This year's race donated $50,219 to the JDRF.

For more information about the race, visit the updated Web site at www.cohasset-tri.com. Online race registration is available through Active.com.

Finding a friend a home for life

Local woman launches the Martha Foundation

By Maren Handorf
CORRESPONDENT

For many, the concept of a lifelong home might not be something about which to think twice. Martha, however, was not afforded the luxury of a lifelong home. Nor was she fortunate enough, as many are, to live with the security of knowing she would always have a place to call home. This is because Martha, a 52-year-old Hingham resident, is a mildly developmentally challenged adult. Unfortunately, Martha's future has always hung in the balance because very limited options exist for the developmentally challenged once their parents or caretakers are no longer able to care for them.

Martha's luck changed, however, when an old childhood friend, Maria Read, re-entered her life. As seven-year-olds, Martha and Read had shared the same neighborhood in Hingham. Read, then oblivious to Martha's developmental challenges, remembers the dolls and snacks of cookies and grape juice the two girls shared. But as a young adult Read left Hingham to continue on with her life; Martha was left behind. (Read asked that Martha's last name not be used to protect her privacy.)

It wasn't until years later in 1984 when Read returned to Hingham with her two children that she and Martha re-connected. At first, the two childhood friends simply ran into each other around town. Read, however, became increasingly concerned for Martha, as Martha's elderly mother had not arranged for Martha's lifelong care.

It wasn't until Martha's mother took ill and was hospitalized that Read became legally responsible for Martha. Read welcomed Martha into her home, where Martha lived for several months while Read researched other options for Martha. To Read's dismay, virtually no such options existed. While assisted living and group homes are available for the developmentally challenged, Martha fell through the cracks because she was so high functioning. Read was stunned to learn of the 10-year wait for acceptance into a group home; because Martha is mildly developmentally challenged, she would likely be delayed admittance in favor of more developmentally challenged candidates, therefore prolonging the wait.

> "This security is what makes us different. Parents and caretakers will have the peace of mind that their loved ones will be secure even after they die."
> – Maria Read, The Martha Foundation

Out of discouragement and failed attempts to find Martha a comfortable, safe living environment, Read decided to address the problem herself. Through extensive research, Read discovered she was not alone in her pursuit of developing an assisted living community for the developmentally challenged. An organization called COFAR, the Coalition of Families and Advocates for the Retarded, had already demonstrated interest in developing private sector community living for the retarded; communities that would mirror the elder care system. This, Read says, "is something that the elder health care providers have looked into, but doors have always closed. I'm not sure why they haven't pursued it harder."

Over the next four years, Read researched her idea of building a community for the mildly developmentally challenged with the premise that these individuals would be given a home for life.

In June 2004, Read's idea to create a community for Martha and her peers was transformed into a not-for-profit organization christened, The Martha Foundation.

With help from Operations Managing Supervisor Kati Cini and her team of advisors, Read established a secure business plan that will allow for the residents to age in place. "This security," Read says, "is what makes us different. Parents and caretakers will have the peace of mind that their loved ones will be secure even after they die."

The assisted living community, named the Independence Apartments, will be built on 13 acres of land donated by Hingham Resources, LLC, on Sanderson Avenue in Weymouth. Targeted towards the mildly developmentally challenged, the community will be comprised of 70 units. Residents will undergo an intense application process that will include a letter of intent, an evaluation from a doctor and psychologist, as well as a list of basic criteria. There is a required $300,000 subscription fee that will leave with the resident, as well as a monthly care fee. Construction of the community is estimated at $15 million, and Read hopes to have the residence running by 2009.

Read emphasizes that the Independence Apartments are targeted only towards the mildly developmentally challenged. Residents should already be able to take care of their basic needs, although they will be taught and assisted by the residence's staff. "The Independence Apartments are not a good fit for some people," says Read, "for example my little brother Joey, who has Down's syndrome. My heart bleeds for those for whom this community won't fit." But Read says that as the Martha Foundation grows, she hopes to expand the spectrum of candidates. Read also hopes to offer scholarships some day.

Lifelong friends, Maria Read and Martha. Read started the Martha Foundation which plans to build a home for mildly developmentally challenged adults, like Martha, in Weymouth.

While Read is more than ready to begin building, the foundation is waiting on commitments from investors and parents. "If parents really want this, they have to commit so that we can go forward," says Read. As the visionary of the Martha Foundation, Read's ultimate goal is to be able to bring her business plan to other companies, to people like herself, so that they will be able to duplicate her template.

Though overwhelming, Read says that the entire process has been extremely rewarding and exciting for everyone, especially for Martha. "Martha has brought so much joy into our family and into our lives - she brings us down to reality."

Conceived out of frustration at a lack of opportunity for the developmentally challenged, and born from a childhood friendship, has grown the Martha Foundation, and with it will come a home for life.

Buttonwood Books sponsors Book Angel Program

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, is sponsoring its annual Book Angel Program to benefit local children. The goal of the program is to promote literacy and give the gift of reading to a local child. The book angel selects an angel from the tree in the store and buys a book for the child described on the angel. Buttonwood will give a 15 percent discount on the book and deliver the book to the appropriate agency. Program recipients will be Wellspring in Hull, Friends of the Homeless in Weymouth and the Blue Hills Healthy Families serving the South Shore.

This is the 14th year Buttonwood has sponsored the Book Angel Program. About 200 books were donated last year. The program runs through Dec. 21.

Giving spirit

Nine-year-olds donate gifts to Toys for Tots

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Two nine-year-old boys recently learned how good it feels to give rather than receive.

Taggart Eymer and Zander Schubert, third graders at Deer Hill, donated 54 gifts from their birthday party to Toys for Tots. They delivered the new, unwrapped toys — all nine bagfuls of them — to the Armed Forces recruiting office in Quincy last Thursday afternoon.

"It was really cool," says Taggart of the experience as he and Zander shuffle through some of the photos taken when they delivered the toys. Together they filled an extra large box, about the same height as themselves, with the toys.

A total of 54 gifts, ranging from sports equipment to board games to Lego sets, were donated to Toys for Tots. The mission of the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots Program is to collect new, unwrapped toys during October, November and December each year, and distribute those toys as Christmas gifts to needy children in the community in which the campaign is conducted. A Toys for Tots drop box is located in the Cohasset Police station on Elm Street.

"I felt proud of myself that I did something for somebody else and not for me," says Taggart.

The boys talk excitedly about meeting Marine Sergeant Joseph Gaddi who greeted and thanked them for their donations. In his formal dress blues for the occasion, both Taggart and Zander asked Gaddi about his Marine experiences. Gaddi has been on two tours in Iraq and explained to the boys about what each of the medals on his uniform meant. They called him a real life hero.

Selene Eymer, Taggart's mother, originally came up with the idea to donate all the toys from their recent joint birthday party to Toys for Tots. The boys jumped on board with the idea pretty quickly.

Taggart and Xander say they have been friends since they "were in their mom's tummies." They were born just months apart: Taggart in July and Xander in November. The boys decided over the summer to have a joint birthday party. They settled on a football theme, "Taggart and Zander's Gridiron Classic," to be exact. They invited all of their friends and classmates to join in a flag football game held at Milliken Field on a November Sunday afternoon.

On the invitation they requested guests to bring one unwrapped toy, which would then be donated, to Toys for Tots. About 36 friends came to play football and those who didn't want to play in the game served as the game's press — complete with disposable cameras and press passes.

"We didn't want anyone to feel left out," says Taggart.

When they got home from the party, they spread out the toys and they said it was tempting to want to keep all the shiny, new toys for themselves. The toys ranged from Lego sets to footballs to Matchbox cars, mostly toys a boy of their same age might like. But, after looking through all of the toys, they realized just how many of the toys they already had.

Both boys said giving the toys away and meeting Sergeant Gaddi was the best part of the whole experience — even better than the birthday party itself.

"We already have a houseful of toys, we didn't need anymore," says Zander. Taggart chimes in that the kids the toys will go to probably need a little more fun in their life and the toys will help.

In fact, bringing a "message of hope" to needy youngsters through a shiny new toy at Christmas is what the Marines intend to do with the Toys for Tots program.

The mission of the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots Program is to collect new, unwrapped toys during October, November and December each year, and distribute those toys as Christmas gifts to needy children in the community in which the campaign is conducted. Through the distribution of the toys, the Marines hope to motivate the youngsters to grow into responsible, productive, patriotic citizens and community leaders.

The boys and their parents put together a slideshow of pictures and music to send as a thank you to the party guests for participating.

Both boys said giving the toys away and meeting Sergeant Gaddi was the best part of the whole experience — even better than the birthday party itself.

"We're doing this again next year," the boys enthusiastically say.

Toys for Tots drive under way

Cohasset police are joining with the Marines Corps in the annual holiday Toys for Tots campaign through Dec. 24.

New toys and games can be dropped off at the Cohasset Police Headquarters, on Elm Street, 24 hours a day, and seven days a week. Toys and games should not be wrapped.

For more information, call the police station at 781-383-1055.

We'll make you smile.

Tax base

Those listening to or reading local news reports know well that "this is the season" for determining a town's tax rate.

Communities like Cohasset go through the annual exercise of deciding whether to stick with a single tax rate for residential and commercial or go with a split rate that would put more of the tax burden on commercial properties.

It is absolutely no surprise that Cohasset Selectmen vote the single tax rate every year. In fact, it is such a sure thing that one could bet on it and be assured of winning the wager.

What always surprises us, however, is how small Cohasset's commercial tax base actually is.

Route 3A wends its way through Cohasset — and compared to Scituate and Marshfield and the part of 3A before the Hingham Rotary in Hingham — our town looks like it has a fair amount of commercial property.

The town's property is valued at more than $2.4 billion, including residential, commercial, industrial, and personal property. But only 6.8 percent of the town's total valuation is commercial, industrial and personal property, leaving over 93 percent of the tax burden on residential properties.

Municipalities do not generally split their tax rate unless the combined valuation of commercial, industrial and personal property taxes equals about 25 percent or more of the total valuation of the town.

Town Manager Bill Griffin has noted on Cape Cod, there is not a single community with a split tax rate.

Town officials realize that splitting the tax rate would make Cohasset less attractive to prospective businesses, given the added burden that would fall on their shoulders.

Also, since the town is 93 percent residential – the change would only decrease property tax bills a small amount for residential taxpayers and send commercial rates soaring.

For example, lowering the proposed $10.60 tax rate just a few cents for residential property owners — would result in a tax rate of more than $15 for commercial property.

However, with that being said homeowners' tax bills are continuing to rise.

Back in 1992 – when the current editor started covering Cohasset – the average home in town was assessed at $300,000 and the tax rate was $12, yielding an annual bill of $3,600.

The average valued single family home is now assessed at $848,000, a jump from last year's assessed value of $825,000. For the average valued single family home the tax bill will be $8988.

Tax bills vary depending on a property's assessed value. By taking the assessed value of the property and dividing it by $1,000 and then multiplying it by the tax rate, a homeowner can compute his property taxes.

No one is advocating building a Derby Street Shoppes in Cohasset – but the taxes that shopping center generates for Hingham have boosted the town's revenues substantially.

We continue to applaud the work of the Economic Development Committee in seeking out ways to increase Cohasset's commercial tax base. We all love Cohasset just the way it is – but smart development and redevelopment along Route 3A and a vibrant Village can only help the bottom line and won't hurt the town's character one bit with the zoning and planning boards providing the appropriate oversight.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Rusty Skippers' conductor is superb

TO THE EDITOR,

We had a full house at our Rusty Skippers annual Holiday Pops concert on Saturday: an overflow crowd in the pews and a large (30-plus players) band squeezed in to the spaces all around the front of First Parish Meeting House. Once again, our wonderful director Steve Biagini found us a terrific collection of pieces to play, such as perennial favorite "Sleigh Ride" and a host of new selections, including "Shake Hands with Santa Claus," featuring Lilly Sestito as guest soloist. Our joy in playing seems to have been shared by the audience, who responded to the music with applause and with generous donations totaling $500 to benefit the Cohasset Food Pantry. The band loves to play, anywhere, any time, but especially for such a good cause. We are glad to bring joy to those who hear our music and to make a contribution to our community.

Speaking of generosity, on behalf of the band I want to publicly acknowledge the gifts of talent and time of Steve Biagini. So many of you have commented to me how much you enjoyed the concert, and how great the Rusty Skippers sound. Yes, we have several fine players, but our continued musical improvement as a concert band is due to Steve's leadership. He has brought us to a higher musical level than we could have ever imagined in 1995 when a rag-tag group of us played for the Harborfest Parade. Steve finds music to challenge us and he knows how to direct adults in a way that brings out the best in each of us. Not only is he a superb director, he gives hours of his time, for which he is not compensated. We practice weekly during our two "seasons" (fall and spring), at Deer Hill School under Steve's direction. Steve returns to school for these rehearsals, arrives early, stays late, finds the music, organizes the music folders. When we play at nursing homes and at the Arts Festival, and at the Relay for Life and so on, Steve makes the arrangements, loads his truck with chairs and stands and on and on it goes. He is a superb director and his many gifts to us are not measurable. Thank you, Steve, on behalf of the band and the greater community.

TO THE EDITOR:

Last week a correspondent argued that an oil spill from a truck serving the sewer and water staging area on the Jenkins property is an argument for locating the staging area elsewhere (like far away). On the contrary, it demonstrates why the staging area should be in or very close to the work area. The traffic between the work and the staging area is fairly heavy, so the shorter the distance the fewer people who are affected, and the less the probability of accidents, and the less damage to our roads.

It has been argued that there were procedural defects in leasing the area. Even if true, it doesn't alter the apparent absence of suitable town land or privately owned land available anywhere within a reasonable distance. Just because there are some open spaces, like the beach parking lot, doesn't mean they are usable, unencumbered by conservation or other restrictions, or available for lease if privately owned.

And where is the alternate site that would not displease some neighbor, and adversely affect even more people than the existing site, even if the procedural rain-dance is performed flawlessly? And how would one get competitive bids on a site? Each of the joint owners bid separately? Will pragmatism in the public interest triumph? Stay tuned!

HEALTH NOTES

Rushing creates too much stress in life

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

There's no question; the holidays are highly charged times. With all the bustle, the nerves become frazzled, not necessarily a medical term, but symptomatic of the times. The tendency of everyone is the need to rush, and we can only hope the foolishness of getting up at 2 a.m. on a perfectly good Friday after Thanksgiving to go do battle in a store scheduled to open at 4 a.m. affects only a small fraction of the sane population.

Psychologists have long known that holidays are stressful. Suicide and domestic violence statistics rise. The workload seems to become more burdensome. Priorities seem to pile up like notes upon a desk. Part of the old fashioned way of organizing was a skewer mounted on a pedestal on ones desk. When a note was written and then acted upon it was stabbed down onto the skewer. There's an apt symbology.

Relaxation is a learned attribute. The innate response to a stimulus is to react.

Now we carry our organizers with us. We call them notebooks or if they're electronic devices, Blackberrys, which as of this date have more than 8 million subscribers. And cell phones have more. Such devices are the modern way of organizing. Maps have been surpassed by Google Earth.com and portable GPS devices that display step by step the way to go from one place to another. So convenient – and fast.

But we must be careful of fast. Speed is OK, but it's the instant response and rushing that create stress in life. The need to respond, to "do something" often occurs when we are caught up in an activity such as shopping, when everyone we see is moving, pursuing a goal.

Angst, the call to action, to hurry, all stem from one source: tension; the inability to relax. Relaxation is a learned attribute. The innate response to a stimulus is to react. When a person thinks a stimulus such as a baby's cry or a casual remark, mental images activate ones muscles into particular patterns of tension, as though bracing for a blow to the body or setting ones teeth at a remark. If one learns how to recognize

Greenbush ridership on the way up

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

In fact ridership, based on car counts, has more than doubled since the line first opened on Oct. 31st.

Date	Number of Cars
Opening Day
Oct. 31, 2007	75
Nov. 20, 2007	130
Dec. 4, 2007	152

Increase of cars at Cohasset Station.

Greenbush Trivia – From time to time people stop into our digs here in Town hall to share their opinions of the train with us. From these comments, we get an interesting view of what a variety of residents think about the Greenbush Project. Some want the train to blow their horns because they feel it will make the line safer. Interestingly enough, when asked, most of these people tell us they don't live anywhere near the train. Horns will have little affect on their lives.

Some regale us with pleasant experiences they have had in riding the train, either for their daily commute, of for a weekend pleasure trip to Boston. Others pass on comments about their experience or experience of their friends that culminate in: "I (or they) will never ride the train again." So, we do hear opinions of all sorts.

But now, let's look at some facts. We do see a slowly increasing ridership. As we've said before, periodically, we visit the Greenbush Station parking lot and count cars. We find this to be quite revealing. Here's what we have found:

So, the number of cars (and riders) is increasing. In fact ridership, based on car counts, has more than doubled since the line first opened on Oct. 31st. Of course these numbers do not account for those few who walk to the station or those who are dropped off and picked up at the station. An interesting statistic: the MBTA's FEIR (Final Environmental Impact Report) for the Greenbush Project shows an expected 260 daily riders from Cohasset by the year 2010. As you can see the 260 number looks like it could be reachable over the next three years.

Sidewalkville – Recently we have been contacted by residents who have suggested, in retrospect, that a much better route for a sidewalk to the Greenbush station would have been along North Main Street rather than down Lower King Street and Route 3A. Do you know what? They are right. It would be a much better route, on a theoretical basis. But, if you look at the realities of design and construction for this route it becomes unfeasible very quickly. Considering the wetland resources that would be taken, the trees that would need to be removed (over 200 trees), the ledge that would need to be removed, the land that would need to be taken and the walls that would need to be constructed to contain a sidewalk in areas with severe drop-offs, the price tag quickly rises to the neighborhood of $1.4 or $1.5 million. The price tag for the King Street to 3A route is about $300,000. And, the 3A route cost has been covered by a grant from the Commonwealth. So far, no one has suggested where the additional $1.2 million can be found to use the N. Main Street route. Perhaps later someone will make a generous grant to the Town. But, for now, the King to 3A will at least get us to the station by sometime next year.

It has also been suggested to us that the maintenance road that the MBTA constructed alongside the tracks from King Street to the Greenbush Station could also have been used as a walkway to the station. This would again be possible, theoretically. But, meetings with the MBTA at the highest level (the General Manager, Daniel Grabauskas) told us, in no uncertain terms, that the MBTA would not permit it. In addition, this route raises security concerns because the pathway is quite remote, dark at night, hard for the police to patrol, and not visible from the street. It would also be tough to plow and maintain. In any event, this option just won't happen, period.

We are also currently working with the Water Department to evaluate the feasibility of adding a sidewalk over a water main loop the Water Department is considering between the Cohasset Greenbush Station and the Cohasset DPW garage. We're not sure if this sidewalk will be of benefit to the Town, but we'll check it out.

Now let's move to the Lower King Street part of the Greenbush Station Sidewalk Project. P. A. Landers continues to pave the sidewalk area, even in this week's freezing weather. By the time you read this, the paving will be complete. Because the new sidewalk encroached on a small amount of wetlands near Route 3A, we must provide wetland replication to the Town. In this instance, the Conservation Commission required us to create at least 700 square feet of new wetland. The arrow in the accompanying photo shows the wetland replication area, to the right of the new sidewalk, as approved by the Cohasset Conservation Commission. The mitigation area is surrounded by hay bales and siltation fencing which are both visible in the photo. This mitigation area has now been cleared and will be planted with appropriate plants in the spring.

The Beechwood Street sidewalk is practically complete. We are waiting to hear from the fence company who is going to erect the protective fence along the edge of the walkway to protect the drop-off to the adjacent wetland. They will also install wood protection against the rather sharp I beam supports for the street guardrail that abuts the sidewalk. As soon as the fencing is ready, we will have it installed.

Dirty tricks are nothing new

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

A friend of mine once worked in the campaign of a congressman from the West Side of New York named Leonard Farbstein.

I was waiting to pick her up at campaign headquarters one night when a kid in his low teens came in with an armful of signs promoting Lennie's opponent. He put them down on a desk. A number of small coins changed hands. The kid went away smiling.

It was the dirty tricks division of the Farbstein campaign in action, only they didn't call it that. The kid was getting a dime for every sign he could find with the opponent's name on it. I'm sure the same thing is still going on in campaigns everywhere right now, although the price has probably gone up to a quarter, maybe even a half a buck.

That's why I was surprised when so many otherwise hip pundits got wedgies in their skivvies when it was disclosed the other day that Hillary Clinton and/or her Democratic cohorts planted loaded questions in the Republican debate on CNN. Don't they know dirty tricks are part of politics and have been almost from the start?

In our third national election, when two votes were cast for president, no less a sneaky operative than Alexander Hamilton devised a plan where members of his Federalist party would cast one vote for Thomas Pinckney and bullet the other for John Adams so that Pinckney might have beaten Thomas Jefferson and become our second president.

Four years later, those fun-loving Federalists spread the rumor that Jefferson, an early supporter of the French Revolution, was in fact an atheist and warned all God-fearing voters to hide their Bibles lest President Jefferson confiscate them. They also spread the rumor that Jefferson was dead and there wasn't a blogger around to refute them.

When Richard Nixon was running for governor of California against Democrat Pat Brown he set up a Committee for the Preservation of the Democratic Party that sent out cards warning that their party had been stolen by left wingers, of whom Brown was one. Democrats sued, got a court order and the case was settled out of court.

No one blamed Herbert Hoover for starting the rumor but it certainly was one of his supporters in the race against the Catholic Al Smith. The Holland Tunnel from New York to New Jersey was being finished at the time and word spread among Protestant voters that it was actually a tunnel to Rome, to the basement of the Vatican.

Hoover won by six million votes and the post-election story made the rounds that Smith had sent a one-word telegram to the Pope — "Unpack!"

The master of the dirty trick, of course, was our own James Michael Curley, whose "poison gas squad" liked to dress up as priests and discuss aloud where voters, most of them Catholic, could hear how unfortunate it was that Jim's opponent was seen eating meat on Friday or was planning to divorce his wife or had joined the Masons.

One such group, posing as members of the Hawes Baptist Club canvassed Catholic South Boston in the interests of Curley's opponent, whose name happened to be Murphy.

Too many choices makes us second guess

THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

Should I get the Vermonty Python or the Vanilla Swiss Almond Carb Karma? One scoop or two? Cone or cup?

Watching my son painstakingly decide which trinkets he's going to buy with his arcade winnings — all of which would have been much cheaper to simply purchase rather than spend $20 on arcade games — I was reminded of the book, "Paradox of Choice: Why More is Less," by Barry Schwartz. Schwartz raises the question as to whether too much choice is, to put it simply, "too much." I think he's on to something.

Now I'm a "pro-choice" kind of gal, and there are times when having several options is essential, like in presidential elections. But these days, it sometimes feels as if the entire world is a multiple choice test; only with way more options than "a, b, c, d" and the dreaded "e — none of the above."

Take the simple act of ordering a cup of coffee. It was only a few years ago that Starbucks published a 14-page manual on how to order their coffee. Time magazine even calculated that given all the different options, you could order a Starbucks' coffee 19,000 different ways. That's a different cup of coffee every day for 52 years. Not being organized enough to bring my instruction manual with me, I generally end up going for my usual "tall regular coffee of the day." My version of "none of the above."

Now, there are some instances where having a lot of choice can be quite useful, as long as you know what you want. For example, the other day I ventured into Old Navy to buy jeans. Faced with a towering wall of intimidating denim, loud music and teenagers running around with headsets completely ignoring the helplessly and hopelessly unhip old lady in the jeans aisle, I almost gave up. But, then I noticed a chart where you could choose which of four styles you wanted for the waistband — from belly-baring to one that actually hits at your waist, next you could locate your size; select short, regular or long; and, finally, boot cut or not. I don't think I've ever bought a pair of jeans more quickly in my life. Why? Because according to the chart there was only one pair on that entire wall that would work for me. And I was able to find it in record time — without having to actually converse with any teenagers.

On the opposite end of the spectrum is a visit to Ben & Jerry's. Should I get the Vermonty Python or the Vanilla Swiss Almond Carb Karma? One scoop or two? Cone or cup? Yet no matter what I decide I can never help wondering if I would have enjoyed the Phish Food or Cherry Garcia even more. However, when it's a cold, snowy weekend and I'm sitting home on a Saturday night watching chick flicks, sipping Chardonnay and craving sweets, nothing tastes better than to finish off the long-forgotten Chocolate Chip Cookie Dough pint discovered in the back of the freezer lodged behind the frozen chicken (exp. date 2005).

Why? Because having too many choices can cause us to second, third and exponentially re-guess our first choice, taking away most of the enjoyment and in some cases even diluting the quality of our options. This must be why I now have more than 500 television stations to choose from, and can still never find anything worth watching. Yet when faced with a single option, we can take satisfaction in knowing that we made the best possible decision — even if it involves finishing off a pint of 1,000-plus calorie ice cream.

Perhaps life would be less stressful if we adopted the pre-school approach of limited options. I know that mealtimes in my house go much more smoothly when my son only has to decide between the Scooby Doo or SpongeBob macaroni and cheese. And if he doesn't like that, then he gets "none of the above." But, wait a second — when did macaroni and cheese become a multiple choice question?

Delay is going to cost taxpayers

COMMENTARY

PAUL LUALDI

Now it appears that a few residents nearby to the staging area object to its presence and are embroiling the town in unnecessary and unreasonable litigation.

The Not in My Backyard (NIMBY) syndrome has struck in Cohasset again. As is well known, the town is engaged in a major construction project installing water and sewer mains in the Little Harbor area to improve its water supply and to rectify environmental issues. An integral part of any construction project such as this is the need to establish a local staging area as the focal point of the operation. The town was fortunate there was a suitable location in the construction area, which the landowner was willing to allow the contractor to use. It provides good access to the area under construction, which expedites the job and minimizes the cost to all taxpayers and the residents who are paying the full cost of the sewer. Town Meeting authorized these construction activities (staging area implied).

Now it appears that a few residents nearby to the staging area object to its presence and are embroiling the town in unnecessary and unreasonable litigation. Unfortunately they have found support for their complaint at the Planning Board. A member of the Planning Board explained to me that other areas for staging were available across Route 3A. He ignores the fact that it would expand the area of the town and the number of residents impacted by the construction as it would require large truck and vehicular traffic to travel on and across 3A and then traverse any number of town streets to reach the construction area. That presents a safety and traffic issue. It would also extend the schedule and increase the cost of the project for the town.

It is unfortunate and sad to think that any town resident would be so mean-spirited as to take action to impede this project, delay its completion and increase the cost for all town taxpayers. The ZBA expects to address this issue at its meeting on Dec. 11. Let's hope common sense prevails.

Register to vote for Presidential Primary

The Governor signed legislation on Monday, Nov. 26, to move the date of the Presidential Primary to Tuesday, Feb. 5, 2008. The last day to register to vote will be Wednesday, Jan. 16. Registration will take place at the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a Town Meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If people move, they may register to vote as soon as they move into a new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each Town Meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If people register during a closed period, they will be eligible to vote only in later Town Meetings or elections.

Health Notes

Rushing creates stress in life

which muscle groups are tense and can physically let go of that tension, then he will reduce his need to respond to conditions that make him tense. It is impossible to feel relaxed and tense at the same time. Those who exercise through sports are frequently reminded to relax. They automatically sense the muscle groups that are tense because they are being used in the sport; arms and shoulders for tennis, and bowling; legs and abdomen for calisthenics, etc. Relaxing the shoulder and lower body muscles frequently helps. Many therapists say that regular, daily practice of relaxation techniques will assist you in relieving muscle tension, greatly improve your overall feeling of well being and reduce your anxiety.

When reflection and planning replace instant reaction and response in our lives, we've found one of the secrets to relieving stress. So, it seems the way to obtain relief from the tension of holidays is first, to recognize when you are feeling tension and relax. Before you respond to anything; relax. Next, think of your objective and what you wish to accomplish. Then using your favorite planning tools; Blackberry, notebook, pad and skewer, book of maps, GPS, whatever, work out what you're going to do and deliberately go through the sequence of activities. Perfect, until the phone rings, or there's a knock on the door, etc. Nobody said it was going to be easy and it will always take more time than is available.

So, it's the holidays; we've learned to accept a little tension. Think in advance about how you're going to respond so you don't get hooked into an argument. The following responses may help diffuse things:

"I'll consider it." (Then change the subject.) Better than a hasty inappropriate remark.

Or when someone offers a critique on your apparel "thanks for your consideration." Hopefully reflects their primary purpose, which was to help.

Now, practice by thinking up a response to: "aren't you putting on a little weight?"

And finally when all else fails, there's "Chill out!"

Library Corner

Give books this holiday season

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 35 Ripley Road. For more information call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Give the gift of books – This holiday season, give the gift of books. The library can help you choose the perfect book for that special someone. Consult the wide selection of book review tools such as the New York Times Book Review, the Genreflecting series, the NoveList and Pearl's Picks databases, and various other publications that make it easy to select the right book. Come and browse the Friends of the Library's book sale rack in the Community Room for great bargains.

New Audiobooks – New books on CD are now available. Choose from well-known authors such as Jennifer Chiaverini, Alexander McCall-Smith, Debbie Macomber, Steve Martin and John McCain and more. Can't find the title you are looking for? No problem. It's easy to place a hold on your favorite title online using the library Web site, www.cohassetlibrary.org, or by visiting the library in person.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film, "Fraulein," at 6 p.m., Thurs. Dec. 20. Reza left Belgrade more than 25 years ago to seek a new life in Zurich. Now in her fifties, she has completely detached herself from the past. She owns a cafeteria and maintains an orderly, joyless existence. Ana, a young, itinerant woman who has fled Sarajevo, breezes into the cafeteria looking for work. Reza hires her but is annoyed by Ana's impulsive and spirited efforts to inject life into the cafeteria. Ana, who hides a tragic secret under her passionate spirit, begins to thaw Reza's chill, and their relationship will change both women in ways they never anticipated. Swiss-German, German, Bosnian, Croatian, and Serbian with English subtitles. The length of the film is 81 minutes. Free admission and refreshments will be provided, courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

FOR CHILDREN

Spotlight on Magazines – The Children's Room has a wonderful selection of magazines for all ages. Many of the magazines are great for school assignments and for gathering information. Faces is a cultural magazine that reports on people, places, and cultures around the world. Cobblestone explores in depth events and people in American History. Calliope explores topics, people, and events in world history.

If you are interested in science and technology you might want to read Kids Discover, National Geographic World, and Zoobooks. Budding writers might be interested in American Girl, New Moon, and Cricket. Ladybug, Nick Jr., and Sesame Street provide great entertainment for younger students. Sports fans will want to keep up to date with "Sports Illustrated for Kids."

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on two roll calls and senators' votes on three roll calls from recent November legislative sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

HOME HEATING COSTS FOR VETERANS (H 4388, S 2129)

House 151-0, Senate 37-0, approved different versions of legislation aimed at helping needy veterans with shelter and heating fuel costs. The Senate version establishes minimum amounts that individual veterans would be guaranteed for both shelter and fuel costs. The House version provides a one-time additional $3.9 million for fuel costs, does not establish statutory minimums or offer any additional funds for shelter costs and gives more discretion to the Department of Veterans' Services to determine the specific individual funding based on existing formulas and other criteria. Supporters of both versions said that the legislation would help thousands of veterans and their families with skyrocketing heating costs this winter. They noted that the cost of heating oil has increased 117 percent since 2000 while allowances for veterans' fuel have only increased 12 percent. Defenders of the Senate version said that it is important to include shelter costs and to establish mandatory minimum amounts so that veterans are guaranteed a certain level of assistance. Advocates of the House version argued that it makes more sense to leave the funding decision up to the Department of Veterans' Services which has more expertise in this area and works daily with veterans. Both sides hope to work out their differences quickly as cold weather rapidly approaches. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

UP TO $1,000 "WELCOME HOME" BONUS FOR VETERANS (S 2397)

House 153-0, approved and Gov. Deval Patrick signed into law legislation requiring the state income tax form to include a checkoff box that asks taxpayers if they are veterans who served after September 11, 2001. The Department of Veterans' Services would use the information in its attempt to reach 13,000 veterans who have not yet applied for the "Welcome Home" bonus that was made available to them more than two years ago. The program offers $1,000 to veterans who served in Iraq or Afghanistan and $500 to those who served in any other nations including the United States. Supporters said than some 14,000 veterans have received the bonus while an additional 13,000 are eligible but have not yet applied. They noted that the state has tried unsuccessfully to contact those 13,000 and argued that the checkoff box would result in more veterans being informed about and taking advantage of the bonus. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

INCREASE PENALTIES FOR DRAG RACING (S 2083)

Senate 37-0, approved and sent to Gov. Patrick legislation increasing the penalties for drag racing. Current law imposes up to a $500 fine and 30-day license suspension. The bill provides for the same 30-day license suspension but increases the fine to up to $1,000 and adds the option of a judge imposing up to a 2.5 years prison sentence instead of the fine. Supporters said that current law is inadequate because it only imposes a light fine for this dangerous activity. They cited recent examples of deadly drag racing and argued that it is time to get tough on this crime and give judges the option to impose jail sentences. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

REGULATE LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE (S 2367)

Senate 37-0, approved and sent to the House a bill establishing additional regulations on long-term care insurance policies sold in Massachusetts. These policies are available for persons of all ages and are designed to provide coverage for medical conditions that limit the insured's ability to live independently. The services covered could include care in the person's home, an adult day care center, a nursing home or an assisted living facility. The proposal also establishes a plan for state employees to purchase long-term care policies and have the premiums deducted from their salaries. Another provision allows consumers to annually deduct on their tax return up to $5,000 of the premiums paid for a policy. Supporters said that the measure would establish stricter standards for the sale and coverage of these policies and would protect consumers that purchase this relatively new product. They noted that some people have been denied care when they seek to collect on their policies and many others have not been able to afford the premiums and are forced to cancel the policies after several years of making payments. Some argued that the tax incentive would encourage many people to buy this valuable product and noted that the estimated $10 million annual loss of state revenue would eventually be offset by an even bigger savings in Medicaid costs achieved through reducing the number of people that receive costly state assistance for long-term care. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

Why American women need a wakeup call

Hingham resident publishes book on leadership

By Lisa Hennessey

Vicki Donlan asserts that it is time for women to take charge in her just released book, "Her Turn: Why It's Time Women Lead in America."

Before the sun rises, it may be difficult to see a petite brunette pounding the pavement. But everyday for the past 29 years, Vicki Donlan has been running in Hingham while most of us are still snoring. And while we are sipping our coffee, her agenda to boost American women in more top leadership roles is in full print.

Publisher and founder of a monthly newsmagazine, Women's Business Boston, Donlan has just added "author" to her mile-long resume. In her first-released book, "Her Turn: Why It's Time Women Lead in America," she shares some jaw-dropping statistics that effectively show our own corporate world may be facing a crisis when it comes to women leaders.

"Women are moving backwards, even though companies are investing thousands of dollars in their women employees," says Donlan as she sits on the edge of her seat. And she then quickly rattles off statistics, and it's not encouraging. But her ability to motivate makes any woman wonder why she can't go out and conquer the world. After all, that very spirit is what Donlan grew up with.

As a young teenager in Newton, Donlan sat on her bed and wondered aloud whether the Beatles would ever play at the Boston Garden. Her father, a commercial real estate developer, did not hesitate to pick up the phone and after a few calls, managed to get in direct contact with Brian Epstein, the band's agent.

"'A lot of people say you can't ask to so and so," (or someone who may appear better than you) and my father always said, 'Why not?'" Her father treated her like a queen. When mayors and celebrities, like Jackie Gleason, came to visit, he said to them, "You must meet my daughter, Vicki," and not the other way around. Donlan, now 56, realizes that this dignified treatment wasn't the norm for kids, especially those that were girls in the early 60s. But, she says, her father was "bigger than life and taught her how to think outside of the box." She encourages parents of young girls to give them this same type of nurturing and a role model and mentor.

"Women are moving backwards, even though companies are investing thousands of dollars in their women employees."
— Vicki Donlan

While the Beatles did not play at the Garden as a result of her father's efforts, she explains that he would often demonstrate his power to believe and plan. She proudly declares, "He was a great visionary."

So great that he even knew how to choose her husband. According to Donlan, he set her up on a blind date, and six months later, she married that man, Francis Donlan. "We both wanted 12 children."

If that plan had come true, Donlan's career would have undeniably taken a different path. As nature has it, the couple gave birth to one boy, David, and for 35 years, her family has remained her number one priority. At the same time, she also says she made the choice to work as well. "I can't imagine not working." While she respects stay-at-home moms, she also says that "women have trouble with the guilt" and "we also don't know how to delegate." (Later on she claims that she wrote the book on weekends and actually taught her husband how to do the grocery shopping.)

Seeing her father's ability to think big played a huge role in creating Donlan's drive to succeed. She graduated fifth in her class at an all girls high school, and went on to graduate from Pine Manor College, another all girls college, in 1971. She then went to work at the New England Real Estate Journal, a newspaper owned and operated by her brother, 15 years older. From there, she worked at various jobs in different industries. And over time she had a frustrating sales job, which ultimately led her to take on her campaign to help women achieve higher leadership roles in the workplace. And thus the entrepreneur had emerged.

Smoothing out her skirt, Donlan tells the story about how she founded the South Shore Business Network — and it wasn't on the golf course. As a salesperson, she attended several Chamber of Commerce meetings and "all the guys wanted to talk about sports." She couldn't seem to connect with potential business prospects. So, along with five other women, she started the organization that would quickly grow to 400 members. "It was amazing. I would get 40 messages a day on my machine from women who were interested in becoming members." And finally after an "aha" moment on a plane, she quit her full-time job, wrote a business plan and became the first paid full-time executive director. "Even men started to join. They realized that business was happening."

Donlan is a woman of action, eventually starting several more women's associations and starting her own newspaper, which she sold to the Boston Herald a year after she started it. One of her many mottos: "Plan your exit before you start your beginning." Still working as the publisher and a regular guest on New England Cable News, she dabbles at her own blog, and recently invited readers and their children to the Hillary Clinton event at Symphony Hall last month. That entry evoked some opposition, with one responder labeling her a "left wing liberal."

She's not shy in declaring who she will vote for in the next presidential campaign, but she does want to set the record straight: she has voted Republican all her life, even though she hasn't agreed with all of the candidate's issues. The prospect of having a woman as president makes her very excited. A few weeks ago Donlan had the opportunity to meet Senator Clinton in Boston and personally gave her a copy of the book. Coincidentally, her timing for the book release couldn't have been better.

Convincing and smart, Donlan leans over and shares a secret: her next plan is to see Larry King, and it's easy to imagine her chatting away completely at ease sitting across from him. According to her husband, "she is never at a loss for words."

Women in America

Three things we can learn from Donlan's book about why it's time women lead in America:

- Women are the majority sex at 52 percent
- Women are 85 percent of the consumer purchasing power
- Women are the majority wealth holders

Holiday celebration at Buttonwood Books

Buttonwood Books & Toys at Shaw's Plaza off Route 3A will hold "Buttonwood Celebrates," a daylong celebration of the holiday season, beginning at 10:30 a.m., Saturday, Dec. 8. Many exciting events are planned starting with a visit from Santa Claus from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

A book singing with Hingham author and photographer Bill Brett featuring his new book, "Boston: An Extended Family," will take place at 11 a.m. Cohasset young adult author, Amanda Thompson, launches her new book "Seasons" at 1 p.m., and local singer and songwriter Mamasteph, will host a sing-along of holiday favorites, for parents and children, at 3 p.m.

Toy demonstrations will take place in the toy department from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. View and learn about unique toys for kids from 9 to 99 years. Games like Ruk-Shuk, Hyper-Dash, Bananagrams, and others will be demonstrated.

In addition, door prizes will be drawn randomly throughout the day, including knitting kits, volcano kits, books for children and adults, Buttonwood gift certificates and much more. Light refreshments will also be served.

Health Notes

which muscle groups are tense and can physically let go of that tension, then he will reduce his need to respond to conditions that make him tense. It is impossible to feel relaxed and tense at the same time. Those who exercise through sports are frequently reminded to relax. They automatically sense the muscle groups that are tense because they are being used in the sport; arms and shoulders for tennis, and bowling; legs and abdomen for calisthenics, etc. Relaxing the shoulder and lower body muscles frequently helps. Many therapists say that regular, daily practice of relaxation techniques will assist you in relieving muscle tension, greatly improve your overall feeling of well being and reduce your anxiety.

When reflection and planning replace instant reaction and response in our lives, we've found one of the secrets to relieving stress. So, it seems the way to obtain relief from the tension of holidays is first, to recognize when you are feeling tension and relax. Before you respond to anything; relax. Next, think of your objective and what you wish to accomplish. Then using your favorite planning tools; Blackberry, notebook, pad and skewer, book of maps, GPS, whatever, work out what you're going to do and deliberately go through the sequence of activities. Perfect, until the phone rings, or there's a knock on the door, etc. Nobody said it was going to be easy and it will always take more time than is available.

So, it's the holidays; we've learned to accept a little tension. Think in advance about how you're going to respond so you don't get hooked into an argument. The following responses may help diffuse things:

"I'll consider it." (Then change the subject.) Better than a hasty inappropriate remark.

Or when someone offers a critique on your apparel "thanks for your consideration." Hopefully reflects their primary purpose, which was to help.

Now, practice by thinking up a response to: "aren't you putting on a little weight?"

And finally when all else fails, there's "Chill out!"

Library Corner

Give books this holiday season

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 35 Ripley Road. For more information call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Give the gift of books – This holiday season, give the gift of books. The library can help you choose the perfect book for that special someone. Consult the wide selection of book review tools such as the New York Times Book Review, the Genreflecting series, the NoveList and Pearl's Picks databases, and various other publications that make it easy to select the right book. Come and browse the Friends of the Library's book sale rack in the Community Room for great bargains.

New Audiobooks – New books on CD are now available. Choose from well-known authors such as Jennifer Chiaverini, Alexander McCall-Smith, Debbie Macomber, Steve Martin and John McCain and more. Can't find the title you are looking for? No problem. It's easy to place a hold on your favorite title online using the library Web site, www.cohassetlibrary.org, or by visiting the library in person.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film, "Fraulein," at 6 p.m., Thurs. Dec. 20. Reza left Belgrade more than 25 years ago to seek a new life in Zurich. Now in her fifties, she has completely detached herself from the past. She owns a cafeteria and maintains an orderly, joyless existence. Ana, a young, itinerant woman who has fled Sarajevo, breezes into the cafeteria looking for work. Reza hires her but is annoyed by Ana's impulsive and spirited efforts to inject life into the cafeteria. Ana, who hides a tragic secret under her passionate spirit, begins to thaw Reza's chill, and their relationship will change both women in ways they never anticipated. Swiss-German, German, Bosnian, Croatian, and Serbian with English subtitles. The length of the film is 81 minutes. Free admission and refreshments will be provided, courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

FOR CHILDREN

Spotlight on Magazines – The Children's Room has a wonderful selection of magazines for all ages. Many of the magazines are great for school assignments and for gathering information. Faces is a cultural magazine that reports on people, places, and cultures around the world. Cobblestone explores in depth events and people in American History. Calliope explores topics, people, and events in world history.

If you are interested in science and technology you might want to read Kids Discover, National Geographic World, and Zoobooks. Budding writers might be interested in American Girl, New Moon, and Cricket. Ladybug, Nick Jr., and Sesame Street provide great entertainment for younger students. Sports fans will want to keep up to date with "Sports Illustrated for Kids."

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on two roll calls and senators' votes on three roll calls from recent November legislative sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

HOME HEATING COSTS FOR VETERANS (H 4388, S 2129)

House 151-0, Senate 37-0, approved different versions of legislation aimed at helping needy veterans with shelter and heating fuel costs. The Senate version establishes minimum amounts that individual veterans would be guaranteed for both shelter and fuel costs. The House version provides a one-time additional $3.9 million for fuel costs, does not establish statutory minimums or offer any additional funds for shelter costs and gives more discretion to the Department of Veterans' Services to determine the specific individual funding based on existing formulas and other criteria. Supporters of both versions said that the legislation would help thousands of veterans and their families with skyrocketing heating costs this winter. They noted that the cost of heating oil has increased 117 percent since 2000 while allowances for veterans' fuel have only increased 12 percent. Defenders of the Senate version said that it is important to include shelter costs and to establish mandatory minimum amounts so that veterans are guaranteed a certain level of assistance. Advocates of the House version argued that it makes more sense to leave the funding decision up to the Department of Veterans' Services which has more expertise in this area and works daily with veterans. Both sides hope to work out their differences quickly as cold weather rapidly approaches. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

UP TO $1,000 "WELCOME HOME" BONUS FOR VETERANS (S 2397)

House 153-0, approved and Gov. Deval Patrick signed into law legislation requiring the state income tax form to include a checkoff box that asks taxpayers if they are veterans who served after September 11, 2001. The Department of Veterans' Services would use the information in its attempt to reach 13,000 veterans who have not yet applied for the "Welcome Home" bonus that was made available to them more than two years ago. The program offers $1,000 to veterans who served in Iraq or Afghanistan and $500 to those who served in any other nations including the United States. Supporters said than some 14,000 veterans have received the bonus while an additional 13,000 are eligible but have not yet applied. They noted that the state has tried unsuccessfully to contact those 13,000 and argued that the checkoff box would result in more veterans being informed about and taking advantage of the bonus. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

INCREASE PENALTIES FOR DRAG RACING (S 2083)

Senate 37-0, approved and sent to Gov. Patrick legislation increasing the penalties for drag racing. Current law imposes up to a $500 fine and 30-day license suspension. The bill provides for the same 30-day license suspension but increases the fine to up to $1,000 and adds the option of a judge imposing up to a 2.5 years prison sentence instead of the fine. Supporters said that current law is inadequate because it only imposes a light fine for this dangerous activity. They cited recent examples of deadly drag racing and argued that it is time to get tough on this crime and give judges the option to impose jail sentences. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

REGULATE LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE (S 2367)

Senate 37-0, approved and sent to the House a bill establishing additional regulations on long-term care insurance policies sold in Massachusetts. These policies are available for persons of all ages and are designed to provide coverage for medical conditions that limit the insured's ability to live independently. The services covered could include care in the person's home, an adult day care center, a nursing home or an assisted living facility. The proposal also establishes a plan for state employees to purchase long-term care policies and have the premiums deducted from their salaries. Another provision allows consumers to annually deduct on their tax return up to $5,000 of the premiums paid for a policy. Supporters said that the measure would establish stricter standards for the sale and coverage of these policies and would protect consumers that purchase this relatively new product. They noted that some people have been denied care when they seek to collect on their policies and many others have not been able to afford the premiums and are forced to cancel the policies after several years of making payments. Some argued that the tax incentive would encourage many people to buy this valuable product and noted that the estimated $10 million annual loss of state revenue would eventually be offset by an even bigger savings in Medicaid costs achieved through reducing the number of people that receive costly state assistance for long-term care. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

If that plan had come true, Donlan's career would have undeniably taken a different path. As nature has it, the couple gave birth to one boy, David, and for 35 years, her family has remained her number one priority. At the same time, she also says she made the choice to work as well. "I can't imagine not working." While she respects stay-at-home moms, she also says that "women have trouble with the guilt" and "we also don't know how to delegate." (Later on she claims that she wrote the book on weekends and actually taught her husband how to do the grocery shopping.)

"Women are moving backwards, even though companies are investing thousands of dollars in their women employees."
— Vicki Donlan

Seeing her father's ability to think big played a huge role in creating Donlan's drive to succeed. She graduated fifth in her class at an all girls high school, and went on to graduate from Pine Manor College, another all girls college, in 1971. She then went to work at the New England Real Estate Journal, a newspaper owned and operated by her brother, 15 years older. From there, she worked at various jobs in different industries. And over time she had a frustrating sales job, which ultimately led her to take on her campaign to help women achieve higher leadership roles in the workplace. And thus the entrepreneur had emerged.

Smoothing out her skirt, Donlan tells the story about how she founded the South Shore Business Network — and it wasn't on the golf course. As a salesperson, she attended several Chamber of Commerce meetings and "all the guys wanted to talk about sports." She couldn't seem to connect with potential business prospects. So, along with five other women, she started the organization that would quickly grow to 400 members. "It was amazing. I would get 40 messages a day on my machine from women who were interested in becoming members." And finally after an "aha" moment on a plane, she quit her full-time job, wrote a business plan and became the first paid full-time executive director. "Even men started to join. They realized that business was happening."

Donlan is a woman of action, eventually starting several more women's associations and starting her own newspaper, which she sold to the Boston Herald a year after she started it. One of her many mottos: "Plan your exit before you start your beginning." Still working as the publisher and a regular guest on New England Cable News, she dabbles at her own blog, and recently invited readers and their children to the Hillary Clinton event at Symphony Hall last month. That entry evoked some opposition, with one responder labeling her a "left wing liberal."

She's not shy in declaring who she will vote for in the next presidential campaign, but she does want to set the record straight: she has voted Republican all her life, even though she hasn't agreed with all of the candidate's issues. The prospect of having a woman as president makes her very excited. A few weeks ago Donlan had the opportunity to meet Senator Clinton in Boston and personally gave her a copy of the book. Coincidentally, her timing for the book release couldn't have been better.

Convincing and smart, Donlan leans over and shares a secret: her next plan is to see Larry King, and it's easy to imagine her chatting away completely at ease sitting across from him. According to her husband, "she is never at a loss for words."

Women in America

Three things we can learn from Donlan's book about why it's time women lead in America:

- Women are the majority sex at 52 percent
- Women are 85 percent of the consumer purchasing power
- Women are the majority wealth holders

Holiday celebration at Buttonwood Books

Buttonwood Books & Toys at Shaw's Plaza off Route 3A will hold "Buttonwood Celebrates," a daylong celebration of the holiday season, beginning at 10:30 a.m., Saturday, Dec. 8. Many exciting events are planned starting with a visit from Santa Claus from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

A book singing with Hingham author and photographer Bill Brett featuring his new book, "Boston: An Extended Family," will take place at 11 a.m. Cohasset young adult author, Amanda Thompson, launches her new book "Seasons" at 1 p.m., and local singer and songwriter Mamasteph, will host a sing-along of holiday favorites, for parents and children, at 3 p.m.

Toy demonstrations will take place in the toy department from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. View and learn about unique toys for kids from 9 to 99 years. Games like Ruk-Shuk, Hyper-Dash, Bananagrams, and others will be demonstrated.

In addition, door prizes will be drawn randomly throughout the day, including knitting kits, volcano kits, books for children and adults, Buttonwood gift certificates and much more. Light refreshments will also be served.

For more information, call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help in your own community.

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 16 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Cohasset Mariner in supporting the Social Service League of Cohasset in their efforts to help those in need this holiday season. A donation of any size goes a long way.

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

When a college coach moves to a new job his first real class is the one he recruited. For a high school coach, like Cohasset head coach Pete Afanasiw, it's usually the second year guys that graduate who constitute that sort of feeling. Year one is marked by newness that normally takes some time getting used to.

Year two the staff has had the players throughout the school year and over the summer. The kids from Cohasset came into camp knowing what to expect and where the orders were going to come from in 2007.

All this said, the 8-2 Skippers were led by one heck of a senior class and Coach Afanasiw couldn't have been happier with the way they responded during his second year, or prouder with the way they played.

"Having them for the last two seasons you can see the effect they have had on this team," Afanasiw said. "They were disappointed with last year's performance (2006) and they shouldered every bit of this season themselves, they came in week in and week out and played hard."

To a man, all 12 seniors had a

Anderson named RWU athlete of the week

Junior Casey Anderson (Cohasset, Mass.) was named Roger Williams University Female Athlete of the Week after totaling 21 points and 13 rebounds in the women's basketball team's two games last week.

Thursday at Eastern Connecticut State University, Anderson was the lone Hawk to post double-digit points, shooting 4-for-11 from the field and 2-for-2 from the line. The 5-foot, 9-inch forward also pulled down two offensive and two defensive rebounds on the night.

Saturday against Mt. Holyoke College, Anderson was one rebound shy of her season's second double-double, posting 11 points and nine rebounds in 34 minutes of play. She also added a steal and a blocked shot to help lead the Hawks to a 69-64 comeback victory over the Lyons.

Anderson and the team return to action Tuesday in the first half of a RWU double-header beginning at 6 p.m. They host Simmons College prior to an 8 p.m. men's contest against Salve Regina University.

Cohasset's Altholtz chips in at national tournament

Yee leads Weymouth Club

By Ed Carpenter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Quincy's Robbie Yee posted a 3-2 record to lead the Weymouth Club's 18-and-under tennis team to a 15th-place finish at the National Junior Tennis Tournament that was held recently in Tucson, AZ.

It marked the first time any Weymouth Club team had qualified for the National Junior Team competition.

Weymouth was one of four teams that competed in Flight 3, which turned out to be one of the most difficult flights of the tournament, featuring teams from Columbia, SC, Puerto Rico, and New Jersey.

In its first match of the tournament, Weymouth lost to the South Carolina team that went on to win the National title.

In the South Carolina match, Yee, who is a senior at Quincy High School, was pitted against David Collins. The two split their two sets, 6-3, 4-6, but Collins went on to win the tie-breaker in one of the tournament's toughest matches. Collins finished the competition undefeated as he helped lead his team to the national title.

Weymouth bounced back in its second match to defeat Puerto Rico only to lose its third-flight finale to New Jersey.

In those first three matches, the Weymouth team combined to win 100 games. In another flights, that win total may have qualified them for one of the higher flights in the next series of matches.

Instead, they advanced to the flight that determined the 13th- through 16th-place finishes.

In their first match, Weymouth lost to Texas pitting them against Hawaii for the final two places. The local youngsters prevailed as they took 15th place, while Hawaii was 16th.

"The kids were in great spirits after the match," said team manager Courtney McLaughlin, who is also the adult tennis coordinator at the Weymouth Club. "They said we might have finished 15th in the tournament, but that makes us the 15th best team in the country.

"It was a great experience for the kids," McLaughlin continued. "They did very well. They were just victims of being in the toughest bracket of the tournament. In fact, their first match was against the team that won the national championship."

Aside from Yee, Katherine Kelley of Norwell also played well as she compiled a 2-3 record. In one of her best matches, she teamed with Kellie MacFarlane (Kingston) to take the girls doubles team from New Jersey to a match tiebreaker.

The other local youth who competed included—Maddy Altholtz (Cohasset) and Roberta Bergstein (Hingham) and—Kevin Hadar (Weymouth), Danny Hajjar (Weymouth), and Max Stalla (Milton).

The team qualified for the National Tournament by winning the Sectional title in late August in Hartford, CT.

"The team had a great season," said McLaughlin. "They should feel very proud about how the season went and they were the first local team to qualify for the National Junior tournament."

Sixth grade boys shine in regional

Cohasset's 6th grade boys travel basketball team enjoyed some pre-season success last weekend on the shiny new floors of the fabulous Bridgewater-Raynham High School facility. A packed house filled the multi-court venue that hosted a regional collection of teams from towns in and around the Patriot League. Cohasset was matched up against a stout team from Norton, a speedy group from Bridgewater and two tough teams from Abington in a lineup that included four games over a two-day span.

Cohasset started the action at 8 a.m. Saturday morning with an eye-opening contest against an eight-man roster from Norton that included some nifty shooters and stingy defenders. After only two days of practice the week leading up to the tournament the kids from Cohasset came out firing to get off to an early lead. Mark Brown led the way with steady play at the center position to dictate the tempo and drain some clean lay-ups down low. Brendan O'Connell directed the action from the point with some great dishes to his teammates setting up some easy baskets. Rocco Laugelle was a force on both ends of the court providing some lighting quick fast-breaks and equally damaging defense to disrupt Norton's rhythm and passing game. Connor Green was a force on the boards throwing his medley of strokes at the opponent to snag any and every rebound within reach. But in the end, Norton would prove to be a little more than Cohasset could handle for breakfast that morning and they ultimately fell in a close contest, 19-16.

Cohasset returned Saturday afternoon to face host team Bridgewater in another close contest that showcased Cohasset's strength and size that generated a steady stream of rebounds, good ball control and smart shooting that kept the boys in blue ahead for most of the game. Mark McKenna gallantly led the charge with a nice pace at point guard to set-up his forwards with some smart jump shots and crisp passing inside to the bangers on the boards.

Mark Rattenbury drained some nice buckets across the court and denied Bridgewater many times with well timed blocks at the net. Chris Haggerty played terrific defense and handled the ball well in the forward position with accurate passes and good shot-making. Zach Coggins was always a threat on offense and played tough "D" with some timely steals and good overall pesky-ness to disrupt the opponent. Cohasset stayed ahead for the remainder of the contest to capture its first victory over a good club from Bridgewater.

Sunday afternoon offered up a back-to-back showdown with two scrappy teams from the Green Belt of Abington, MA. Cohasset never looks past an Abington opponent, as they know these kids mean business and this cool November day in Bridgewater was no different, both teams were ready to rock n' roll. Abington-A was up first. Some of the Abington players may have had size on Timmy Cavanaro, but no fear, Timmy would deny his opponents of any easy shots and maintained a solid presence on the boards to keep the ball in Cohasset's hands in this close contest.

Jack Stanganelli showed his strength with some steady ball control and strong defense. Jack Conte provided a speedy step at point guard and drained some nice shots from the outside to keep Cohasset in the game. This game was a battle from the get-go, which means Joe Buckley was not far away. This boy's middle name is "battle," battle for rebounds, battle for loose balls, battle for close range lay-ups, you don't turn sixteen shades of red for nothing. This kid is a diesel engine heading down the highway, great fun to watch.

Back and forth all game long, messed up scoreboard, more fouls than Frank Purdue's hen house, and yes, we have overtime. And, thankfully Cohasset had Henry Brown on its side. Henry was Cool-Hand Luke down the stretch, making some key jump shots to protect a thin lead in overtime that ultimately would lead to a second overtime. Some clutch foul shooting by Brendan O'Connell led to the win and Cohasset went up 2-1 in the tournament.

The final match-up of the tournament was against a second team from Abington. Abington-B had a little less height than Abington-A, but no less speed, tenacity, and talent. Abington shot off to a quick 5-0 lead that had Cohasset scrambling for a good portion of the first half. Several turnovers kept Cohasset off kilter, but Doug Fitzgerald would steady the ship with his steely hand at the point with impressive outside shooting and terrific ball handling. Cohasset recovered from their early deficit to gain and hold on to the lead for the remainder of the contest to close out the weekend on a great note, 3-1. A terrific weekend of basketball for a team that looks forward to a fun-filled season of success!

CYBSA board elections

The CYBSA is pleased to announce the final list of candidates for new CYBSA Board Members. There are currently five open seats on the Board and we are thrilled to have nine very talented individuals interested in those positions. The voting polls are open and will remain open until the Annual meeting December 11th.

Please visit the CYBSA Web site at www.CYBSA.net and select the tab "Board Election 2008". This page will provide a summary of the voting process (how to vote) and a list of candidates and their Statement of Interest (summary of why they want to join the board).

We appreciate your commitment to the CYBSA and encourage you vote.

major impact on a very good football team, one that finished first in Division 3 on defense (7.6 points per game) and third on offense (22.8 ppg). Coach Afanasiw praised all 12 guys for their hard work and dedication all season long.

Sam DeGiacomo: "Excellent two way player and one of the finest red zone backs in the league." DeGiacomo tied the team lead with six touchdowns and was a three-year varsity player.

PJ McCaw: "Punishing blocker, powerful runner, excellent hands, on defense he was a kid that players ran away from." McCaw, a South Shore League All-Star, tied for the team lead with six sacks and was third in receiving with 200 yards.

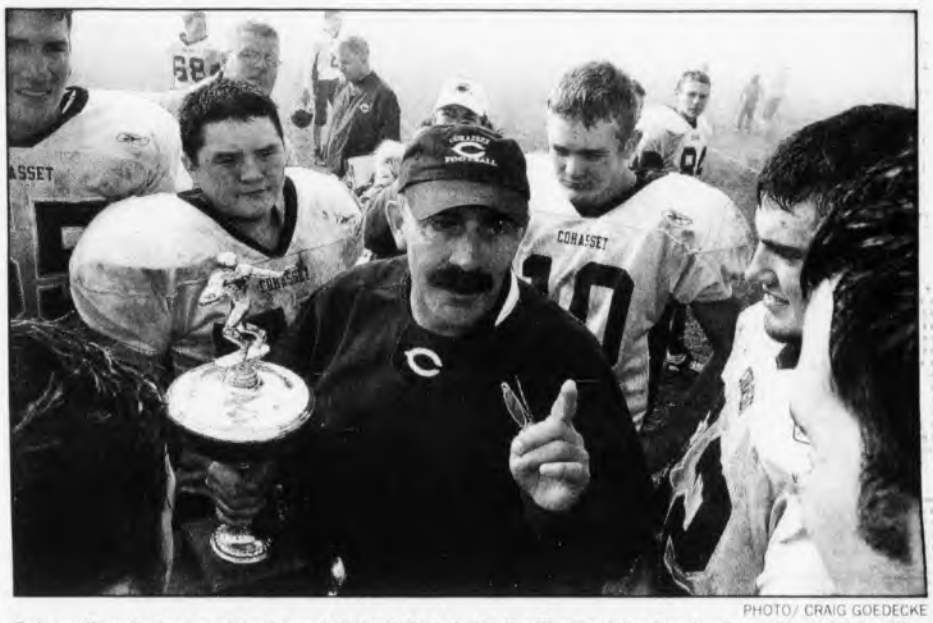
David Snowdale: "A very good quarterback, very accurate thrower and a tough runner." Snowdale rushed for six scores and threw for five more. He had over 800 yards through the air in '07.

Pat Doonan: "Pound for pound one of the strongest kids on the team, a true leader and excellent competitor, what he brought will be hard to replace next year." Doonan, a SSL All-Star, had over 340 receiving yards with over 40 receptions and picked off four passes from defensive back.

Kenny Muir: "Excellent hands, tremendous overall athlete, great attitude." In only his second season playing football Muir finished second on the team with 300 yards receiving.

Mark Flibotte: "Controlled the defensive backfield, an excellent and intelligent safety, a field general on defense he had great instincts." Flibotte led the team with six interceptions and had just fewer than 300 receiving yards during the season.

Kyle Pinkus: "He is gong to be very hard to replace. Very coachable, great attitude, excellent leader." Pinkus, a SSL All-Star, had 115 tackles and over 700 yards rushing and will look to play Division 1 football in the future. Voted the team Most Valuable Player.



Cliff Musto: "True competitor, hard nosed fierce defensive football player—also had incredible courage. He was the type of leader that showed by example and had an unbelievable work ethic and sense of determination." Tied with the team lead in sacks (6).

Tyler Kelly: "Tremendous attitude, always positive and upbeat, not a starter at the beginning but from training camp until the last game he never came out. Outdid any expectations, I was proud of his performance."

Stephen Hurlbut: "Unselfish, showed up to practice everyday, great personality and great dedication."

Jake Cuneo: "Right in front of Kyle (Pinkus) as the heart and soul of the defense, one of the finest offensive lineman I have ever had the pleasure of coaching in my 15 years of football." Second on the team in tackles despite playing nose guard, SSL All-Star, the 6-foot, 5-inch, 260-pound lineman has a very bright football future ahead of him.

Jordan Sargent: "Like Tyler Kelly and Stephen Hurlbut wasn't projected to be a day to day starter but he came in and played center, a new position for him and had an excellent work ethic."

Love smell of anti-freeze in the morning!

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

Well, Jack Frost has certainly delivered us a nippy taste of winter. Students, don't even bother trying to use the excuse that your car was frozen, you still get marked as tardy....too bad (I thought it was a pretty good one!) If freezing in your car is not enough, the heating in CHS seems to be a little lax in certain rooms and it is just a matter of time before an outbreak of the sniffles is reported! Don't forget to bundle up. Enough talk about the weather, it is time to get down to business.

The population of Cohasset will soon be swelling as last year's seniors along with other former students make their second return home from college this year. Bringing with them their typical teenage antics, not to mention their dirty laundry…better bring out the Shout and Cheer now! Also, this Wednesday marked the long awaited return of the beloved Mr. Young, the middle school Tech teacher. Welcome back and good luck at keeping those Middle School kids in line.

On a different note, this year's seniors await anxiously for those oh so daunting college acceptance letters (hopefully). Congratulations to the lucky students who have already gained admittance into a school.

For those eager to help out the senior class now is time to act. The kids of '08 will be selling raffle tickets. The proceeds will go towards post prom party funding. Each student is recommended to sell 10 tickets before Jan. 24th when the drawing will be held. So, don't be afraid to answer the door to a smiling young senior! This is the ONLY fund-raiser for the grade and participation from the community would be much appreciated. The winner will take home a beautiful LX-50 Vespa scooter. A special thank you to Lucia Flibotte who played an active role in creating this year's fundraiser.

Also, a special announcement about the Cohasset Education Foundation; this holiday season give back to teachers by making a tax-deductible donation to the Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit. The donation to the CEF should be in a teacher's name along with a thank you for their work. These contributions will assist in the funding of further CEF grant programs that promote "excellence in teaching and foster innovation." (CEF) Checks should be written to The Cohasset Education Foundation and mailed to: The Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O Box 309, Cohasset, MA 02025 or visit: cohasseteducation.org for any further questions.

Now, the week's main events:

• Monday, Dec. 3: The High School student council began plans for a toy drive. A collection box will be available at the front door of the school; so don't forget to give a charitable gift!

• Tuesday, Dec. 4: Our excellent Girls Soccer team met at Black Rock CC for their end of season banquet. Happy first night of Hanukkah!

• Wednesday, Dec. 5: Another frosty day! Luckily, the Middle School Drama Club was able to rehearse in the "warmth" of the auditorium.

• Thursday, Dec. 6: The lucky students participating in the Virgin Island Ecology Trip met in room 153. Sorry guys, it is not time to whip out the sunglasses and beach towels just yet! Also, the Boys Varsity Basketball played in Scrimmage against Boston Latin Academy.

• Friday, Dec.7: One week down! How many more until winter vacation?

That's all for me this week! Have a great weekend.

Giving Extra Credit to Cohasset teachers

Looking for the perfect gift to thank that special teacher or the helpful school secretary who anwers questions or the art teacher who stayed after school every week to encourage a child to knit hats for the homeless? Cohasset Education Foundation offers the solution to gift giving-needs. With a tax-deductible donation to the CEF's Teacher Appreciation Program, people can send any Cohasset teacher, administrator or school staff member Extra Credit.

Each recipient of an Extra Credit gift will receive a card acknowledging that a donation has been made in his or her honor with a personalized message. The amount of the gift is not disclosed. Donors are able to thank those people who work so hard for the children in the schools, as well as help fund CEF grant programs that foster innovation and excellence in teaching throughout the entire Cohasset Public School System.

With each Extra Credit donation, the CEF will mail an acknowledgement card to the teacher or other special recipient in the Cohasset schools. Cards are available with a suggested minimum donation of $15 each, $50 for five cards, larger donations are always appreciated. All proceeds of the Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit go toward funding professional development in the Cohasset schools. CEF accepts donations for the Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit throughout the entire school year. Not only is this an ideal holiday gift, but a way to thank the teachers and staff in the schools all year long.

Take time this holiday season to honor local educators by participating in the CEF Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit. Donations may also be made in honor of relatives, friends, coaches, grandparents and any other special people or as a memorial remembrance. Checks should be made payable to: Cohasset Education Foundation and mailed to: Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O Box 309, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Caroling on the Common is Dec. 15

Hey there, songsters. Here's a holiday treat for young and old. Once again, Cohasset's First Parish Church is sponsoring a well-loved Cohasset tradition – Caroling on the Common – on Saturday, Dec. 15.

Everyone is welcome to this community event for young and old, especially families with school-age children. Exceptional singing voices are not required; carols will be familiar and simple. Because it gets dark quickly, participants are asked to bring flashlights.

Carolers will leave from the Parish House at 4 p.m. As in the past, carolers will serenade a few homes on the Common, but this year most of our singing will be done around the duck pond – as weather permits. At approximately 4:45 p.m., everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies. Cookie donations would be appreciated.

At approximately 4:45 p.m., everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies. Cookie donations would be appreciated.

Everyone is asked to bring a pair of socks – or two or three – which will be donated to Boston Health Care for the Homeless. Socks should be white cotton; both men's and women's sizes are welcome.

Come join friends for an old-fashioned holiday get-together, and pass the word. The more the merrier! For more information, call Sandy Bailey at 383-1100 or Woody Chittick at 383-3215.

Getaway: Rivers and Waterfalls Run Through It – Ocho Rios

Janine S. Pouliot
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Christopher Columbus recognized a gorgeous thing when he stumbled on it.

In 1494, while traipsing the globe in search of India, he accidentally made landfall on the island of Jamaica. He was wowed by the lushness.

The Spanish named the area Ocho Rios, which means eight rivers. There are, in fact, several rivers that wind their way down from the mountains, through the jungle and into the Caribbean Sea in and around this Jamaican town. There are waterfalls, too, in a place that is still one of the most luxuriant spots in the entire Caribbean.

Exploring nature here is a must-do.

Most tourists make a beeline to the area's top natural attraction, Dunn's River Falls, an interactive experience to say the least.

Area resorts and visiting cruise ships offer excursions to the falls. On a recent trip, I joined a tour that promised, and delivered, a soft eco-adventure in fantastically tropical surroundings.

After getting out of the van, you walk just a few feet and suddenly are in a jungle, with the faint sound of rushing water buzzing in the background. After walking another minute or two, the noise grows louder and then there it is, a powerful falls tumbling over rocks at warp speed.

While the view itself is impressive, the best experience here involves getting up close and personal with the falls. You do this by heading down a boardwalk to start at the bottom, where the river empties out into the bluest of seas trimmed by a white, sandy beach. And then you climb your way back up – you can either go it alone or form a human chain with others by holding hands to be led by a guide as you snake your way from rock to rock against the roaring current.

I made my way up alone, but enjoyed the occasional scream of delight from other excited tourists. The water was cold but I felt exhilarated.

A quieter and drier way to experience a Jamaican river and waterfall is to dine at The Ruins at the Falls restaurant, walking distance from the bustling town center of Ocho Rios and the active cruise ship pier.

As soon as you walk through the arched entranceway of the open-air restaurant you are deep inside a tropical paradise enclosing a magnificent wide falls. Little bridges cross over the Turtle River that runs through the restaurant, the sound of rushing water always in the background.

Snaking up Dunn's River Falls.

You can sit and admire the falls from an open-air terrace shaded by huge banyan and fig trees. It's downright romantic. Menu offerings include local dishes like red pea soup finished with coconut cream, fish chowder, jerk pork or chicken and fried fish. There are Chinese options, too.

You can find another river experience at Coyaba Gardens. Here I drove to the top of the lush mountains that stand as backdrop to Ocho Rios, to find this formal setting of meticulously sculpted gardens, fountains, lawns and brick paths. An easy walk past bright flowers leads to yet another waterfall and platforms from which you can admire the tumbling water, amazing rainforest canopy and stunning coastal vista.

Exploring further, I visited Cranbrook Flower Forest, a privately owned and off-the-beaten-path wild garden that few visitors discover, though it is open to the public. Cranbrook comprises 130 acres of native plants clustered along a walking trail. The grounds have long been the family residence of a local, Ivan Linton, who still unobtrusively lives here.

The day was hot and sultry, and I was lucky enough to bump into Linton, who let me delve into his plant knowledge.

Linton tapped a Traveler's Palm tree with his fist and liquid squirted out. "This was a secret [thirst-quenching] resource known to the island's early settlers," he explained. He pulled a bud from an African tulip and gently squeezed it. Drop after drop plummeted out as he said, "this is good for curing conjunctivitis." Moving on to a cactus, he opined, "the sap of the tuna cactus makes hair shiny."

At the end of the trail is a natural pool overflowing into a waterfall formed by the Laughlands Great River. Guests are invited to jump in.

And that's the way to explore Ocho Rios, jump in and get close to nature.

Bonding with Nature Overnight

The high-end boutique hotel, Goldeneye, is located in the center of a lush jungle about 20 minutes from Ocho Rios. It is a world unto itself, a true tropical paradise. Once the private home of Ian Fleming, who wrote all 13 James Bond novels here, it now consists of five individual units nestled in luxuriant foliage overlooking a perfect beach. Fleming's cottage has an outdoor garden shower and freestanding claw-foot bathtub surrounded by verdant vegetation. Prices start at $660 per night. 1-800-OUTPOST; www.islandoutpost.com.

IF YOU go

Getting there: US Airways offers non-stop service to Montego Bay, on Saturdays only (www.usairways.com). Connecting service is offered through Philadelphia and other airports other days of the week.

Most of the larger Ocho Rios resorts provide airport transfers from Montego Bay. The drive takes about 1 1/2 hours. Taxis run about $120 for up to four people. Inexpensive van service is also available.

Staying there: A fantastic, all-inclusive offering excellent value is the newly refurbished Breezes Runaway Bay near Ocho Rios. Everything is included: accommodations, all meals, snacks, premium drinks, non-stop activities, entertainment and water sports. Prices start at $129 per person, per night. 800-467-8737; www.breezesrunawaybay.com.

In New England: Art Finds at Dartmouth

Barbara Radcliffe Rogers
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

IN NEW ENGLAND

The place may not look like much of an art center, but behind the walls of two buildings facing across the Dartmouth Green at Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H., visitors will find priceless treasures that span nearly three millennia – some 65,000 works in total.

In the lower level of Baker-Berry Library, there are powerful and dramatic murals by José Clemente Orozco. The frescos, titled "The Epic of American Civilization," were painted by the Mexican artist between 1932 and 1934. The ferocity of their themes and their anti-cleric, even anarchistic message created quite a stir when they were unveiled.

Whatever your beliefs, there's no denying that his vision, imagery, vibrant colors and execution are powerful stuff. These are considered among America's finest murals.

Across the green at the Hood Museum of Art, in a modern building next to the Hopkins Center for the Arts, visitors are greeted by six larger-than-life Assyrian reliefs of a king and his attendants from the Palace of Ashurnasirpal, built about 900 BC in what is now northern Iraq. Nearby are displays of a variety of artifacts of the ancient world – a painted figure of Osyros, Cypriot pottery dating to the 8th century BC and various Roman works.

The museum's excellent collection of American art includes paintings by Paul Sample, Maxfield Parrish, Thomas Eakins, Rockwell Kent and Winslow Homer. There is also early silver work and a Gilbert Stuart portrait of Dartmouth's favorite son, Daniel Webster.

A lot of the art has New England and New Hampshire connections. For instance, a Maxfield Parrish painting, in his early almost photographic style, is of a farm in Windsor, Vt. White Mountain artists and artists in the colonies at Dublin and Cornish, N.H., are well represented.

Most of the rest of the exhibit space is given to traveling shows and changing exhibits from the college's own collections, with only small space reserved for the museum's excellent collection of primitive and Native American art.

Both the Hood Museum and Baker-Berry Library are open and free to the public. Hanover is easily accessed from I-89, an easy stop on your way to Woodstock or Vermont ski resorts, including Killington and Sugarbush.

Kitchen Kids workshop

Our World Children's Global Museum, 35 Ripley Road, will host "Cookies Around the World," from 2 to 4 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 8. They will make cookies and treats from all different nations and learn that sweets taste great everywhere. The cost is $25 for members and $28 for non-members. All materials will be included.

To sign up, call 781-383-3198 by 12:30 p.m., Friday, Dec. 7.

Historical Society to host Wassail Party

Cohasset Historical Society will celebrate the holiday season with its annual Wassail Party from 2 to 4 p.m., on Sunday Dec. 9. An invitation is extended to members, guests and the public to join in the festivities at the Pratt Building, 105 South Main St. Refreshments, beverages and the traditional Wassail will be served, and musical entertainment will add to the occasion.

The Pratt Building will be decorated for the season as part of the Community Garden Club's Holiday House Tour with vignettes representing the Victorian era.

Trustees winter program registrations

The Trustees of Reservations, 227 East St., Hingham, will hold registrations for its children's winter programs, from 6:30 to 8 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 13, at the Hingham Public Library, 66 Leavitt St., Hingham. This is the first opportunity to sign children up for the winter sessions of Ecosplorations or Snowflakes. For more information on these programs, visit www.thetrustees.org or call 781-740-4796.

The Trustees of Reservations will hold its "Raise the Wreath" event from 1 to 4 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 15, at Weir River Farm on Turkey Hill Lane in Hingham. After a hike to harvest evergreens, join The Trustees of Reservations to make the barn wreath and leave with a centerpiece for your own holiday table. Refreshments will be served. Space is limited. Preregister by calling 781-740-4796. The cost is $3 for members and $5 for non-members.

Bikram Yoga classes

Cohasset Recreation Department has announced registration is underway for Bikram Yoga classes to be taught by Katrina Klein of Bikram Yoga South Shore. Klein is a national licensed master yoga teacher.

Classes for ages 7 through 13 are scheduled to begin Wednesday, Jan. 9, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., at Bikram Yoga Cohasset Studio, 380 CJC Highway, second level, west wing.

The session will be six weeks in duration, meeting each Wednesday from Jan. 6 through Feb. 13. The fee for the six-week session is $70 per participant. Those attending need to bring a mat and water to each class.

Registration may be made online at Bikramyogacohasset.com or at Cohasset Recreation Department at Town Hall.

Bikram Yoga focuses on physical flexibility, coordination and strength of mind and body. Children who practice yoga often experience increased self-esteem and are better able to cope with stress according to many studies. More detailed information is available on the Web site.

Class size is limited; early registration is advised.

Festival of Trees

Plans are already underway for the 25th anniversary Christmas in the Square and the fourth annual Festival of Trees. This year's Festival of Trees will take place from 5:30 to 8 p.m., on Friday, Dec. 7, and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturday, Dec. 8.

The Festival of Trees transforms Old Derby Academy into a showcase of decorated trees, gingerbread houses, wreaths and live centerpieces. Items are sold through a silent auction with all proceeds benefiting the Mothers' Club Scholarship Fund and other local charities.

Highlights from last year include a Webkinz Tree, "Merry Christmas with the Three Little Pigs," "Orange you Glad it's Christmas," "You Better Watch Out" and "Christmas in Nantucket."

The success of this community event depends on donations from individuals, families, organizations and local businesses. The Mothers' Club is currently accepting donations and is willing to help with ideas for trees. For more information, call Mary Ann Blackmur at 781-749-4452, Mary Power at 781-749-2195, or visit the Mothers' Club Web site at hinghammothersclub.org.

CHS pre-prom DVDs available

DVDs of the 2007 Cohasset High School Pre-prom Reception are still available for purchase for $20 each.

The DVDs, which would make great holiday gifts, can be ordered by calling Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2917 or via email to shaungalvin@yahoo.com. Requests can also be mailed with a check for $20 per DVD to P.O. Box 526, Hingham, MA 02043.

Christmas in Vienna event

Christmas in Vienna, presented by the Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers, will be held at 8 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 8, at the House of Prayer, 916 Main St., Hingham and at 4 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 9, at First Parish on the Green in Cohasset. The major pieces to be performed are by Mozart, Schubert, Brahms, Bruckner, and Mahler.

Replacing the usual program notes, time-travelers will comment on the era and the music before each piece. These brief conversations will focus on the composers and their lives in Vienna, with speakers such as a boarder living in the same rooming house as Mozart, or a mother describing her son's life as a choirboy singing Schubert's "Magnificat" in a Christmas eve service.

The German and Austrian carols between the major pieces will be orchestrated for choir, audience, instruments, and hand bells. The majority is familiar to most of us, with a few distinctly Austrian favorites thrown in. Part-books with the notes will be included in the program, so be sure to bring your music-reading friends.

The Unicorn Singers are entering their 30th season of music making and the Chorale is in its 33rd season. The members live in Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Duxbury, Weymouth, Plympton and Braintree. They represent the best qualities of the dedicated amateur singer, with many years of music study between them; quite a few are musical professionals such as vocal and instrumental teachers, soloists, composers and pianotuners. Founder and Director Margo Euler received her bachelor's degree from Smith and her master's degree in Music from Harvard; she taught in the Concord school system and has conducted several children's choirs and musical theatre productions locally.

OBITUARIES

William E. Hall

Sales representative in cosmetics industry

William E. Hall, 72, of Hingham, died Dec. 4, 2007, at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Mr. Hall was born in Pittsburg, Pa., and lived there and in New York and New Jersey before moving to Hingham, where he was a resident for the past 40 years. He was a graduate of Hamilton College, Clinton, N.Y., and in the mid-1950s served in the U.S. Marine Corps.

He had been employed as a sales representative in the fragrance and cosmetic industry for many years, and was a past president of the New England Cosmetics Association.

He leaves his wife, Inta Z. (Eglavs) Hall; his children, Gregory H. Hall of Hingham and Gwendolyn I. Baldry and her husband, Edwin, of Cohasset; his grandchildren, Michael William Baldry and Daniel Evan Baldry, both of Cohasset; his sister-in-law, Dagnija Eyles of Greenwich, Conn.; three nieces and one nephew.

He was the father of the late William E. Hall Jr.

A funeral service will be conducted at 11 a.m., on Saturday, Dec. 8, at Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, 21 Pond St., Hingham. Visiting hours and flowers omitted by request. Interment is private.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to the Brain Injury Association of Massachusetts, 30 Lyman St., Suite 10, Westborough, MA 01581.

Robert Daniel Williamson

Carpenter

Robert Daniel Williamson, 44, of Cohasset, died Nov. 26, 2007, at his home following a brief illness.

Born in Weymouth, he was the son of Joan (Ridley) Williamson of Scituate and the late Richard C. Williamson. He was raised in Scituate and graduated from Scituate High School. He had been a Cohasset resident for seven years.

Mr. Williamson was a carpenter for New England Regional Council of Carpenters Local 424 for more than 20 years.

He was an avid fisherman, enjoyed guitar and music, and was a Red Sox and Patriots fan.

He leaves his wife, Pamela J. Hinckley-Williamson; his mother; his brothers, Richard Williamson f Scituate, John Williamson of Douglas, Wyo., and David Williamson of Andover; his sisters, Joanne Kramer of Ruskin, Fla., and Susan McRae of Scituate; his mother- and father-in-law, Edward and Barbara (Fitzgerald) Hinckley of Hingham; and many nieces and nephews.

A funeral was held from Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, Scituate, followed by a Mass of Christian Burial at St. Mary of the Nativity Church, Scituate. Interment in St. Mary's Cemetery, Scituate.

Memorial donations may be made to Friends of Scituate Shelter, P.O. Box 823, Scituate, MA 02066.

The Mariner welcomes photos of your loved ones to accompany obituaries by e-mail to mford@cnc.com or by mail to 73 South Street, Hingham, MA 02043

'Miracle' stands the test of time

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Every year at this time, come snow or high winds, Hollywood releases new holiday movies —whether we like it not and whether we like them or not. With apologies to the usually dependable Matthew Broderick, does anyone remember the 2006 clunker "Deck the Halls?" Will any of us, even or maybe especially Vince Vaughn, ever again mention "Fred Claus" after this year? It wasn't always this way. Not so long ago a well-made Christmas movie stood a fair chance of becoming a holiday classic.

"It challenges you to try and understand what makes you believe."
Bill Gardiner

One such film, "Miracle on 34th Street," was released 60 years ago and remains so beloved that it is has been remade no fewer that three more times for television and even as a 1994 feature starring Sir Richard Attenborough as the North Pole's most famous resident. It was also turned into a 1963 Broadway musical entitled "Here's Love," by composer Meredith Willson ("The Music Man"). With no dimming of the film's popularity in the forecast, a non-musical stage production based on it is now being presented at Stoneham Theatre.

"With 'Miracle on 34th Street,' it is the innocence that gives the story its lasting appeal and there is genuine innocence here which takes us all to a time when a little girl could really believe in Santa Claus," explains Bill Gardiner of Weymouth, who is playing Kris Kringle in Stoneham. "It challenges you to try and understand what makes you believe."

Based on a screenplay by Valentine Davies and directed by George Seaton, the 1947 film version starred Maureen O'Hara, John Payne, Edmund Gwynn, and a nine-year-old Natalie Wood. The story takes place just after the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade as a single mother and her daughter, an attorney, and several other people, are left to ponder whether or not Macy's Santa may just be the real Mr. Claus. In Stoneham, the stage production is being directed by the theater company's Producing Artistic Director Weylin Symes from an adaptation by Patricia Di Benedetto, Will Severin and John Vreeke. Gardiner readily admits his own fondness for the story and for the original film.

Susan Walker (Rebecca Lerman) and Kris Kringle (Bill Gardiner) in Stoneham Theatre's theatre production of the holiday classic "Miracle On 34th Street" through Dec. 23.

"I love the classic movie version and I have watched it many, many times over the years," explained Gardiner recently by telephone. "It always gets to me. Just reading the script for this play made me teary-eyed all over again. It shows that Santa is not just some man who automatically delivers presents. Santa is about so much more than just the delivery of toys and gifts to children. Santa delivers on wishes and helps the parents of children who believe in him."

A graduate of Hull High School and a Weymouth resident for the past 12 years, Gardiner is presently pursuing his MFA in Theater Education at Boston University and is also a drama instructor at Boston University Academy. Gardiner doesn't only like the story of "Miracle on 34th Street," he is also quite enamored with his character. Indeed, the longtime professional actor has played Santa twice before at "Breakfast with Santa" events at Weymouth's Pilgrim Congregational Church.

"I'm having a great time. I have to come up with Kris Kringle's jolliness, but it's hard not to be jolly with such a fun part to play. I've even grown my own beard which, with a little additional artificial whitening, makes me look pretty authentic I don't interact with too many children in the show, but I want those from the audience who happen to see me off-stage to be able to tug on the beard and know that it is real and that Santa just may be, too."

"Miracle on 34th Street" will be at the Stoneham Theatre, 395 Main St., Stoneham, through Dec. 23. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-279-2200 or go online at stonehamtheatre.org.

Movie review

Highway 61 man revisited

I'm Not There (A-)
Film Review
By Al Alexander

Just like his subject, Todd Haynes goes electric with "I'm Not There," his masterful and imaginative interpretation of the life and times of Bob Dylan. It delivers a buzz like no biopic before it, simply because there's no other quite like it.

You can have your dull, plodding, by-the-numbers junk like "Ray" and "Walk the Line." Me? I'd rather bask in the utter weirdness of a movie that's not so much about Dylan, but is Dylan, elusive, enigmatic and brilliant.

To fully enjoy it, though, come equipped with two things: an advanced knowledge of the subject and an open mind. Without both, you'll either be galled or dumbfounded by all the tricks Haynes employs to trick out a movie that can best be described as a crosspollination of Fellini and Andy Warhol.

Everything about it is interpretative and abstract, right down to Haynes' decision to use six diverse actors — from Richard Gere to Cate Blanchett — to depict Dylan's seven personalities: poet, prophet, outlaw, fake, martyr, rock star and born-again Christian. Yet the film's message that no one really knows Dylan — even himself — is always clear and linear.

It's also infinitely intriguing, as the man, and the musician, keeps unpredictability and reinvention as his constant companions. And then gleefully sits back and lets those twin obsessions torment fickle fans and sycophants with the same intensity that they torment him.

Caught in the crossfire, unfortunately, is Dylan's marriage; some might even say his sanity. After all, even his staunchest fans will admit the guy is a little bit nutty. Could that be a lingering effect of the 1966 motorcycle accident that nearly killed him?

Haynes seems to think so, using the crash as a demarcation between the folk singer with the deep thoughts, or as he liked to say "the guy who made finger-pointing music," and the androgynous, amphetamine-fueled jerk who drove away friends, fans and family by becoming a virtual recluse for nearly 20 years.

Christian Bale, enjoying the best year of his career, represents the former, and Cate Blanchett, who won an Oscar for impersonating Katharine Hepburn and could well win a second for playing another American icon, represents the former. They form the heart and soul of the movie and garner much of the screen time.

Cate Blanchett conjures up the feminine side of Bob Dylan.

But huge contributions also come via 11-year-old Marcus Carl Franklin, representing Dylan as a fib-telling Woody Guthrie wannabe; Ben Wishaw, portraying the Dylan who became the poet of a generation and the unnerving source of FBI paranoia; and Heath Ledger, handed the unenviable task of representing the singer's numerous faults.

Even a couple of ill-conceived personas — one by Gere, representing the outlaw inside Dylan, aka Billy the Kid, and another by Bale depicting the Pentecostal preacher, manage to engage on a certain level. As do Charlotte Gainsbourg as Dylan's neglected wife, Michelle Williams as his fetching mistress, Julianne Moore as a thinly veiled Joan Biaz, and Bruce Greenwood as both the inspiration for Dylan's infamous "Mr. Jones" and as Pat Garrett, the lawman determined to destroy a legend.

Haynes skillfully weaves each into a story that unfolds through a mix of black and white and color images that jump back and forth between the various stages of Dylan's career, often accompanied by one of his classic tunes, many of them taking on new meaning as you see how they fit into the context of his real life.

The feelings such moments instill are surprisingly moving. And when Haynes cleverly dabbles in metaphor, like Dylan firing machine guns at fans the day he makes the decidedly unpopular decision to go electric at Newport, the film almost feels hallucinogenic.

It's hard to know what to make of Haynes off-beat style initially, but once you fall into his rhythms his collision of style and substance blends into perfect harmony with what he's attempting to do. And that's to present a film that's almost a mirror of a Dylan song, challenging, raspy and inspirational.

Some might even say spiritual, given how Dylan's life eerily reflects that of another man who began life as a Jew, adopted Christian beliefs, was belittled and persecuted by the establishment, and possessed the ability to move millions with his messages.

Such comparisons would no doubt anger Dylan, all seven versions of him. And it would probably be for seven very different reasons.

All of the Dylans, though, including the real one, would have to agree "I'm Not There" is a work of genius. Albeit a wondrously communal one that begins with Haynes and trickles down through his actors, writing partner Oren Moverman, and most especially, his director of photography, Ed Lachman.

Like their collaboration on the Oscar-nominated "Far From Heaven," Haynes and Lachman summon one indelible image after another until you're rendered breathless by all the beauty working in juxtaposition to the pain, sorrow and regret at the fore.

Of course, the film's chief lure will be the timeless music (and there is plenty) of a man who saw the times a changin' and joined The Beatles (seen here in a very funny and clever cameo) in writing the soundtrack for what would become a cultural revolution. And, like John Lennon, it came at a cost. A huge cost that I never fully understood or appreciated until Haynes so eloquently depicted it onscreen.

Now I know, and I doubt I'll ever forget it. Neither will you. But see for yourself, and don't think twice, 'cause it's all right.

Rated R. "I'm Not There" contains language and some sexuality and nudity.

HOSPICE OF THE SOUTH SHORE SEEKS VOLUNTEERS - Greater numbers of people are turning to hospice services as they near the end of life and therefore the need for hospice volunteers is growing.

Hospice of the South Shore, a program of South Shore Hospital, is looking for volunteers to share time each week with hospice patients and their families. Volunteers do a variety of things, depending on the needs of the patient and his or her family. Activities may include providing respite for caregivers, running errands, or just keeping someone company. Many hospice volunteers describe the experience of helping individuals with advanced illness as an honor and a privilege. Hospice of the South Shore will be conducting a volunteer training class. If you are interested in becoming a hospice volunteer, call Marcia Clifford at 617-755-1314.

'Mamma Mia' a musical treat

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Mary Jayne Raleigh and cast from the national tour of Mamma Mia!

First a confession: although I'm old enough to be a part of the original 1970s ABBA fan base, I don't own a single record — on vinyl or otherwise — by the vocal quartet. Now an admission: as I write this it has been three days since I saw "Mamma Mia!" at Boston's Colonial Theatre and the show's songs - including "SOS," "Dancing Queen," "Money, Money, Money," "The Winner Takes It All" and some 20 other pop hits originally recorded by the Swedish super group — are still running on a continuous loop in my head. And I'm not complaining, because "Mamma Mia!" and the music that inspired it aren't just guilty pleasures, they are real pleasures to be enjoyed over and over again.

On its fourth visit to Boston in the six years since it first played here prior to Broadway, "Mamma Mia!" remains a powerhouse at theater box offices worldwide and pure fun for those lucky enough to get tickets. With music and lyrics by Benny Andersson and Bjorn Ulvaeus, and a clever and sweet book by Catherine Johnson, "Mamma Mia!" takes place on a fictional Greek island where Donna Sheridan (Mary Jane Raleigh) owns and runs a taverna. Donna's daughter Sophie (Carrie Manolakos) is engaged to be married to a young local, Sky (Timothy Ware), and, before she walks down the aisle, hopes to learn the identity of her father. When her mother's diary reveals that it could be any one of a trio of men from her past, Sophie decides to invite all three to Greece for her wedding without consulting Donna. The men, Harry Bright (Ian Simpson), Bill Austin (Milo Shandel) and Sam Carmichael (Sean Allan Krill) may not know of their possible daughter, but they do remember Donna and so they travel to Greece for the wedding as do two of Donna's old friends from her days as lead singer of "Donna and the Dynamos," three-time divorcee Tanya (Christine Sherrill) and the unmarried but still-open-to-the-idea Rosie (Allison Briner.)

If you're a romantic then you will enjoy the plot for sure, and if you're not, then just sit back and let one great, familiar song after another wash over you like warm waves from the Aegean Sea. A wonderfully exuberant cast perfectly captures the spirit and humor inherent in these highly appealing characters. Director Phyllidia Lloyd and choreographer Anthony Van Laast keep their talented cast moving to the music on production designer Mark Thompson's simple, but appealing Greek island set which is appropriately sun-splashed thanks to fine work by lighting designer Howard Harrison.

A feature film version of "Mamma Mia!," starring Meryl Streep, is set for release next year, but why wait for the movie? As this sprightly national tour proves, this is one show you can see more than once. So try not to miss this current Boston visit. And if you do go, don't head up the aisle at the first sign of the curtain call or you'll miss the liveliest encore ever in a Broadway show. Would you really want to leave without hearing 'Waterloo'? From start to finish, "Mamma Mia!" is an irresistible musical delight that will put you in a good mood for days — not such a bad thing, especially during the holiday season.

"Mamma Mia!" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., Boston, through Dec. 16. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-931-2787 or go online at broadwayacrossamerica.com.

BEACON OF HOPE

Paula Dickinson, Millie Oswald, Patty Smith, and Jane Reardon of the Social Service League stand behind baskets from the Christmas Angel Project that will be delivered to seniors at Christmas.

Social Service League of Cohasset serves South Shore

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Since 1912, the Social Service League of Cohasset has identified and assisted the most needy and least served people within Cohasset and its surrounding communities. From families to teens to senior citizens, the Social Service League serves as a beacon of hope for those in need.

The organization's longevity has not altered their commitment to their mission — they've had the same focus for 95 years. The objectives of the League are to foster "cooperation for the temporal welfare of the townspeople in relieving poverty, promoting thrift and helping those who are trying to help themselves."

Although the end has remained the same, the group's work is constantly evolving with the growth and needs of the community.

"We try to cover all ages — kids, adults, families, the elderly. It's a big, all encompassing job," says Patty Smith, an officer in the Social Service League Board of Directors and chair of the outreach committee.

The Social Service League of Cohasset has always been based in Cohasset, but much of the work the organization does is beyond Cohasset's

Sewer staging

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It could be another two months before the Zoning Board of Appeals make its decision on the legality of the Little Harbor water and sewer project staging area on Jerusalem Road. Additional evidence and testimony were entered into the record at the continued hearing earlier this week.

No decision was reached and the hearing was left open until next month. The Zoning Board of Appeals requested additional documentation to help it make a determination on whether the staging area at 198 Jerusalem Road is an allowable use under the zoning bylaws.

Since the early fall, pipes, trailers, heavy-duty trucks and equipment have been situated on the private property of 198 Jerusalem Road as the home base for the Little Harbor project. Before the start of the long awaited project, the town's contractor, L. M Holdings, located the small piece of property on Jerusalem Road to serve as the staging area for the duration of the project, approximately two years.

Village all set

Stroll is Saturday

By Nancy White

"City sidewalks, busy sidewalks dressed in holiday style."

The lyrics of the timeless Christmas carol, "Silver Bells" will come alive this Saturday evening in Cohasset village. In recent years, the Village Holiday Stroll has become an annual holiday favorite for both the young and the old. The merchants and business owners strive each year to make the event bigger and brighter than the year before — and this year more businesses are involved than ever.

"It's an event that brings the village together to celebrate the season," says Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's. "There's going to be a festive atmosphere."

The Village Holiday Stroll will be held tomorrow (Saturday, Dec. 15) from 4 to 7 p.m. Village shops and businesses from Ripley Road, South Place and South Main Street will join in the fun with each business offering something different to the mix — music, crafts, food, drink.

Lt. William Quigley with the 2007 Award for Excellence in Police Service.

Lt. Quigley recognized by police council

Cohasset Police Lt. William Quigley was presented the 2007 Award for Excellence in Police Service by the Greater Boston Police Council (GBPC) at its annual meeting on Monday, Dec. 3.

The GBPC, with an Executive Board of 10 police chiefs, provides the Boston Area Police Emergency Radio Network (BAPERN), Simulation Based Incident Command Training and Collective Purchasing for its 143 member agencies.

The GBPC gives an annual award to an officer who best utilizes the BAPERN system to assist in resolving a law enforcement incident.

Numerous people from the 143 agencies were nominated for the 2007 award.

Lt. Quigley was chosen for his monitoring of the BAYPERN system after a State Trooper was fired upon while attempting to stop a vehicle involved in a previous robbery. A police pursuit followed and made its way down Route 3A heading toward Cohasset.

Lt. Quigley's monitoring this situation led to the use of "stop sticks" on the suspect vehicle and to the suspect's eventual arrest.

Chief James Hussey said this is a great example of being able to communicate with other law enforcement jurisdictions.

"This dangerous felon had made his way through numerous communities, showing a total disregard for anyone's safety," Hussey said. "Lt. Quigley's monitoring of the situation via the BAPERN radio system, and quick thinking, led to the capture of this suspect."

Police Beat

Weather wreaks havoc with motorists

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police say last Friday's snowfall, which made the area look like a Currier and Ives holiday card, was a nightmare for motorists.

At least five accidents from about 4 p.m., Friday, to 1 a.m., Saturday, appeared to be weather-related.

Chief James Hussey said if conditions worsen again last night (after the Mariner went to press) and later this weekend, extra manpower would be called in to help with any emergency situations.

However, he urges motorists to stay off the roads if possible when the snow falls to allow DPW crews to "get out in front of the storm."

Those who must drive should travel below the speed limit. "They should really slow down – if they are going fast and hit the brakes, they will lose control," Hussey said.

"They should really slow down – if they are going fast and hit the brakes, they will lose control."
— Chief James Hussey

Loss of control in slippery conditions appears to be exactly what happened in several instances last Friday (Dec. 7).

• At 4:03 p.m. that afternoon, the driver of a car traveling north on Jerusalem Road, applied the brakes at a curve and struck a wall in the 750 block. There appeared to be only minor injuries and the 2000 Ford Toyota driven by a Weymouth resident was towed.

• At 4:39 p.m., a 2006 Hyundai driven by a Scituate resident was traveling on Forest Avenue toward the water when it went into a slide and traveled through the intersection with Jerusalem Road and hit a boulder. That car was also towed and the operator did not have any apparent injuries.

• At 6:19 p.m., a Cohasset resident hit the brakes of a 1998 Volvo and was unable to recover from the resulting skid. The car hit and snapped a utility pole on lower King Street. There were no apparent injuries. The car was towed and National Grid was called to repair the pole.

• At 10:46 p.m., on North Main Street, a Cohasset resident driving a 1998 Nissan from Hingham at about 40 mph slid on the icy road near the grade crossing, drove up on the sidewalk, took down a sign and crashed into the gate crossing signal at the railroad tracks. The operator was treated at the scene for minor injuries. The car was towed and the driver was cited for excessive speed for the conditions. An MBTA crew came out to fix the damage to the crossing gate. The last train of the evening had already passed through.

• At 1:05 a.m. (Saturday), a 2001 Toyota driven by a Norwell resident came to a bend eastbound on Jerusalem Road; the operator hit the brakes and slid into a utility pole, snapping it. The car was towed and National Grid was called. The driver was not injured, police said.

Other accidents

• On Tuesday (Dec. 4) at about 2:20 p.m., a three-car chain reaction accident occurred on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A).

All cars involved were headed southbound when the first in line, a 1997 Ford driven by an Abington resident, stopped to allow a car headed in the opposite direction to make a left-hand turn. A 1990 Oldsmobile out of Weymouth hit the rear of the Ford; and a 1994 Toyota out of Hingham hit the Oldsmobile. The Oldsmobile was towed.

• Later that afternoon (Tuesday) at about 3:07 p.m., a northbound 2006 Dodge driven by a Cohasset woman on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) stopped to make a left into a business and was rear-ended by a 2000 Volvo out of Cohasset. The Volvo was towed. There were no apparent injuries.

• Following a minor accident on Mendel Road last Thursday (Dec. 6) at about 7:55 a.m. involving a trailer that was read-ended by a vehicle, one of the people involved is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation. Chief Hussey said the 27-year-old Weymouth man provided the police officer with a Brazilian license and did not have a Massachusetts license as required for all residents who drive.

Bank robber

A 26-year-old Braintree woman has been arrested on a warrant for her role in a bank robbery in October in Cohasset.

Marci D. Picardi of 192 West St. is facing charges of armed robbery and threat to commit a crime. Cohasset has been working with the FBI and other agencies in investigating the crime. On Oct. 13, a lone female – now believed to be Picardi — entered the Sovereign Bank, 380 CJC Highway and passed a demand note to the victim teller, indicating that she was robbing the bank. After taking a sum of money, she fled the bank on foot.

On Oct. 29, Cohasset Police charged Scott Brown, 25, of Quincy with unarmed robbery in connection with the robbery. Brown is believed to have been the getaway driver, picking up Picardi on Sohier Street following the robbery.

ZBA requests additional information for next hearing

The contractor got a verbal go ahead from Building Inspector Bob Egan and prepared the site for use by blacktopping, fencing and placing hay bails around a section of private property at 198 Jerusalem Road, located right in the midst of project work.

But, a neighbor in close proximity to the staging area, Eileen Craven of 6 Nichols Road, appealed Building Inspector Bob Egan's opinion/decision that allowed the project contractor to base its operations in the residential district. The Zoning Board of Appeals held the second session of the continued hearing on the appeal Tuesday evening.

At the heart of the matter is whether the town is operating the staging area. The zoning bylaws allow the staging-area use in a residential district if the town or other governmental agency is operating the use of the property.

In between the two hearings, the Sewer Commission sought out the opinion of Town Counsel on the matter. In short, Town Counsel affirmed Building Inspector Bob Egan's decision.

In his memo to the Sewer Commission, Town Counsel Rick Hucksam stated "the project is being conducted by the Town with the construction company and the engineering company acting on behalf of and/or agents for the town," and he argues, if that is the case the staging area is an allowed use of the lot.

The town owns the project material stored on the site and the town's project engineering firm, Coughlin Environment, works out the trailers on the site.

Identifying the relationship between the town and the contractor, who holds the lease on the staging area property, was a key issue to Zoning Board member Kathleen Hunter. She requested Coughlin provide a copy of the contract between L M Holdings and the town to help determine the legal relationship between the two entities.

> "There will be complaints anywhere you go."
> — Ray Kasperowicz, Sewer Commission

Attorney for the appellant, Rich Henderson, cited evidence that indicated the town has attempted to "disavow association with the staging area."

"Everything done indicates the town is not in or wanted control [of the staging area]," said Henderson. Details of the private lease between the landowner and the contractor were not public; supporting his argument the town is not operating the site.

Bob Sturdy, Planning Board member and a resident of Jerusalem Road, said the staging area's operations often spill out onto the Jerusalem Road blocking traffic.

"You call it a staging area, I would call it a heavy industrial site," Sturdy said, adding the staging area could have an impact on the residential neighborhood in home valuation, "we pay long green (in taxes) and are entitled to the benefits given in the zoning bylaws."

Sturdy suggested other sites, like the town land used for the Recycling Transfer Facility or the prospective Avalon site, would be more suitable — and have more room — for the staging area operations. In a phone interview, he said these sites were only suggestions and he hadn't researched the feasibility of either site.

Wayne Sawchuk of 432 Beechwood St. said he helped the contractor find the site for the staging area on Jerusalem Road, "we looked at over 30 sites, in and out of town," he said. But, the property at 198 Jerusalem Road worked best because of its near proximity to the project work.

"If we found the right staging area, it was possible the work could be done in a year and a half," he said, saving the town significant funds on police details and mobilization costs.

Reading from a copy of the private contract between L M Holdings and the property owner, Sawchuk said protections and safeguards were in place. By citing just part of the previously private document, he thereby entered it into public record. But, Sawchuk did not submit the document at the end of the hearing.

The Mariner was able to obtain a copy of the lease and it does provide some safeguards for the leasor and the neighborhood, including not allowing "hazardous, toxic, inflammable, combustible or explosive fluid" etc. except for fluids contained in construction equipment and vehicles, installing security lighting as necessary without causing glare on any abutting residence, no work after 7p.m. or before 6a.m., and no mud or dust be carried onto public roadway. The contract also calls for the contractor to request permission from the contract awarding authority (the town) to use the site as a staging area and to obtain necessary permits.

Chairman Woody Chittick requested Henderson provide documentation to show the appellant, Eileen Craven, has standing as an aggrieved party by the presence of the staging area.

The homeowners in the 485 to-be-sewered households in the Little Harbor district are paying for the entire project price of all $15.2 million. A delay caused by the moving of the staging area could cost the residents of Little Harbor, Sewer Commissioner Ray Kasperowicz said.

"We're not able to come up with an immaculate sewer project," said Kasperowicz, "I think [the appellant] would be hard pressed to tell us where else to put the staging area…There will be complaints anywhere you go."

As the town waits for the Zoning Board of Appeals decision, the Planning Board has made its recommendation in favor of the appellant. If the ZBA does not agree with the Planning Board's opinion, per the bylaws it will have to give its reasons for disagreeing.

It could be February before a decision is made. The Zoning Board requested a 60-day extension from the appellant; Henderson said he would file it with the town. With an appeal, by law the Zoning Board has to hand down a decision within 100 days of the application filing.

If the Zoning Board upholds Craven's appeal, the decision could then be appealed to Superior Court. It's unclear whether the Jerusalem Road staging area would have to be shut down while the issue was under court appeal.

The hearing will continue at the next Zoning Board meeting, Jan. 8, 2008.

Wreath heist

A Weymouth woman is facing the charge of attempting to commit a crime after, police said, she was trying to steal five wreaths from the Village Greenery after hours. An officer saw the woman pull in at about 10:50 p.m. on Friday (Dec. 7) and he parked across the street to observe.

The officer saw the woman put wreaths into her vehicle. He went over and got her identification and confiscated the wreaths, which were later returned to the Village Greenery.

The woman allegedly told the officer that she had permission from the owner to take them. The officer could not confirm that at that time, but further investigation revealed that was not the case and she is being summonsed to court to face the criminal charge.

Stolen package

A Hammond Avenue resident left a package from a family friend on the doorstep so the children inside would not see it. However, when she went to retrieve it, it was gone. Police believe the package was stolen; and ask anyone who may have seen anything suspicious to contact them. The incident was reported on Wednesday (Dec. 5).

Strange email

At about 9:11 a.m., last Thursday (Dec. 6), Cohasset police received an email from a man who said he had been chatting with a woman from Randolph online on Myspace and the woman said "I'm going to OD and goodbye" and signed off. Police emailed the man back and received no response but have contacted the Randolph PD.

OUI arrest

Cohasset police arrested a 42-year-old Hull woman with operating under the influence of liquor after Hingham police stopped her on Hull Street in Cohasset. HPD radioed Cohasset. In speaking with Hingham police and based on the officer's observations at the scene, it was determined her driving was impaired by alcohol, Chief Hussey said.

Revoked registration

An 18-year-old Scituate woman is being summonsed on charges of operating an uninsured and unregistered motor vehicle. A Cohasset officer on patrol saw a blue 1994 Chevy Cavalier come into the Tedeschi Plaza parking lot at a high rate of speed last Saturday (Dec. 8) at about 7:34 p.m. when people were still shopping and pedestrians were walking about. She pulled up near Starbucks and the officer drove over. The officer determined that the registration had been revoked due to insurance cancellation. The car was towed and she is being summonsed on those charges.

Random check

An officer ran a random registration check on a 2008 Cadillac Seville that revealed the plate was revoked due to no payment of insurance. As it turned out the registered owner, a 60-year-old Norwell man who was driving the car, had an expired license. He is being summonsed on charges of operating with a suspended registration, operating without insurance, and driving while unlicensed. The traffic stop took place last Saturday (Dec. 8) at 10:23 p.m. on Sohier Street.

Energy alternatives

AEC making strides toward efficiency

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"So far all signs are positive that we have good wind for turbines in Cohasset."
— Andrew Willard, AEC chairman

The Alternative Energy Committee is looking to make changes, both large and small, throughout town buildings to increase energy efficiency. Incremental and innovative energy solutions are on the horizon — a zoning bylaw for commercial wind turbines, solar walls, and a way for residents to get involved in the effort are just a few of the AEC's current projects.

Coming up at the Annual spring Town Meeting, the AEC (along with the Planning Board) is putting forth a zoning bylaw creating guidelines, including height restrictions, for govern the implementation of commercial-sized wind turbine(s). Members of the AEC have been working on the wind-zoning bylaw since the summer months. The bylaw will address large wind turbines, like the two windmills in Hull, not small, residential wind turbines.

The voters at Annual Town Meeting will have the final say on the wind bylaw.

To complement the wind-zoning bylaw, the AEC is currently gathering a year's worth of wind data to see if Cohasset has enough wind to make a turbine feasible.

"So far all signs are positive that we have good wind for turbines in Cohasset," says AEC chairman Andrew Willard. A meteorological experimental test, or MET tower, was installed on Turkey Hill in May to collect the wind data.

The AEC efforts with the MET tower have required little town taxpayer funds: the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative is covering the cost of the entire MET tower effort, from its installation to the data analysis to an end report showing the "quality of the wind" in Cohasset. If the town were to pay for the project, the cost would be between $25,000 and $35,000.

The largest town energy consumer, the Middle-High School, and the transfer station have been floated as possible future locations for a wind turbine.

Wind isn't the only energy alternative the committee is exploring. Both Keyspan and National Grid recently completed energy audits on all town buildings. The committee is going to be reviewing the audit reports and determining the best ways to increase the energy efficiency in each municipal building.

Many of the grants available for alternative energy efforts require the town to provide energy audit data. The AEC's professional consultants, Joanne Sanders and Judeth VanHamm, will assist as the committee creates action items out of the audit findings.

Installing a solar wall at Deer Hill School, or other municipal buildings, is one of the leading endeavors. Solar walls are just catching on in the US, but have been used successfully for decades in Canada, said Willard. The solar wall is a mechanism to pre-heat air before it enters the building. The air is pulled up from the bottom of the panels and heats the air from 20 degrees (or whatever the outside temperature is) to 50 degrees. The result is the natural gas heating system does not have to work as hard, or expend as much energy, to heat the air to a comfortable inside temperature of 70 degrees.

Especially in the cold New England winters when the clean outside air from outside is in the 20s and 30s, the solar wall can be an energy and cost saver, "it's a very effective way to pre-heat the air," said Willard. Deer Hill has been targeted because of its southerly facing wall.

To achieve energy efficiency throughout the town's buildings, the AEC is looking for grants and other alternative funding methods. The AEC is encouraging residents to sign up for National Grid's Clean Energy Choice program. Residents who participate pay a few extra dollars (between $5 and $12) on each month's electricity bill and the money supports the development of renewable energy. Each additional participating household helps to earn matching grants for the town.

"Cohasset currently has a over $7,000 in grant funding available with fewer than 50 homes participating in 2007. If we can have another 200 to 250 homes sign up we can boost the grant funding to $100,000 and install a solar photovoltaic (PV) array on the Paul Pratt Library for free," explained Willard.

The Cohasset Alternative Energy Committee normally meets on the second Tuesday of the month at 7:30 – 9:00 p.m. at the Town Hall.

Briefly

DPW ready for the snow

The Department of Public Works is gearing up the weekend snowstorms as the Mariner went to print on Thursday morning. If the weather forecasts are correct, between six to 10 inches will be on the ground Friday and another storm close on the horizon.

The Cohasset DPW is prepared for the first big snowfall of the season. The salt and sand shed is filled to the brim and the plows are on the trucks just waiting for the snow to begin falling, said Mary Snow, the DPW administrative assistant. The shed was recently refilled after the icy storms of the last few weeks.

Typically, the DPW waits for the Police Department to give the go ahead to begin sanding and salting the roads, "they let us know when the roads start getting slippery," said Snow. A layer of the white stuff is usually on the road when the Police call. The DPW begins plowing the roads after a few inches have fallen.

Toys for Tots drive under way

Cohasset police are joining with the Marines Corps in the annual holiday Toys for Tots campaign through Dec. 24.

New toys and games can be dropped off at the Cohasset Police Headquarters, on Elm Street, 24 hours a day, and seven days a week. Toys and games should not be wrapped.

For more information, call the police station at 781-383-1055.

Free legal clinic

Do you have a legal question or are you confused about a legal issue? The Bar Association of Norfolk County will sponsor a free legal clinic as a public service to the community from 6 to 8 p.m., Dec. 11, at Quincy District Court, 1 Dennis F. Ryan Parkway, Quincy Center.

A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for one-on-one consultations to discuss legal questions. All consultations are strictly confidential.

For information contact Adrienne C. Clarke, Bar Association of Norfolk County, at 617-471-9693.

BRIGHT SIDE

Hello Cohasset. As you are reading this, we may have a town filled with snow with more to come this weekend or, a mix of stuff, with snow and rain etc. Whatever we have at this time or get, try to look at the bright side of it if you can. That means outdoor time for the kiddos that is a lot of fun if they are sledding. Etc., enjoying the prettiness of it before it gets icky looking and the fact that with each storm we get, spring gets a day or two closer, hee, hee! How is everyone doing with their holiday plans and shopping? The time is now I know but boy oh boy, it is tricky to say the least! In this family, we have a lot to be thankful for and happy with as my oldest just had his surgery this past week and it went relatively well and that is more than enough surgery in a year for us!

Happy Holidays to all and I know I say this a lot but I have to remind myself as well, "Enjoy the small moments of happiness and wonder each day while having to deal with and figure out all of the big moments." It does help when life gets big and overwhelming, it is just a matter of remembering and doing it. Well, here is this week's column with a lot of news and event information to look over.

SISTER HAZEL

Congratulations to Rebecca Dickinson, Jenny Magruder and Carly Oddleifson, all students at the South Shore Conservatory. On Dec. 1st, they and fellow students from the Conservatory were asked to accompany the band Sister Hazel as participants of a vocal and string ensemble. The concert was held at the Somerville Theater in Davis Square. The band, Sister Hazel, is famous for the 1997 hit, "All for You", and has just released a Christmas album called "Santa's Playlist." The students from the Conservatory sang and played backup for several of the songs before a merry crowd of almost 900. A truly wonderful experience for these young musicians!

BASIC TRAINING

Navy Seaman Recruit Joseph M. Naples, son of Teresa J. Connor of Marshfield and Joseph T. Naples of Cohasset recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill. During the eight-week program, Joseph completed a variety of training, which included classroom study and practical instruction on naval customs, first aid, firefighting, water safety and survival, and shipboard and aircraft safety. An emphasis was also placed on physical fitness. The capstone event of boot camp is "Battle Stations". This exercise gives recruits the skills and confidence they need to succeed in the fleet. "Battle Stations" is designed to galvanize the basic warrior attributes of sacrifice, dedication, teamwork and endurance in each recruit through the practical application of basic Navy skills and the core values of Honor, Courage and Commitment. Its distinctly "Navy" flavor was designed to take into account what it means to be a Sailor. Joseph is a 2007 graduate of Weymouth High School of Weymouth and his family and friends are so proud of him and his accomplishments. Great work Joseph, keep it up!

HOLIDAY STROLL

Village merchants are busy planning the annual Cohasset Village Holiday Stroll to be held on Saturday, Dec.15th in Cohasset Village, encompassing South Main Street, Elm Street, Depot Court, Pleasant Street, and Ripley Road. From 4-7 p.m. the streets will be alive with holiday cheer as businesses stay open late with refreshments, open houses, entertainment, and special holiday celebrations. For children, there will be a hay ride and visits with Santa. Each participating business will offer a raffle prize; tickets are available at the Village businesses and all proceeds will benefit the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project. For more information visit any of the Village locations.

EXTRA CREDIT!

Walk through any of the Cohasset schools and you can see the impact of CEF's fundraising efforts. The CEF's grant programs are made possible by you — families with an interest in fostering excellence in our schools through innovation and creativity in teaching. Please consider donating to the CEF's annual donor campaign, which is currently under way. And look forward to CEF's upcoming events including the Annual Spring Gala and first Children's Spelling Bee for grades 2 - 5. And, don't forget to participate in the CEF's Teacher Appreciation Program, "Extra Credit" this holiday season!

HANDEL'S MESSIAH

A special musical program featuring selections from Handel's Messiah will be presented this Sunday, Dec. 16 at 10 a.m. at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave. Don't miss this beautiful holiday presentation, which features a full choir, strings, and brass instruments. Admission is free and everyone is welcomed. What a wonderful way to get into the season and enjoy some truly spectacular music.

CAROLING!

Reminder! Caroling on the Common tomorrow (Saturday) at 4 p.m., followed by cider, cocoa & cookies at First Parish's Trueblood Hall. Bring a flashlight, cookies, and cotton socks for the homeless. Everyone is welcome!

That is all for this week. Please send me in all of your Holiday week news no later than next Tuesday by 5 pm.

MAIL: PO BOX 33, Cohasset, MA 02025

Photos and copy may also be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street by 8 a.m. Tuesday for that week's issue.

Evans elected to BGCB's board

Sheila Evens of Cohasset was among the 16 new overseers appointed to the Board of Overseers by the Boys & Girls Clubs of Boston at the agency's 113th annual meeting held Nov. 27. The meeting and reception were held at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston in celebration of the six-year partnership between the two organizations that is providing Club members with access to a world-class museum's collections and bringing hands-on arts programming into the Clubs.

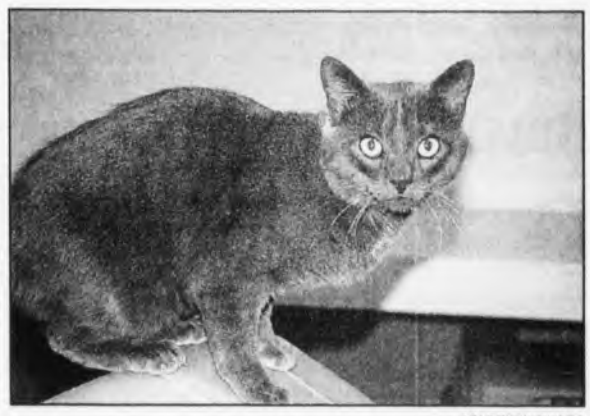
"Our Board continues to be the most impressive in the city, and it is an honor for me to work with such an esteemed group of philanthropists who care so deeply about our city and its youth," said Linda Whitlock, BGCB's Nicholas President and CEO. "The newly elected Board members join us at a pivotal time in our history. As we begin implementation of our five-year Strategic Plan, they can have a significant impact on our work."

Sheila Evans is a community volunteer who has served Greater Boston and Cohasset for more than 40 years.

Sheila Evans

Board Chair Sandra Edgerley said, "I'm so grateful to our highly engaged Board members for the important achievements of the past year, including the rededication of our newly renovated and expanded Blue Hill Club in Dorchester and remarkable progress on our $100 million Comprehensive Campaign, which we will complete in June 2008."

The Board of Overseers is charged with supporting BGCB's principal activities and policies, and acting as a liaison between the agency and the various communities it serves.



Sheila Evans is a community volunteer who has served Greater Boston and Cohasset for more than 40 years. Her work, often focused on development, has benefited the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset Library Trust, Inc., Cohasset Central Cemetery, Smith College, Town of Cohasset and WGBH. She completed her education at the Dana Hall School and Smith College. She currently lives in Cohasset with her husband, and has three children and nine grandchildren.

GIMME SHELTER

Patrick is a young gray male short-hair. He is currently being fostered, but the person fostering him spends the winter in Florida and cannot bring Patrick. Patrick needs to be the only animal in the family. He is bright and playful and would benefit by finding a forever home.

HSAR (Hull Seaside Animal Rescue) is a no kill shelter, and prides itself on caring for each animal and attending to their individual needs.

The shelter would like to compile a list of people available for occasional vet runs during day-time hours. Give then shelter a call at 877-378-1198 to be put on its list. Every effort will be made to call back within 24 hours. For more information, email hsar@hsar.org or visit the Web site at hsar.org.

Drama at the high school

Arts Boosters put on workshop

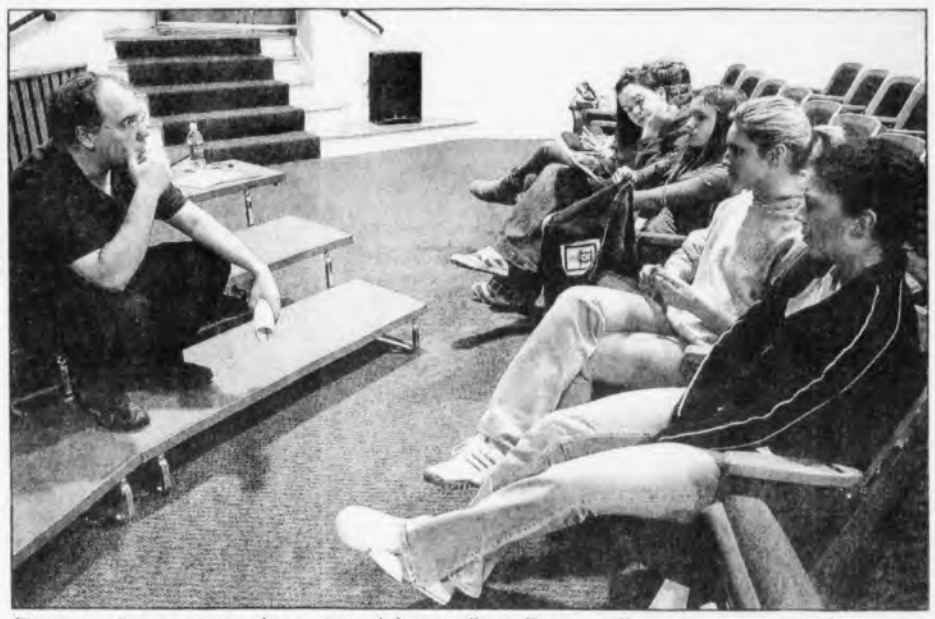
By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The high school has a little bit of drama over the past month — in a good way. The Cohasset Arts Boosters recently sponsored an evening drama workshop for a small group of students to hone their acting chops.

The drama workshop is the second workshop the Arts Boosters have sponsored at the high school to enhance the current arts curriculum. In the late spring, the Arts Boosters put on a sound recording workshop to teach a small group of musically inclined students how to operate in-house digital recording equipment.

"The workshop was so successful, we wanted to do something similar for the students interested in drama," said Elaine Breslow, president of the Arts Boosters.

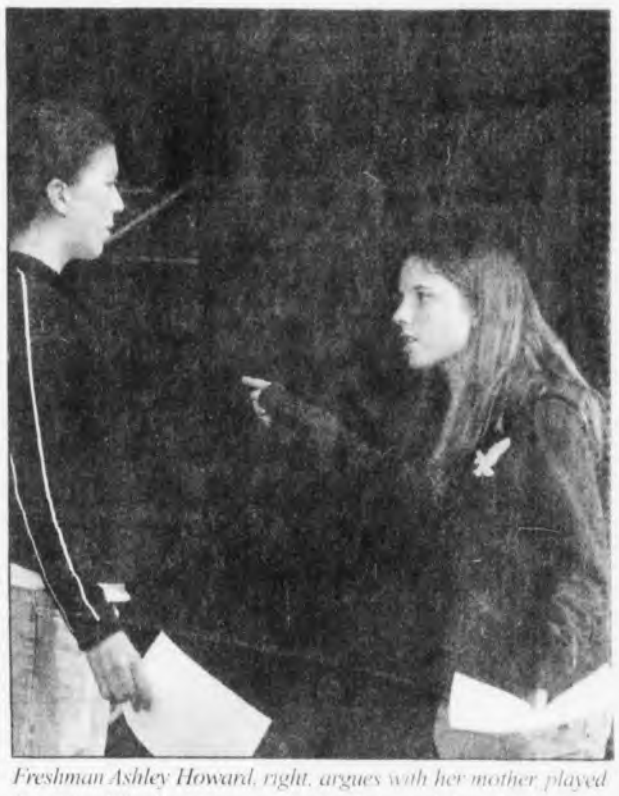
Like the sound recording workshop, the Arts Boosters sought out a professional to bring on for the workshop series. They found a collaborating partner in Steve Dooner, a drama professor, actor and experienced director for the Company Theatre, Fiddlehead Theatre, Bay Colony Orpheum Theater, and Quincy College Drama Society.



During an exercise to help the students learn how to create performance on stage freshman Ashley Howard shows how she would read in her room.

The four sessions, each an hour and a half long, were held on consecutive weeks in November and December. Each workshop addressed different dramatic skills; developing vocal techniques and delivery, shaping a dramatic scene, performing monologues, and practicing improvisation, to name a few. The class is intended to bring the students acting abilities to the next level.

Although Cohasset High School students participate in each spring in the Massachusetts High School Drama Guild Festival and put on a musical production every other year, there is no drama program in the current high school curriculum.



"Our school is at a huge disadvantage," when competing with larger high schools with strong drama programs, says Breslow, "we wanted to give kids a little bit of training."

Drama professor, actor and experienced director Steve Dooner talks to the group of students at a session of the Arts Booster-sponsored workshop. The four sessions, each an hour and a half long, were held on consecutive weeks in November and December.

About 10 students signed up for the workshop, some were completely new to the stage while others have basked in the stage lights glow before, says Breslow. The workshop was free to participants.

"We want to support kids that are interested and we want to get kids interested in dramatics," says Breslow.

Senior Sally Meehan eyes the center of the stage while doing a stage exercise to train the actors how to establish a presence on the stage. Drama workshop instructor Steve Dooner took the exercise from Japanese No theatre where the actors have to think of a goal and then attain it in the exercise.

Freshman Tara Goodwin lounges in a chair bored out of her mind, but she's only acting—she's simulating what she would do in her bedroom. The exercise was a part of the Arts Boosters recent series of drama workshops.

Cohasset helps Hingham fight house fire

Eight towns provide mutual aid

Staff photos by Robin Chan

Two Scituate firefighters frame Cohasset Fire Chief Robert Silvia as he pulls up a hose up to the second floor of the four-alarm fire that severely damaged a $2 million, 8,000-square-foot home on Crooked Meadow Lane in Hingham on Tuesday. No one was injured. Officials estimate the house sustained at least $1 million in damage.

Cohasset firefighter Jim Curley stands by the hydrant on Hingham's Main Street (Route 228) while listening to chatter on the CV during the four-alarm fire at Crooked Meadow Lane on Tuesday. It took approximately 2,000 feet of hose to reach the hydrant on Main Street. Eight area towns helped the Hingham Fire Department fight the blaze that started from improperly disposed of ashes from a pellet stove.

Cohasset Fire Lt. Bob Protulis he tries to take down part of the burned out roof while helping fight the four-alarm blaze in Hingham on Tuesday. The fire started in a bag of smoldering ashes that was left outside; the fire eventually worked its way from the outside into an inside wall. Hingham Chief Mark Duff said it was the third fire in that town in a week caused by the improper disposal of ashes.

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

Nellie Bates Stoddard wore this "Blue Star" pin proudly every day during WWII to signify that she had four sons in the service. She quite possibly also had a four star flag hanging in her home's front window which was the custom during the war.

Happy Holidays from the Cohasset Historical Society

As we approach the first anniversary of From the Archives we thought it would be appropriate and timely to look back to our first column. We started this endeavor last December by publishing letters from Cohasset men serving our country during World War II. As their letters were so moving we would like to share a couple more.

Jan. 15, 1945

I wish to express my appreciation for the nice Xmas card, and the very welcome money order. I wish to thank both the American Legion and the Rotary as well as the people of Cohasset. It makes you feel proud to come from a town that is as public spirited as is Cohasset. This will make my eighteenth crossing of the Atlantic and the one thought I have in mind each trip is the hope of getting back to Cohasset, if for only a few hours. Thanking you again.

I am yours very truly,
George H. Snow, Jr. C.C.S.

Somewhere in Luxembourg
Dear Cohasset Friends-

How pleasant to discover that, although another year has passed, one is still remembered in that little New England town of which one speaks and thinks so very often. As a sort of adopted daughter, I am, I suppose more than usually surprised and touched when that Christmas remembrance arrives. Think of me spending it happily-and gratefully-in a Paris book stall or box office.

It might amuse you to know that this stationary came from Bastogne, that Belgian town so prominent in the news of late. We were there for five days recently, to serve an armored division, sleeping in windowless buildings, plowing through deep snow and, best of all, rejoicing with the boys over the wonderful reports from both fronts.

My very best wishes to everyone.

Sincerely yours,
Mary Churchill Small

Fire safety

We are all very thankful that no one was hurt Tuesday in a four-alarm fire at a home on Crooked Meadow Lane in Hingham.

The Cohasset Fire Department was among eight area FDs to provide mutual aid.

The improper disposal of ashes caused the fire and not surprisingly – this type of fire is not uncommon.

So with cold weather here and more fireplaces and wood stoves in operation, this is a good time to review some fire safety recommendations.

According the National Fire Protection Association, over a four-year period nationwide a hot fireplace ember or ash that was abandoned or discarded caused nearly 10,000 structure fires. Those fires caused millions of dollars in property damage and dozens of civilian deaths and injuries.

The NFPA recommends discarding fireplace ashes in a heavy metal container, moistening the ashes and covering the container with a metal lid. Never use a paper bag, cardboard box or plastic trash bag.

The NFPA also notes that the ashes should be kept in a metal container outside, away from the house, not the garage or deck. After four days, select a non-wooded place to dump the ashes.

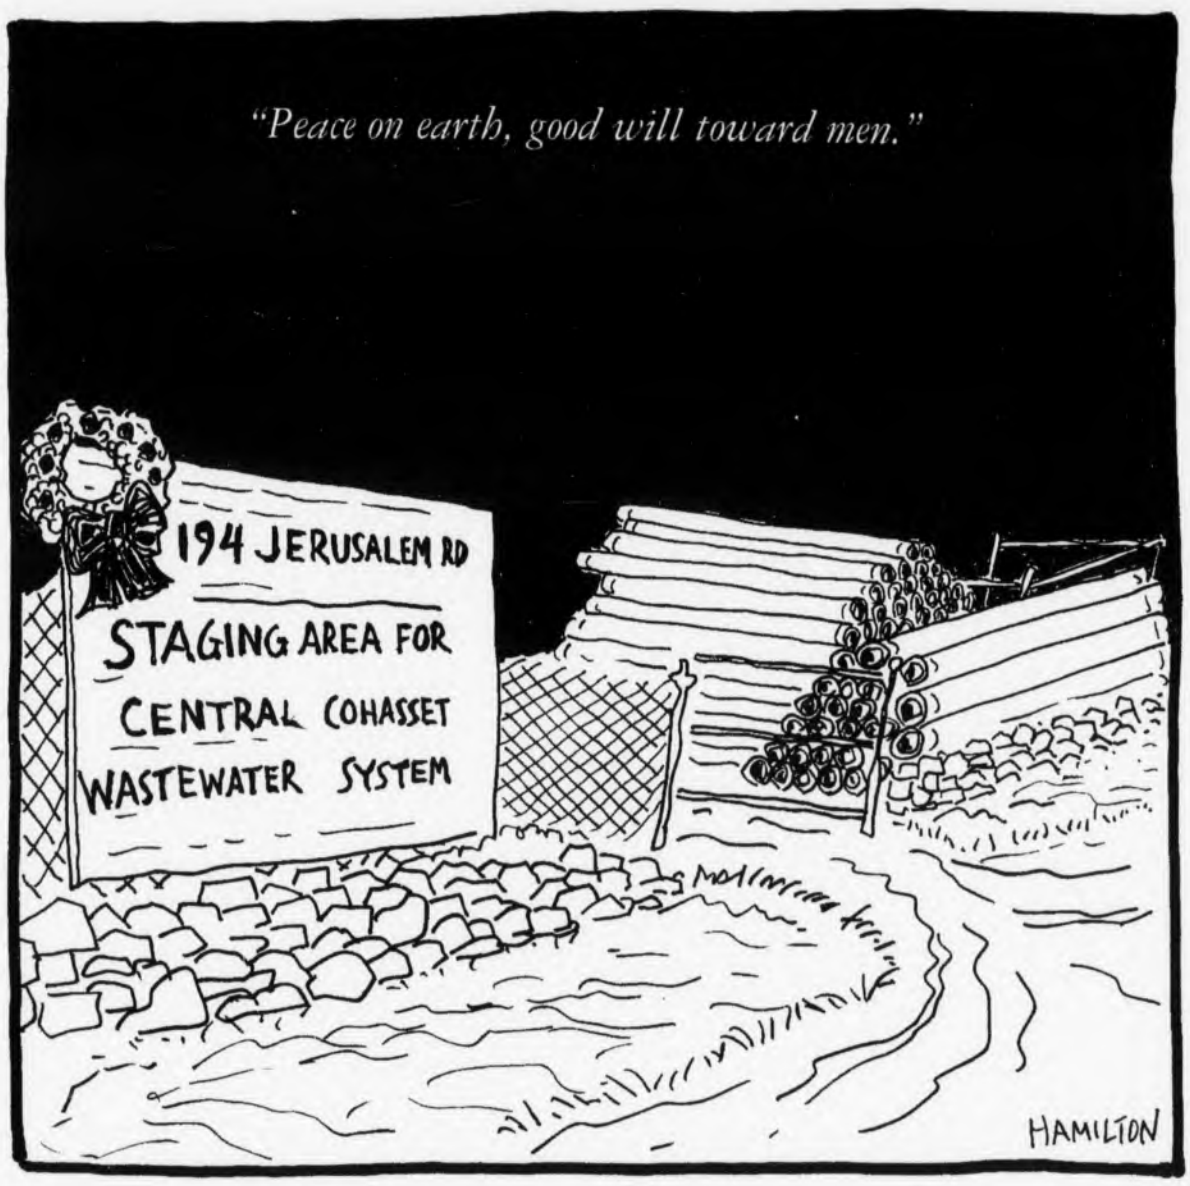
Other fireplace recommendations include:

- Burn only dry, well-seasoned wood.
- Use artificial logs according to manufacturer's recommendations.
- Use only newspaper and kindling wood to start a fire. Never use flammable liquids, such as lighter fluid, kerosene or gasoline to start a fire.
- Have a sturdy screen on a fireplace.
- Do not burn wrapping paper or plastic items in the fireplace. These materials can ignite suddenly and burn intensely, resulting in a flash fire

This time of year, candles are also popular. In fact, many people give holiday candles as gifts. Candles can also cause structure fires. So please observe the following safety tips:

- Keep candles at least 12 inches from anything that can burn.
- Use sturdy, safe candleholders.
- Never leave a burning candle unattended. Extinguish candles when you leave a room.
- Be careful not to splatter wax when extinguishing a candle.
- Avoid using candles in bedrooms and sleeping areas.
- Always use a flashlight, not a candle, for emergency lighting.
- Consider using battery-operated flameless candles.

This might also be a good time to buy yourself a present. If you cannot remember how old your smoke detector is – it is probably time to replace it or at the very least replace the batteries.



We have tremendous respect for the fire departments and their ability to coordinate and work together. Mutual aid is a wonderful thing. However, no one — especially the firefighters — want to see any family put out of their home because of a fire.

Please be careful. During the holiday season, we can become stressed and distracted and not pay as much attention as we should to fire safety.

Sit down with your family today and go over fire safety, including contact numbers and an escape plan. If you have a question, call the fire department.

The US Fire Administration says each year fires occurring during the holiday season claim the lives of more than 400 people, injure 1,650 more, and cause more than $990 million in damage.

None of us wants to be part of that statistic.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Scouts support the troops

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to thank the following junior Girl Scouts and Cub Scouts who showed their support for the troops deployed overseas by collecting items and bringing gifts.

Fifth-grade Junior Girl Scout Troop 4014 (Leader Trisha Czajak and parent helpers, Marty Donoghue & Diane Kennedy) donated three boxes of toiletries & snacks for the troops. Members of the troop are: Jillian Ahern, Maggie Czajak, Emily Davis , Allie Donoghue, Christine Guinee, Caroline Kennedy, Sami Mushin, Jenna O'Brien, Merideth Roche, Margaret St Sauveur, and Kristin Timothy.

Cub Scouts from Old Colony Pack 38 Den 6 (Den Leader Roger Hill and Co-Leaders Jean Fitzpatrick and Jill Otis) each bought a gift for each soldier and wrapped it with a card with the soldier's name on it. The Cub Scouts are: Quentin Hill. Matt Fitzpatrick, Matt Keenan, Ryan Conforti, Jeremy Otis, Bobby Oliver, Robert Raymond, Taylor Otis (sister of Jeremy).

The George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 continues to seek donations of toiletries and other items for those deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan. Donations may be dropped off at the Legion Post on Summer Street daily after 3 p.m. or at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank branches on 3A or in the village.

Relief from jet noise

TO THE EDITOR:

Ralph Dormitzer brought us welcome news in his article last week about the FAA's decision to change Logan's departure and arrival routes, to reduce jet noise pollution over the South Shore. Ralph played a very key role in bringing this about. Not only was he the Cohasset member of the South Shore Jet Pollution Council which brought the original lawsuit, he went on to become co-chair of the CAC, which represents all 26 cities and towns in the Greater Boston area affected by air traffic.

Jet noise is difficult to measure, and a highly contentious and emotional issue for many. Ralph kept the negotiations between the FAA, Massport and affected communities on track for the five years it has taken to get to this point, spending countless hours in often hostile meetings. He deserves great credit, and our thanks for a job well done. Without him this would never have happened.

The voters of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull deserve a pat on the back as well for voting the monies necessary to sustain legal action against Massport and the FAA, which led to the $3 million noise study – and ultimately the redesign of the traffic patterns which he described in his article. Without this action on the part of the towns, working collaboratively, these two government bureaucracies would have paid scant attention to the worsening noise situation over the South Shore.

A grateful citizen.

Heimlich Maneuver saves lives

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last week, my wife did something few have done. At a restaurant at dinner after a show, I choked on a piece of steak and she calmly got up, turned, and with the Heimlich Maneuver, saved my life.

Every year about 3,000 adults die when food or another substance gets stuck and blocks their trachea, making breathing impossible. Death follows rapidly unless the food or other foreign material can be dislodged from the airway. This condition is so common it has been nicknamed the "cafe coronary." One of our friends, Nancy Gilmore, has told us that as a teacher, she performed the maneuver on children in her class. She said there were four or five such episodes during her 21 years teaching elementary school. "Mostly 'Fireballs,' the red sour candy preferred by youngsters, and quarters; they would come flying out across the floor and hit the wall." There's a heroine.

A standard part of all first aid courses, the technique, first described in 1974 by Dr. Henry Heimlich, is simple enough that it can be performed by anyone.

A standard part of all first aid courses, the technique, first described in 1974 by Dr. Henry Heimlich, is simple enough that it can be performed by anyone.

The theory behind the Heimlich Maneuver is that by compressing the abdomen below the diaphragm, air is forced under pressure out of the lungs dislodging the obstruction in the trachea and bringing the foreign material back up into the mouth. It's used to expel solid material like food, coins, vomit or small toys. For drowning victims, it should be used only as a last resort after traditional airway clearance techniques and cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) have been tried repeatedly and failed, or if it is clear that a solid foreign object is blocking the airway.

Signs are clear: The airway is blocked if one can't speak or cry out; the person desperately grabs at the throat, or produces a weak cough or if labored breathing produces a high-pitched noise. Unconsciousness follows.

Malfunction, accident make for busy week

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

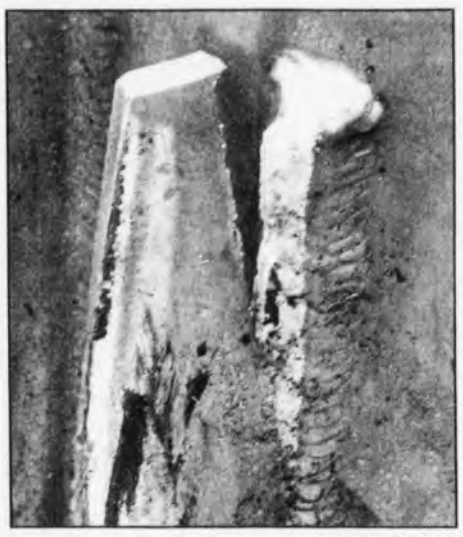
Greenbush items – This past week was very busy Greenbush wise, especially over the weekend. Friday afternoon at rush hour it was reported to us that the railroad gates on North Main Street malfunctioned and were closed for a prolonged period of time with no train in sight. Motorists were very confused and generally didn't know what to do. Many of them turned around every which way and went back the way they had come. A person who was caught in the back up told us that eventually, a work crew showed up and restored the gate's normal operation. Workmen were on site at both King and N. Main streets working in the respective signal bungalows both last Saturday and Sunday.

On Sunday we stopped to talk with the workers and they said that apparently salt from the road had caused some of the very low level electrical signals in the tracks to short out, making the system think that a train was at the crossing. It is important to note that the safety systems are designed to be fail-safe. That's why the gates were down, the lights flashing and the bells ringing. Thus, a failure caused the crossing gates to close, protecting the cars from any potential harm. That's what fail-safe means.

The crossing signal technicians had to spend quite a bit of time fine-tuning the gate sensing and control systems so that the false signals would disappear. Apparently, the reason this was a problem is that the track angle is very oblique to the road. This means that the length of track exposed to road salt is much greater than at a normal crossing. Ultimately, the crossing was returned to proper operation.

On top of this, late Friday evening, a car coming from Hingham was speeding, lost control on the slippery roadway and hit the gate support structure in front of Woodside Cemetery. The car was totaled and made a general mess of the gate and its supports. We understand that the counterweights for the gate were even broken off. By the time we saw the accident site the MBTA had replaced the counter weights and had the gate back in operation. Any time an equipment malfunction (regardless of the cause) is reported, the dispatcher places the train under manual control. The train must come to a full stop before the affected crossing. The conductor must leave the train and stop the cars on the road before the train can cross the street. Again, the MBTA is cautious and errs on the side of safety.

Accident scene at the N. Main Street grade crossing.



Date	Number of Cars
Opening Day
Oct. 31, 2007	75
Nov. 20, 2007	130
Dec. 4, 2007	152
Dec. 11, 2007	169

More cars have been parking at the Cohasset Station.

We, from time to time, like to do our own informal rider survey of the Greenbush by counting cars. Now that the weather is tending toward winter ice and snow, the ridership continues to climb a bit as the table indicates.

Beechwood sidewalk — Betcha that you thought this project was finished, at least when you drove by the new sidewalk. However, for those who are sharp of eye, you probably noticed that last week's article had a picture of the drop-off that needed some fencing to protect the sidewalk users from falling into the wetland on the N. Main Street side of the tracks. As ice and snow season starts that would not a particularly good thing. Early this week the fence guys started their work and set the posts that will support the safety fence.

Mid-week, boards were added along the posts to provide the protection. And, yes, we know the posts were originally all different heights. But as you can see, they have been trimmed to a uniform height and galvanized caps were added to each post to finish them off. Also, notice in the picture, boards were added to the back of the guard rail supports to hide their sharp edges and make the area more pedestrian friendly.

Making a list...

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Here it is only a couple of weeks before Christmas and I haven't even started my Christmas shopping yet.

It's not that I haven't had the opportunity. It seems like the stores at South Shore Plaza have been offering me pre-Christmas sales at least since Labor Day. They've been singing Christmas carols ever since we put away our Dick Cheney masks at Halloween.

It's just that, once you've seen as many Christmases and bought as many Christmas presents as I have, some of the excitement goes out of putting up the Christmas tree and opening presents on Christmas morning and watching others open theirs.

Buying Christmas presents for dogs is comparatively new for me in my search for Christmas excitement.

It's gotten so that the most exciting Christmas I've had recently was last year when a friend of mine brought her scissors and a sheet and gave me a haircut right in the middle of my living room. So you can see how easily Christmas excites me.

Before that, my most exciting Christmas was the time I was conned into taking a dog to see Santa Claus, who was actually taking money to let folks photograph him with a wiggly pup in his lap, trying to escape this new form of seasonal torture.

Buying Christmas presents for dogs is comparatively new for me in my search for Christmas excitement.

I was considering it once, a long time ago, but then a friend of mine thought he was being funny when he bought his girl friend's dog, a Chihuahua, a hydrant for Christmas. Dog owners have no sense of humor. Not Chihuahua owners, anyway.

Since we are now dog-owners ourselves — not to mention three cats — I keep a petty close watch on possible presents for our four-footed friends. My only rules are: No hydrants and no visits to Santa Claus, at least not while anyone's watching.

The first possibility that attracted me was an indoor doghouse made of faux leather, available in "warm red and dark brown," big enough for small or medium-sized dogs. The purpose of an indoor doghouse is not explained but it costs $129.99.

If you can't afford that there's always an At Home Doggy & Kittycat Daycare DVD for $14.95. If you're going out for the evening, just pop it in the TV and let your cat watch the Kitty Cup, a soccer match with two teams of Maine Coon kittens.

I don't know about you, but in our house the oldest cat may glance at the screen and go to sleep on the back of the sofa and the twins would go back to attacking the box the At Home Doggy & Kittycat Daycare DVD came in.

And, incidentally, if you're having a Christmas party, Dr. Karen Halligan, who writes the "Pet Chat" column for Parade Magazine, suggests that you put your pets in another room with some toys to play with.

"Playing soft music, especially classical, also helps them to relax," she writes. "They'll feel safer and less stressed."

I may try that myself as I start my search for exciting presents.

Lengyel Christmas Letter

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Dear friends,

It's hard to believe 12 months have gone by since our last Christmas letter! I'll tell you, once you hit 40 every year goes by so fast that death seems just around the corner! Yet incredibly the Lengyels have managed to pack 2007 with enough rustic family adventures, artistic accomplishments, and home construction projects to choke a cow! I've had four mugs of cappuccino eggnog this morning! Let's get to the news!

Caroline turned 12 in June and had a great birthday. We made her stay in her room, didn't talk to her for 24 hours, and fed her nothing but carbohydrates. She's never been happier, and has already requested the same birthday theme for next year.

Her big present was an August stay at Camp Tanamakoon, a few hours north of Toronto. We were looking for a girls-only camp near a lake, with flush toilets and absolutely no bugs, because she has a thing about bugs. She'll be in her room for three solid hours, listening to her iPod and decompressing after another fun-filled week of middle school, and suddenly I'll hear her shrill call from across the house, which means either she's being abducted by space aliens or she's spotted a moth. Usually it's just the moth, which isn't half as cool as space aliens, and while I'm dutifully removing it she has to close her eyes and cover her ears, in case the moth cries out in Mothglish I guess. How a person can fear and loathe bugs so much and still want to save the rain forests is beyond me.

My wife made several executive decisions in 2007, one of which was that I must never ever mention her name in print ever again...

Anyway despite the likelihood of some insect encounters, Camp Rabid Raccoon looked like the best fit for Caroline, but it was pricey and far away, so we had to skimp a bit on transportation. Luckily the New York State Canal System goes right in that direction all the way to Lake Erie, and you'd be amazed how fast some of those freight barges can travel between locks. I even found a crew that would let the two of us ride for free as long as we groomed them and danced the tarantella after every meal, and in six short days we were in Toronto, no poorer and even fitter than when we started.

We had signed Caroline up for one week at Camp Hakuna Matata, which was now over unfortunately, so we had to stay on board the barge and head straight back, this time hauling masses of thick ropes around and showering on deck. Those were the 10 longest days of the trip, but we had met some really interesting people and learned a ton about proper sluice gate operation, so as camp experiences go I think it could have been a lot worse.

Mary decided this fall that she wanted to play the clarinet in fourth-grade band. It turns out she mainly wanted to rent the clarinet, but that won't stop her on concert day, you mark my words. Nine-year-olds do seem to go through a conscientious phase for some reason, where being organized and following the rules are very important all of a sudden, and somehow Mary got it into her head that the corks in her clarinet were in constant danger of drying out and had to be oiled every three to four hours. For weeks she was oiling those things around the clock until her band teacher finally intervened. He told her she'd done such a great job that her corks wouldn't need re-oiling until 2035, and she could now concentrate on producing a note that didn't kill dogs.

Emily lost three teeth this year. Then they came back.

My wife made several executive decisions in 2007, one of which was that I must never ever mention her name in print ever again, ever. She Who Must Not Be Named is a person who doesn't like unwanted attention, or wanted attention for that matter. She explained that she was born in New York City, was taught to stare ahead purposefully as she walked down the street, to ignore muggings and lunatics and celebrities alike — basically to observe humanity from a distance but never to get involved. She wishes everyone the warmest and merriest of Christmases.

For my part I had another productive year as patriarch trapped in a matriarchal organization. I managed to reduce the number of hours I spent recycling to about 60 percent of my free time. My jumping at the TV and whooping excitedly helped carry the Red Sox to their first World Series crown in three agonizing seasons. And my record of preventing any member of my family from strangling any other member remains perfect at 13 and 0. I cannot be beat in the area of strangling prevention!

Here's to you and yours, and an even more amazing 2008!

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset!

LIBRARY CORNER

Don't miss 'Fraulein' on Dec. 20

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film, "Fraulein," at 6 p.m., on Thursday, Dec. 20. Reza left Belgrade more than 25 years ago to seek a new life in Zurich. Now in her 50s, she has completely detached herself from the past. She owns a cafeteria and maintains an orderly, joyless existence. Ana, a young, itinerant woman who has fled Sarajevo, breezes into the cafeteria looking for work. Reza hires her but is annoyed by Ana's impulsive and spirited efforts to inject life into the cafeteria. Ana, who hides a tragic secret under her passionate spirit, begins to thaw Reza's chill, and their relationship will change both women in ways they never anticipated. Swiss-German, German, Bosnian, Croatian and Serbian with English subtitles. The length of the film is 81 minutes. Free admission and refreshments will be provided, courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Books for Sale – Browse the book sale rack in the Community Room for some holiday bargains on books, CDs and videos. All proceeds go to the Friends of the Library.

Library Book Group – The group will not meet in December. Instead, the group will meet after the holidays at 10 a.m., on Jan. 30, to discuss Diane Setterfield's book "The Thirteenth Tale."

FOR CHILDREN

Safety Alert – A safety alert was issued to librarians across the country last week regarding the "Magic Attic Club" series for girls. The "Join the Club" 800 telephone number at the back of the book has been reassigned to a "less than desirable" company. The author of the series is requesting that all parents and librarians remove the last page that lists the toll free number for "Joining the Club." Check children's home collection for the "Magic Attic Club" series.

New Series – New in the paperback collection is the "Jack Russell: Dog Detective" series by Darrel Ogders. Have fun helping Jack Russell solve the mystery. Great for new chapter book readers. New additions to the "Tiara Club" by Vivian French can be found in the paperback collection. Also great for new chapter book readers.

BRIEFLY

Dickens Christmas

Beginning on Monday (Dec. 17), Our Town offers an end-of-the-year special that starts with Roving Reporter Rich Ofsthun heading south for the Dickens Christmas event in Scituate.

The show then goes on to highlight two big 2007 happenings for Cohasset: the Beechwood Ballfield dedication and the coming of the Greenbush Train line. Wrapping up this special one-hour show is a performance by Cohasset's very own Gr8fls playing the Sea Note. Tune in starting Monday at 9pm on Comcast channel 10.

Town Meeting, election

Selectmen voted to set the date for Saturday, March 29, 2008. Town Meeting will begin at the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium at 9a.m. Any petitioned article submissions for the Town Warrant from town boards or citizens petitions will be accepted until Monday, Jan. 14, 2008.

The Town Election is scheduled for a week later on Saturday, April 5.

'There is just something about December'

TOWARD A SUSTAINABLE COHASSET

JoAnn Mirise

Last week I had occasion to relax in front of the woodstove with my children. It was one of those moments of stillness that seldom happens in our typically animated house. The Boys Choir of Harlem played on the radio. Their pitch-perfect, angelic voices channeled peace. Outside, big, glistening snowflakes floated about without an apparent origin or destination. The beauty of what I was hearing and seeing, punctuated with the warm cuddles from my kids was overwhelming. I felt a few tears roll down my face at which point my daughter jumped up and ran to the bathroom for a square of toilet paper to wipe my cheeks. She asked why I was crying. I tried to explain that sometimes being surrounded by intense beauty makes one feel so good and so alive that they overflow with happiness. I assured her that tears of this kind were a very good thing.

There is just something about December. It is a time full of moments of beauty. Yes, it is beautiful because of all the kindness and giving that flows so freely this time of year. This cannot be underestimated. However, the beauty I speak of is the kind that stimulates our senses — the experiences that we see, hear, taste, touch and smell that make us feel so joyful, so alive. Like the twinkle lights that illuminate our neighborhoods and town — gorgeous. Or the wreathes that hang in the store windows and welcome one and all to our charming Village — lovely. Or the jewelry studios, art galleries, and fashion and decorating shops that remind us of the incredible creative spirit we humans possess — inspiring.

At this time of the year we seem to be more engaged in surrounding ourselves with beauty. We dust off the china and polish the silverware. Even those of us who don't have silver seem to find something to polish. We become artisans of the food we prepare and the decor that we fashion. The pride that we take in our craft is the energy that propels us through the endless engagements, to-do lists and obligations.

Even on a personal level we seem to take better care of ourselves. We groom and preen. We reach to the back of the closet for the fancy, handsome outfits. We give ourselves an additional once-over before we head off to our commitments. When we put our best foot forward we often attract the same. Beauty, it seems, begets beauty.

The novelist, Dostoevsky, posed the question in his book, "The Idiot" — Could beauty save the world? I am uncertain that there ever will be a literal answer to this inquiry, but it does warrant consideration since beauty has such power over our thoughts, feelings and actions. Its mere ability to cause us to take pause — to be completely absorbed and in the moment — is evidence enough of its influence. Anyone who has been stopped in their tracks by a beautiful woman, painting, meal, vista, baby or even golf swing knows this power. It doesn't matter our economic status, class or education. Beauty allows any one of us to open up and be transformed. Not kept authentic, beauty can sprout indulgence, narcissism and shallowness. But beauty, in its pure form, reigns as a state of grace.

What I think might be beauty's most promising attribute is its ability to cultivate reverence for the interconnectedness of life. To be moved by a beautiful person, object or experience is to admit that there is something beyond ourselves. With this reverence we cultivate respect. And with respect we act with awareness.

If we are to turn the tide of commodified consumerism; if we are to plan our towns and architect our buildings with a sense of place and humanity; if we are to be an inspired, caring people then now is time to restore beauty in our every day lives. Buckminster Fuller said, "When I'm working on a problem, I never think about beauty. I think only how to solve the problem. But when I have finished, if the solution is not beautiful, I know it is wrong."

So come January, perhaps we can continue cultivating beauty instead of letting it fade away with the wilted poinsettias and fallen pine needles. In time, we might not only restore beauty, but also our spirit and the well being of the earth.

National Grid looking at trees

National Grid will be initiating a tree hazard mitigation program to remove or trim overhanging or hazardous trees along several town roads to lessen the risk of power outages over the next few months.

"Electrical outages are most often caused by nature, and, specifically, tree contact with our wires," stated Joan Callahan of coordinator for National Grid's hazard tree mitigation program.

Several streets have been identified as having a "chronic tree-caused outage problem." Those streets will be looked at for potential tree removal. The area includes Route 3A from the Scituate line to Pond St., Pond St., Spring St., Summer St., Elm St. and North Main St. from the village to the intersection of Jerusalem Road.

Both a certified arborist and the town's tree warden Andy Swanson will inspect the entire length of the above streets. Trees in poor condition and hazardous to the electric line will be identified and marked.

If the tree is on public property and scheduled for removal, Swanson will hold a public hearing as required by the shade tree law. If the tree is on private property, the owner will be notified in writing and will have to give written consent before the tree is removed.

HEALTH NOTES

FROM HEIMLICH, PAGE 10

To perform the maneuver on adults: On a conscious adult, stand behind the victim, either sitting or standing. Make a fist with one hand and place it, thumb toward the victim, below the rib cage and above the waist. Encircle the victim's waist, placing the other hand on top of the fist. Generally, one sharp squeeze will do it. Develop enough rapid pressure to force the foreign object back up the trachea. If you fail, repeat. Don't give up! As the victim is deprived of oxygen, the muscles of the trachea relax slightly. Because of this loosening, it is possible that the foreign object may be expelled on a second or third attempt.

If unconscious, lay the victim on the floor, bend the chin forward, make sure the tongue is not blocking the airway, and feel in the mouth for foreign objects, being careful not to push them farther into the airway. Kneel astride the thighs and place fists between the bottom of the victim's breastbone and the navel. Use a few sharp compressions pushing inward and upward.

After the abdominal thrusts, lift the chin, moving the tongue. Remove any the foreign material. If the airway is not clear, repeat the abdominal thrusts. If the foreign object has been removed, but the victim is not breathing and you know how, start CPR. Otherwise call 911.

You can apply the Heimlich Maneuver to yourself. Calm yourself. Relax your muscles. Make a fist with one hand and place it above the navel and below the breastbone, then grasp the fist with the other hand and push sharply inward and upward. If this fails, lean over the back of a chair, edge of a table, porch railing and thrust up and inward.

The Heimlich Maneuver can be performed on others such as the pregnant, the very obese and infants. Google "Heimlich Maneuver" for more complete instructions.

You can perform the Heimlich Maneuver. Knowing how may save someone's life; perhaps your own. If you don't, the person will die from lack of oxygen.

Sewer and water staging saga continues

To the Editor:

Too bad the Zoning Board of Appeals hearing, held Dec. 11, couldn't have been a forum devoted simply to finding the solution that best benefits the community. Debating about milk already spilt and fretting about contractual and procedural niceties doesn't do much for us when there really isn't a realistic alternative to the current site. Now we wait until Jan. 8.

A more distant site would not only damage more roads and discombobulate more people, but would substantially increase the cost to be borne by those in the area to be sewered. The real nuisance is not the site itself as much as it is the traffic between it and the work. We can't transfer the work elsewhere, as seems to be included in the thinking of one member of the Planning Board. He seems to think that loudness is equivalent to rationality, but sometimes it is only loud.

One member of the ZBA, by displaying cold arrogance for any citizen who seeks to speak, may be confusing this citizen's meeting with a law court, where cowing the witness is a useful tactic when the case is weak. Even though the ZBA has a quasi-legal function or duty, such behavior is inappropriate where the overriding objective should be what is in the best long-term interest of the community, and fellow citizens are inputting to the process. And, in a small town, such behavior is noticed unfavorably. Oh well, with experience and maturity comes the wisdom to be empathetic rather than antagonistic.

But who am I to pontificate that one catches more flies with honey than with vinegar?

House Tour support was super!

To the Editor:

The Nov. 23 issue of the Cohasset Mariner carried an article titled "House Tour – It Takes a Town." Indeed, the Community Garden Club's holiday house tour last Thursday was a wonderful example of support by the Cohasset community and beyond. We are grateful to all who contributed to the success of the tour, including businesses that sold tickets, donated food and bought advertising space in the ticket book.

Thank you to: Buttonwood Books and Toys, Darilynn's, Fleming's, The Windsor Tea Shop; Johannah's, Talbots and the Shoe Market in Hingham; Stone House Gardens in Norwell; The Welch Company in Scituate; Atlantic Bagel, Atlantica, Bernard's, Bia Bistro, Dunkin' Donuts, French Memories, Maggie's Corner, Pacini's, Shaw's, Starbucks, Stop and Shop and Victoria's; Roche Bros. in Marshfield; Chester's and Circe's Grotto in Scituate; The Ocean Club in Hull; Joseph's Hardware, Edward Jones, Rockland Trust, Gray-Lewis Advisory Group, Cohasset Village Greenery, Christopher Gallery, Feng Shui, Scituate Harbor Chiropractic, Adrian Morris, Coastal Countryside, Ports & Company, Curves, Hassan Sign, WebWrite Services, Lynne Layman, Paperscapes, Cohasset Travel, Kitchen & Home Theater Design, Claire Tinory, Cohasset Greenery, Country House Furniture and Interiors, Cohasset Antiques, Emporium Naturals, Platinum Spike, Crazy Paws, Vital Touch and All The Best Natural Food Store.

Thanks also to Mary Kennedy for playing Christmas music on the Cohasset Carillon and to the Cohasset Police Department for monitoring traffic and assisting with parking.

Finally, we thank the homeowners who graciously opened their beautiful homes for the tour and the Cohasset Historical Society for joining this year's tour and filling the Paul Pratt building with "Christmas Memories."

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call reports local senators' final roll call attendance records for the 2007 session.

The Senate held 154 roll call votes. Beacon Hill Roll Call tabulates the number of roll calls on which each senator was present and voting and then calculates that number as a percentage of the total roll call votes held. That percentage is the number commonly referred to as the roll call attendance record.

Only 13 or one-third of the Senate's 39 members have 100 percent roll call attendance records. The worst roll call attendance record belongs to Sen. Richard Moore (D-Uxbridge) who missed 43 roll calls (72.0 percent roll call attendance record).

Rounding out the top five members with the worst records are Sens. Gale Candaras (D-Wilbraham) who missed 35 roll calls (77.2 percent attendance record); Frederick Berry (D-Peabody) who missed 19 roll calls (87.6 percent roll call attendance record); Pamela Resor (D-Acton) who missed 17 roll calls (88.9 percent roll call attendance record) and Stephen Brewer (D-Barre) who missed 16 roll calls (89.6 percent roll call attendance record).

LOCAL SENATORS' 2007 ROLL CALL ATTENDANCE RECORDS

The percentage listed next to the senator's name is the percentage of roll call votes for which the senator was present and voting. The number in parentheses represents the number of roll calls that the senator missed.

CONTAMINATED BAND INSTRUMENTS (S 2436) - The House and Senate have agreed on the Senate version of a bill establishing a task force to examine hygienic procedures relating to the use of band instruments in schools by students and teachers. The task force would examine policies to prevent the spread of contagious diseases such as tuberculosis and minimize the risks of cross-contamination when instruments are transferred from one musician to the next. The Senate version allows the governor and the legislative leadership to appoint the members of the task force. The House agreed to drop its earlier version (H 413) that gives the appointment power to the Department of Education. Only final House and Senate approval are necessary prior to the measure going to Gov. Deval Patrick.

USED MATTRESSES (H 4299) - The House approved and sent to the Senate legislation requiring the labeling of any mattress or box spring that has been used by a consumer and returned to the store for resale. The required wording on the label would indicate that "this mattress, box spring, studio couch or futon mattress has been previously sold, delivered, used and returned and is being offered for resale."

MENTAL HEALTH - The Committee on Mental Health and Substance Abuse approved a bill requiring health insurance companies to establish complete parity for all mental health disorders (H 1871). A 2000 law requires companies to provide mental health benefits for "biologically based disorders" such as major depression and schizophrenia at the same level as other physical medical conditions but does not require the same for "non-biologically based" disorders such as substance abuse and eating disorders. The committee also gave thumbs up to a proposal requiring the Departments of Public Health and Mental Health to design and enforce regulations to ensure the safe and effective care and dignity of individuals with psychiatric disorders or behavioral issues in hospital emergency departments (H 2042).

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURES (H 4387) - Gov. Patrick signed into law a bill aimed at stemming the tide of the state's growing epidemic of mortgage foreclosures. The measure requires thousands of unlicensed, non-bank loan originators to pay an annual $500 licensing fee and to undergo criminal background checks. Other provisions require in-person counseling for first-time homebuyers prior to purchasing variable rate sub-prime loans and give homeowners 90 days to make any overdue mortgage payments and stay in their homes instead of allowing the lender to demand the payoff of the entire mortgage once the borrower falls behind in payments. The Legislature attached an emergency preamble that makes the law effective immediately rather than in the usual 90 days.

EMINENT DOMAIN AND SMALL CLAIMS COURT - The Judiciary Committee held a hearing on legislation prohibiting local officials from taking private property by eminent domain for private commercial development if the acquisition is designed to generate a profit or other exclusive benefit for a limited class of persons or other private entities rather than for members of the general public (H 1499). The legislation was filed in response to a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that allows communities to seize private homes and businesses solely for the benefit of private interests. The committee is also considering a bill raising from $2,000 to $5,000 the maximum amount for which a person can bring suit in small claims court (H 1746).

Water mains and sewer service stubs

SEWER REPORT

JOHN BECK

This is one in a continuing series of status reports on the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue sewer and water projects.

The contractor continues to make progress on all fronts. There are three main line crews simultaneously deployed in three different areas: Nichols Road, Deep Run/Rust Way and Whitehead Road.

The water main replacement is continuing on Deep Run and Whitehead Road with permanent service connections being installed. Water work on Nichols Road has been stopped until spring. As the water work closes down for the winter, the contractor switches his attention to the sewer excavation and installation with crews in all three areas. Much of the sewer pipe installation will require blasting or hoe ram excavation due to the extensive ledge in our town. The decision of which method to use is a complex one. It depends on many variables such as type of rock, depth to ledge, proposed pipe depth, proximity of other utilities, amount of rock to be removed, relative time required for the excavation, and finally how these variables combine to affect the total cost.

As the sewer work nears a particular residence, the homeowner will be asked about a week or two in advance of the construction to confirm the desired location of the sewer service stub off the collector pipe in the street. It is very important that each property owner know the most desirable location for their stub, as the cost of moving the stub later will be the responsibility of the homeowner. Each homeowner should work with their chosen contractor to select the best location for the stub. Confirmations should be returned to the construction inspector or dropped off at the engineer's trailer on Jerusalem Road within one week of notification to ensure that service layout is done in accordance with residents' wishes.

It is very important that each property owner know the most desirable location for their stub, as the cost of moving the stub later will be the responsibility of the homeowner.

The ZBA extended their consideration of the appeal regarding the location of the joint project staging area until their next meeting in early January.

As winter weather sets in, asphalt plants will begin to close down for the winter, so trench repaving will be intermittent and trench surfaces will remain unpaved until conditions are suitable for paving. The contractor is responsible for maintaining a drivable surface and for snow removal on impacted streets. In inclement weather, the trench surface can settle or become rutted by vehicular traffic very quickly. Although the contractor and the engineer canvas the area periodically for such conditions, the speed at which the road can degrade is highly variable. Any resident noticing significant settlement or rutting of the trench should contact the resident engineer, Kevin McRae so that the contractor can be made aware and address the issue. We realize that construction activity can be annoying and traffic navigation aggravating, especially during winter months, but we all need to anticipate the final goals and benefits of the project to our properties and the environment. We are working in winter to help expedite the project and reduce the overall construction period. The estimated completion date is Aug. 15, 2009, less than two years away.

For those interested, the overall schedule in a downloadable PDF format for the water and sewer projects will soon be added to the Sewer Commission Web page on the Town of Cohasset's Web site at townofcohasset.org/sewer/documents.

Questions about any aspect of the work should be addressed to Kevin McRae, resident engineer for the town's contractor, Coughlin Environmental Services LLC. His office is located in the construction trailer in the staging area off Jerusalem Road. The telephone number for the trailer, which will be staffed during normal working hours, is 781-383-2900. Mr. McRae's cell phone number is 617-592-3276.

Any questions about the updates may be sent to the author, John Beck, at: johnbeckiii@msn.com.

John Beck is vice chairman of the Cohasset Sewer Commission.

School grants and grades for Legislature

HEDLUND REPORT

ROBERT HEDLUND

In one of the year's most highly anticipated announcements, the Massachusetts School Building Authority revealed its early list of construction and repair projects on track to receive state money. The four-year moratorium on new school building assistance grants was lifted this past July and 162 school districts submitted 423 projects for consideration for funding. Needless to say, competition is tight now that the state is limited to funding just $500 million worth of projects annually.

Fortunately for my district, the list of 83 projects that survived the first-round of cuts included four that will benefit my district: Chandler Elementary School in Duxbury, Plymouth River Elementary School in Hingham, the Gov. Edward Winslow Elementary School in Marshfield, and the South Shore Regional Vocational-Technical High School in Hanover, which serves students from Cohasset, Norwell and Scituate.

This is terrific news not only for the children of these communities, who will see significant improvements to their schools and classrooms, but also for local taxpayers, who could see savings of hundreds of thousands of dollars thanks to the state grants.

Ideally, the state would have enough money to choose more than just 83 projects to receive funding. But I feel the new process is fiscally responsible and will ensure we don't again find ourselves with $11 billion in outstanding obligations, as we did when the moratorium was put in place back in 2004.

I do feel a certain degree of pride while reflecting on the current state of our school construction grant program, as I was among an initial small group of legislators to push for a change in the way we fund these projects as early as 2002. Our reform proposal included clearing out the $11 billion backlog through bonding. Subsequently, Gov. Romney filed a detailed reform plan in early 2004 that would have refinanced existing bonds and extended the terms out from 20 years to 40 years. Ultimately, the Legislature passed a reform plan that created the Massachusetts School Building Authority and dedicated 20 percent of the state's sales tax revenue to paying off the bonds used to fund the school building assistance program.

If I was scoring the session to date, I'd have to give the Legislature mixed grades.

Doing so allowed us to eliminate this massive waiting list in just three years, instead of a decade, as originally feared. It was one of those all too rare of times where state government, faced with a big problem, was able to come together, and devise a solution that actually worked.

End of session

Tuesday, Nov. 20, the Senate met for the last time this year in a formal session that stretched into the night.

I feel it's important to point out that the Legislature — well, most of us, at least — have not turned off the lights and gone home for the Holidays. We continue to meet at least three times a week, albeit in informal sessions where one person can prevent a controversial matter from moving forward. Also, both of my offices in Weymouth and in the State House remain open and available to any questions, comments, or concerns that you may have.

In January, the Legislature will reconvene to start the second year of its bi-annual calendar. All bills will be carried over, and considering the amount of issues we have not yet touched, I expect it will be a busy few months until we again adjourn on July 31.

If I was scoring the session to date, I'd have to give the Legislature mixed grades. I certainly expected more action considering we are operating with a Democratic governor for the first time in 16 years.

Some positive measures approved by the Legislature this year include:

- expanding access for adoptees to their birth records,
- giving an additional $15 million for the state's Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program,
- divesting our state pension money from all companies doing business with Sudan;
- increasing funeral benefits for police and firefighters killed in the line of duty;
- strengthening ID protection laws, and creating long-term care insurance.

Also, in recent weeks, I think we have been particularly responsible in meeting our obligations to our veterans. We have increased funding for veterans' shelters, upped the allowance given to vets to heat their homes, increased the amount of money provided to bury indigent veterans, and placed a check-off box on state income tax forms to help identify recently returned veterans eligible for a "Welcome Home" bonus.

But there are still many important issues that we have neglected to address, including

- fixing Chapter 40B,
- expanding tax credits for elderly,
- passing a much-needed environmental bond bill,
- strengthening penalties against sex offenders (Jessica's Law),
- crafting a strategy to fund the $20 billion worth of transportation maintenance needs
- property tax relief for our residents.

Hopefully my colleagues will be ready to roll up their sleeves when we reconvene in formal sessions come January. The governor will submit his second state budget Jan. 23 kicking off five months of tough budget talks. We're also likely going to have extensive debate on casino gambling, and transportation and housing bond bills, and auto insurance reform.

State Senator Robert "Bob" Hedlund represents the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Cohasset.

borders. They serve the communities of Cohasset, Hingham Hull, Scituate, and Marshfield through cooperation with other non-profit organizations, like Wellspring Multi-Service Center of Hull and running their own programs, like Meals on Wheels and lecture series for parents.

"We look at the needs throughout the surrounding communities and help in whatever way possible," says Smith.

Keeping in touch with the community and its issues is an ongoing task. Every few years, the League conducts a needs assessment. The 13-members of the League spoke with the schools, the clergy, police and fire officials and other organizations to figure out what needs are not being met in the community.

"We're always changing, looking to redefine what we're working on," said Smith. In the most recent assessment last year, elder services, teen safety, affordable childcare and housing, and alcohol problems surfaced in the surveys as major issues.

A need to link local communities and service providers together to pool resources and help direct those in need to appropriate agencies for help also came up in the assessment. To that end, the League is launching a new website (www.socialserviceleagueofcohasset.org) this month.

"It's important for us to be in touch with local organizations so we know what the needs are," says Smith, "then we can react accordingly,"

The League hopes to grow the website so it will be a go-to website for organized information on local services and resources.

"We don't want to overlap what other groups and towns are doing," says Smith. Although limited at first, the website will develop as more people and organizations become aware of it and offer their information, "in this day in age, it's a great way to get the word out."

The website seems the next logical step for the Social Service League which has remained relevant throughout its 95 years by continuingly re-evaluating itself. A new slogan, "beacon of hope," along with a re-designed logo of a lighthouse and its beam completes the League's transition to a modern age.

A senior citizen will get a delightful basket like this one on Christmas through the Christmas Angel Project that is being run by the Social Service League with Cohasset Elder Affairs.

When the League got its start a nurse was an integral part of the organization. The need for a nurse in the organization diminished when the town incorporated a town nurse. Then for many years the Social Service League enlisted the services of a social worker to seek out and support families in need. But, collaboration with Wellspring beginning in 2002 eclipsed the need for a social worker as well. Through working with Wellspring, the Social Service League is able to reach families in need—a demographic they previously found difficult to provide for. "It's worked out great," says Smith.

The League provides annual assistance and funding to Wellspring. Wellspring's mission is to provide support and skills to people facing challenges to their financial, physical, or emotional well being in order to help them achieve independence and self-sufficiency. They offer domestic violence intervention programs, crisis counseling and adult learning programs.

The Social Service League maintains a close relationship with the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs. They coordinate the Meals on Wheels program in Cohasset year round to delivers meals to seniors in need. During the holiday season, with the help of Cohasset Elder Services, they make sure seniors are provided with a full holiday meal if homebound or unable to cook for themselves. On Thanksgiving Day, they delivered several turkey meals with all the fixings to seniors in the area and plan to do for the same for Christmas Day.

The Christmas Angels program is also a part of the Social Service League's holiday giving. Members put together themed holiday gift baskets to be given to area elders in need.

The League also is the steward of several devoted funds. The Wilcutt fund provides money for elderly couples that through rising taxes or a broken water heater would otherwise not be able to stay in their home. The Margaret F. Loud fund provides scholarships to students pursuing degrees in the medical field.

Another facet of the Social Service League is programming, a sub-committee seeks out interesting and informative lectures and programs to bring to the community. Last year, they funded the College Fair at Cohasset High School, a parenting lecture series, supported the diversity committee and paid for a Cohasset police officer and a high school teacher to be trained in Rape Action Defense (R.A.D.).

The League raises money through an annual fall appeal and through a spring event, but its major funding source is the Cohasset Consignment Shop, located in CVS Plaza on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. The shop fills a need in the community, Smith says, by providing an opportunity to purchase affordable gently worn or used clothing, home goods and furniture while being a useful outlet for those downsizing or dismantling a family household.

The consignment shop is always in need of volunteers. Two paid staffers anchor the shop, but volunteers keep the shop running six days week. Contact the Social Service League consignment shop at 781-383-0771 to find out more information on volunteering.

Lady Skippers say goodbye

Bostwick steps down; talented class on the go

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

What a wonderful season the Cohasset High girls field hockey team had and what a bitter sweet time it is for the program as 19-year veteran head coach Deb Bostwick will step down. Bostwick made the decision to leave her post as coach of the field hockey and softball teams to focus on her daughter's athletic career at Pembroke High School.

"I got the ball rolling here for almost 20 years," she said. "When I started we had 22 kids and one team now we have 75 to 80 kids and four teams."

The popularity of field hockey in Cohasset can be in part attributed to the much loved head coach, and as she prepares to step down to spend more time watching her own kid play, she marveled in what was a very exciting season in 2007.

"It was an emotional year I had a lot of these seniors since they were freshman," Bostwick said. "You want to finish each year with the next group of seniors, and this year's juniors were asking why I couldn't finish one more year, but it's time to move on."

Cohasset will graduate a very talented class that won 26 games over the last two seasons including a pair of trips to the Division 3 South sectionals. Eleven seniors will graduate including South Shore League All-Stars and team captains Olivia Kimla, Sally Meehan and Paige Strecker. Senior Katina Martone and junior Alyssa Mullin were both named to the league honorable

Solid showing in season opener

Eighth grade girls travel basketball team falls to Hull

The eighth girls travel basketball team lost its season opener recently to rival Hull, 36-17. The team, with nine returning players and one new member, had some exciting moments in this first contest of the season.

In the first half, Cohasset got off to a rocky start against Hull's man-to-man defense. The offense led by guards Anna Seraikas and Christie Fitzgerald executed some great plays, but the team had trouble finding their groove. Cohasset didn't get on the scoreboard until six minutes into the game as Ellie Tedeschi drove the baseline for a basket. Trailing, 10-2, Isabel Robinson tallied a basket at nine-minute mark. Lacking defensive energy, Cohasset was unable to develop its rhythm, and Hull's offense, led by one particular player (who tallied two 3-pointers in the contest) put Cohasset behind, 22-4, at the half.

In the second half, Cohasset come out to play. Cohasset's half-court press held Hull scoreless for the first four minutes. Sage Stebbins grabbed a defensive rebound and found Isabel Robinson who took the ball down court for two points. Anna Seraikas followed suit with a perfect jumper off a steal. Hull answered with a 3-point shot. Sparked by defensive energy generated from 10 blocked shots and 10 steals, including one by newest squad member Ruthann Barry, Cohasset's offense came alive.

Allie Farren and Olivia Franklin executed a sweet pick-and-roll play the next time down the court that placed Allie in perfect position for two points. Hull answered again, but next time down the court Christie Fitzgerald took it right up the middle of Hull's zone for a lay-up making the score, 34-14. With under a minute left to play, Allie Farren pushed up through a mass of defenders to score, landing on the foul line where she iced the free throw. Unfortunately time ran out on Cohasset's second half push and the game ended with the final score, 36-17.

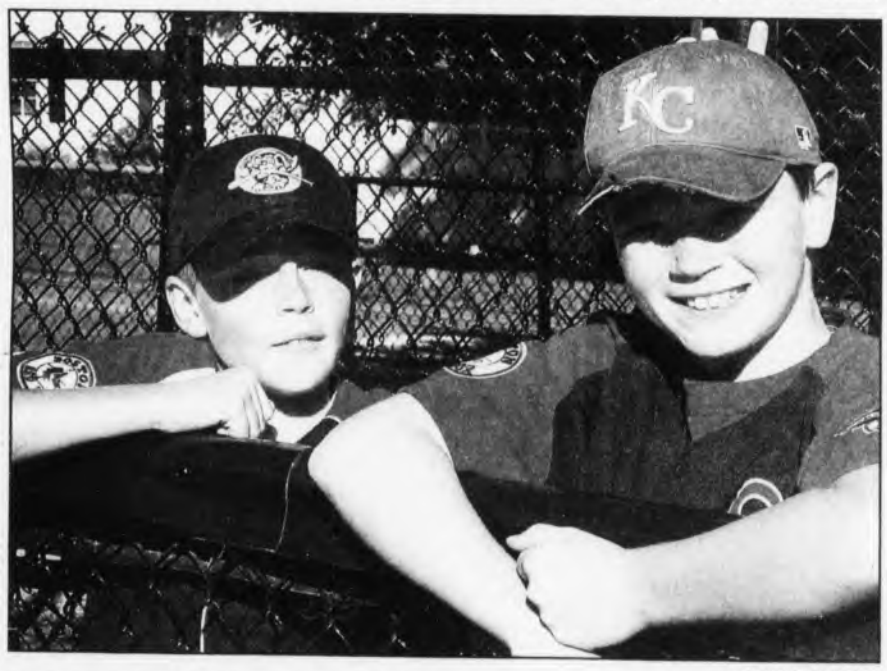
Mothers and sons battle it out on baseball diamond

Sunday, Oct. 14, a group of mothers and their sons battled it out on a baseball diamond of Barnes Field. It was a close game throughout the nine innings, but Team Moms came out on top, 12-11. Over the summer, a group of mothers were watching their sons play in the 10B summer league. Wendy Kennedy suggested the mothers play the boys and an idea was born. The mothers recruited coaches Brian Murphy and Jeff Morrison, who over a series of practices sharpened the mothers fielding and batting skills.



The mothers and sons hope to have another showdown next season.

Martone led the team with seven goals, finishing with eight points during the season. Bostwick will miss coaching players like Martone who came out and gave their all to her program.

"When she first came out for the team you had to wrap the skirt around her three times," Bostwick said with a laugh. "She made a name for herself and I got joy out of coaching a player like her to feel good about herself, it was a real accomplishment to get honorable mention."

Kimla and Meehan led the team with 11 points. Kimla added six goals and five assists, while Meehan tallied five goals and six assists.

Kimla, Meehan and Strecker were the backbone of the team during their tenures on varsity and their absence next season will leave a big hole.

"It really is a great class of kids they all had different styles to each one of them," Bostwick said. "The captains kept everyone focused all season."

Having All-Stars and the level of talent the team had in 2007 wasn't always the case for Bostwick, whose teams qualified for the tournament 10-out-of-19 years at the helm.

"We were lucky if we had one All-Star when I started at Cohasset," she said. "The Cohasset ladies made a name for themselves, and these seniors whether they started or filled in (made a difference)."

Seniors like Christine Kent, Amanda Hurd, Maura Regan, May McCarthy, Sandra Hart and the injured Kali Deveney all did their part to make another successful year.

Deveney along with Meagan Coakley kept Bostwick "on track," all year serving as team managers. Kent, Mullin's back up in net, showed a great attitude and focus, in or out of the game. McCarthy saw a spot start here and there and filled in nicely when called upon. Her minutes were never wasted on the field.

Hart, Regan and Hurd all contributed important minutes as well.

Defeating Seekonk in the opening round of the tourney and finishing second in the league after beating East Bridgewater once and tying it a second time were just a few highlights for the girls this fall.

The Seekonk win, in four overtimes, was a remarkable test of the Lady Skippers' endurance and commitment and the game was as memorable as high school tournaments get.

"It's a game I will never forget," Bostwick said. "It was one of the most intense games I have ever coached and we came out on top which was even better."

Harwich eventually defeated the girls in the quarterfinals, a team that has had Cohasset's number over the years.

"I hope the kids can beat Harwich with a little time and effort," Bostwick said.

Cohasset will return seven juniors and six sophomores from the varsity squad this year and should compete again next season.

For Bostwick, 2007 will be a very memorable year that she will hold close to her heart.

"Everything fell into place this year," Bostwick said. "I have had a lot of fun throughout the years, it's been an awesome experience meeting all the kids. I hope I have taught all of them to have a lifetime of activity."

ond half scoring and outplayed it defensively, but was unable to overcome the first half deficit. Allie Farren and Isabel Robinson led the squad with four points and four rebounds apiece. Jen Mullin pulled down eight defensive rebounds, grabbed three steals and blocked one shot. Allie Farren (five), Anna Seraikas (two), Olivia Franklin and Isabel Robinson provided the other nine blocked shots.

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

Who wants to bring home a bad a progress report in the midst of holiday shopping?

Possibly my cheesiest intro to date but, none the less, it is true! Winter vacation is just around the corner. It seems as though some of the students and teachers alike have become caught up in a holiday daze. Some teachers even forgot that midterms were this Wednesday, meaning a mad dash to "grade grub" (definition: the art of lobbing teachers for higher scores), take make-up quizzes, and find the homework that was "left at home." Who wants to bring home a bad a progress report in the midst of holiday shopping?

The highlight of the stressful week came with the Tuesday victories for the Varsity Boys and Girls Basketball teams who played against South Shore Christian Academy. Congrats players! If anyone is interested in attending these exciting home sporting events an admittance fee is required. For seniors and students the price is $3 while adults pay $4. Luckily for attendees, jackets and coats will not be necessary since the games are played in the comfort of the gymnasium…no more teeth chattering cheers!

On a different note, a new organization, the International Club, has been created for those interested in learning about the diverse world! This new organization will meet during lunch on Tuesdays to discuss global issues and will hopefully take field trips to the UN and other international landmarks. Mr. Kotter, the HS French teacher is the leader of the club along with senior and creator, Chloe Koines. While it is unlikely that these meetings will lead to peace in the Middle East, they should prove to be thought provoking…and more productive than sitting around the lunch table gossiping about the previous classroom antics.

One last thing before the weekly run down; don't forgot to help out the charitable foundation by dropping of a toy for a less fortunate child. The High School student council has set up a drop off box in the main office.

Now for the week's main events:

- Monday, Dec. 10: The beginning of a new week!
- Tuesday, Dec. 11: If any students were wondering why their parents were "roaming" the halls then rest assured, it was only a parent coffee meeting and not an attempt to relive the golden years of high school!
- Wednesday, Dec. 12: A much needed half day. Obviously, the middle school kids took the time to rest up before their big Winter Concert in the auditorium.
- Thursday, Dec. 13: The Yearbook Committee met.
- Friday, Dec. 14: CHS songbirds took flight, leaving for the High School Music Community day tour.

Well, That's it for me this week. Have a great weekend and stay warm!

Christine Kent is a senior at CHS. Her column appears weekly in the Mariner.

Giving Extra Credit to Cohasset teachers

Looking for the perfect gift to thank that special teacher or the helpful school secretary who anwers questions or the art teacher who stayed after school every week to encourage a child to knit hats for the homeless? Cohasset Education Foundation offers the solution to gift giving-needs. With a tax-deductible donation to the CEF's Teacher Appreciation Program, people can send any Cohasset teacher, administrator or school staff member Extra Credit.

Each recipient of an Extra Credit gift will receive a card acknowledging that a donation has been made in his or her honor with a personalized message. The amount of the gift is not disclosed. Donors are able to thank those people who work so hard for the children in the schools, as well as help fund CEF grant programs that foster innovation and excellence in teaching throughout the entire Cohasset Public School System.

With each Extra Credit donation, the CEF will mail an acknowledgement card to the teacher or other special recipient in the Cohasset schools. Cards are available with a suggested minimum donation of $15 each, $50 for five cards, larger donations are always appreciated. All proceeds of the Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit go toward funding professional development in the Cohasset schools. CEF accepts donations for the Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit throughout the entire school year. Not only is this an ideal holiday gift, but a way to thank the teachers and staff in the schools all year long.

Take time this holiday season to honor local educators by participating in the CEF Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit. Donations may also be made in honor of relatives, friends, coaches, grandparents and any other special people or as a memorial remembrance. Checks should be made payable to: Cohasset Education Foundation and mailed to: Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O Box 309, Cohasset, MA 02025.

For more information, visit cohasseteducation.org.

Making a difference

Walk through any of the Cohasset schools and see the impact of CEF's fundraising efforts. CEF's grant programs are made possible by families with an interest in fostering excellence in the schools through innovation and creativity in teaching.

Join CEF again this year by donating to the annual donor campaign, which is currently underway. Look forward to upcoming events including the annual Spring Gala and the first Children's Spelling Bee for grades two through five. And, don't forget to participate in the CEF's Teacher Appreciation Program "Extra Credit this holiday season.

Homes dress up for the holidays Cohasset house tour draws a crowd

Leslie Fallon of Cohasset points out the beautiful Cymbidium orchards that were arranged in a place setting found in the kitchen of one of the homes on Bow Street. Proceeds from the tour help pay for maintenance of gardens at the Lightkeepers, Constitution Park, and the Historical Society.

The family of music lovers on Bow Street had pinecone figures made with their likeness for the Holiday House Tour.

Gates Memorial Clock arrives in North Scituate

People traveling through North Scituate this coming week will be sure to notice the flurry of activity as a majestic 10 foot, 9 inch Verdin Company Howard Replica II double-sided clock becomes part of the new landscape at the village green.

The clock will be officially dedicated at 9:30 a.m., Saturday, Dec. 22, in memory of Lawrence "Chick" Gates. Born and raised in North Scituate, Mr. Gates was known for his deep love of Scituate and his many quiet acts of generosity. The clock will serve as a lasting tribute to Chick's unwavering care and the joy he took in serving his community. An informal gathering will be held at Chick's office at 366 Gannett Road, next to Nor'easter Surf Shop following the dedication ceremony. Breakfast fare and hot drinks will be served and everyone is invited to join Chick's family and friends in celebration of his lifelong commitment to Scituate.

Several of Chick's closest friends, including Scott Roberts, Myron Boluch and Gil Wilder, spearheaded the effort to raise the necessary funds for purchasing the naming rights to the clock; once installed, the clock will belong to the town.

"Many people have donated time and materials to this effort," said Chick's daughter, Jan Gates Yeh. "Plymouth Quarries is donating the granite stone for the plaque, the cobblestones and stone dust. Ed Duffy is donating his time, labor and expertise in picking up the materials from the quarry and working with the committee in creating the cobblestone design that will surround the clock base. Scituate Concrete Pipe donated the footing." And Yeh said that there are "so many others who helped in big and small ways."

The Verdin Company has created fine cast bronze bells, carillons, digital bells, clocks, towers, memorials and monuments for six generations. Verdin's peerless craftsmanship is displayed in more than 35,000 installations world-wide, including the Smithsonian Institute, Walt Disney World, the University of Notre Dame, the World Peace Bell, and the Mayo Clinic.

CHS pre-prom DVDs available

DVDs of the 2007 Cohasset High School Pre-prom Reception are still available for purchase for $20 each.

The DVDs, which would make great holiday gifts, can be ordered by calling Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2917 or via email to shaungalvin@yahoo.com. Requests can also be mailed with a check for $20 per DVD to P.O. Box 526, Hingham, MA 02043.

Caroling is Dec. 15

Hey there, songsters. Here's a holiday treat for young and old. Once again, Cohasset's First Parish Church is sponsoring a well-loved Cohasset tradition – Caroling on the Common – on Saturday, Dec. 15.

Everyone is welcome to this community event for young and old, especially families with school-age children. Exceptional singing voices are not required; carols will be familiar and simple. Because it gets dark quickly, participants are asked to bring flashlights.

Carolers will leave from the Parish House at 4 p.m. As in the past, carolers will serenade a few homes on the Common, but this year most of our singing will be done around the duck pond – as weather permits. At approximately 4:45 p.m., everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies. Cookie donations would be appreciated.

Everyone is asked to bring a pair of socks – or two or three – which will be donated to Boston Health Care for the Homeless. Socks should be white cotton; both men's and women's sizes are welcome.

Come join friends for an old-fashioned holiday get-together, and pass the word. The more the merrier! For more information, call Sandy Bailey at 383-1100 or Woody Chittick at 383-3215.

Book Angel Program

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, is sponsoring its annual Book Angel Program to benefit local children. The goal of the program is to promote literacy and give the gift of reading to a local child. The book angel selects an angel from the tree in the store and buys a book for the child described on the angel. Buttonwood will give a 15 percent discount on the book and deliver the book to the appropriate agency. Program recipients will be Wellspring in Hull, Friends of the Homeless in Weymouth and the Blue Hills Healthy Families serving the South Shore.

This is the 14th year Buttonwood has sponsored the Book Angel Program. About 200 books were donated last year. The program runs through Dec. 21.

For more information, call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

Jade Forest to offer pain seminar

John Loupos, CSE, will teach a mini-seminar from noon to 1:30 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 16, on the subject of Clinical Somatics for back, shoulder and hip pain. The simple, yet comprehensive, movement patterns that will be taught are designed to eliminate pain and stiffness and enhance proprioception and flexibility. Somatics uses uniquely designed movement patterns to help you gain smarter muscles by recalibrating the faulty brain/muscle default modes that cause chronic pain and stiffness. Somatics doesn't require exertion because it's non-competitive and non-jarring, making it suitable for a wide range of physical conditions.

This event will be offered by The Pain & Mobility Clinic, at Jade Forest Kung Fu/ Tai Chi, at 130 King St., Route 3A, Cohasset. The fee to attend is $25; ask about PPD discount. For more information, contact John Loupos at 781-383-6822, or send email to jadeforest@comcast.net.

Holiday concert to feature Celtic Christmas

Harpist Aine Minogue will perform her Celtic Christmas Concert at 4 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 16, at the Old Ship's Coffeehouse in the Parish Hall, at 107 Main St., Hingham Square. Aine's renowned harp playing, her beautiful, nearly ethereal voice, and her enchanting guests have made this event the high point of four recent seasons and a frequent sell-out. From her time as harpist in residence at Bunratty Castle in Ireland, to her playing and teaching here in the U.S., Aine only gets better. For more information on Aine, visit www.minogue.com.

Admission is $10 at the door. Beverages and desserts are 50 cents each. Proceeds benefit the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee. For more information or to volunteer, call 781-749-1767. Volunteers will be admitted free.

Bikram Yoga classes

Cohasset Recreation Department has announced registration is underway for Bikram Yoga classes to be taught by Katrina Klein of Bikram Yoga South Shore. Klein is a national licensed master yoga teacher.

Classes for ages 7 through 13 are scheduled to begin Wednesday, Jan. 9, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., at Bikram Yoga Cohasset Studio, 380 CJC Highway, second level, west wing.

The session will be six weeks in duration, meeting each Wednesday from Jan. 6 through Feb. 13. The fee for the six-week session is $70 per participant. Those attending need to bring a mat and water to each class.

Registration may be made online at Bikramyogacohasset.com or at Cohasset Recreation Department at Town Hall.

Bikram Yoga focuses on physical flexibility, coordination and strength of mind and body. Children who practice yoga often experience increased self-esteem and are better able to cope with stress according to many studies. More detailed information is available on the Web site.

Class size is limited; early registration is advised.

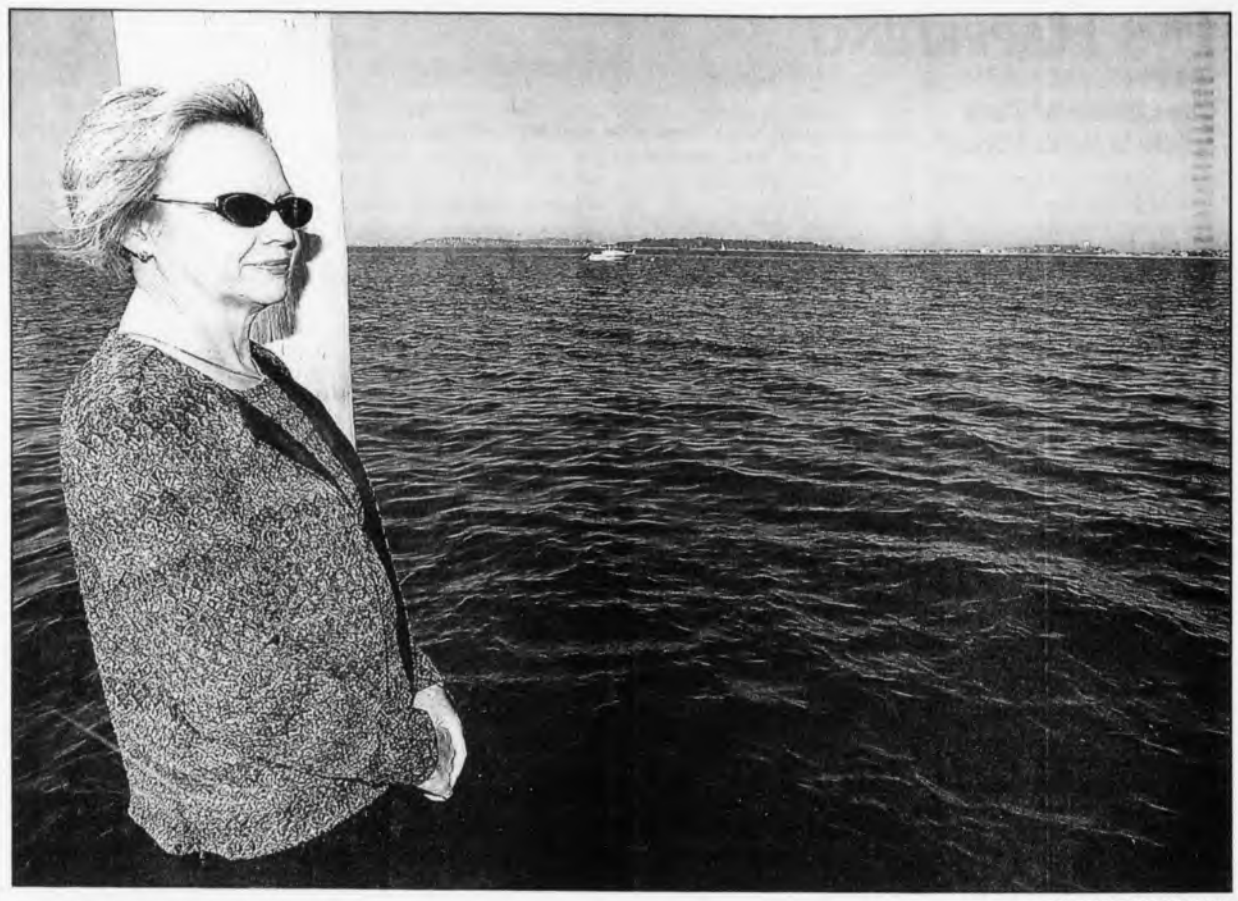
Fire House Night at Bare Cove Fire Museum

Another "hot" time was had by all at Plymouth River School in Hingham as the Bare Cove Fire Museum hosted the annual Fire House Night. With several communities represented by a number of firefighters and other interested people – several children included – an evening of pictures and film of local fires and rescues was presented. Fire chiefs present and past: Chief Mark Duff from Hingham; Chief Ken Blanchard from Hanover; Chief Andy Reardon from Norwell; Chief Ken Galligan from Brockton; Chief Dick Wehter, retired, of Hingham; and Chief Tom Gorman, retired of Quincy, were in attendance.

Call the museum at 781-749-0028 for more details. Come by the museum to get a Firewood Derby kit to participate in an evening of old fashion fun.



Featured, and well received by a large crowd, were three presentations of videotapes and slides by Mark Stockwell, staff photographer of the Attleboro Sun-Chronicle; Scott Langille, a North Attleboro firefighter; and the museum's own, Bob Stella. Stella presented one of his own productions titled "All Companies Working, Season 4" of fires and rescues he has filmed, which included the dangerous and skilled kayak rescue in Hull.

A buffet of sandwiches, potato salad, pickles, potato chips and chili was served along with soda and coffee. Desserts galore ended the meal.

Raffles were won by a number of people, including a child who won a camera.

Circle the date of Friday, March 28, for the next big event – the annual Firewood Derby. Call the museum at 781-749-0028 for more details. Come by the museum to get a Firewood Derby kit to participate in an evening of old fashion fun.

Bare Cove Fire Museum, a 501(c)3, is open every Wednesday evening, tours are available. A private tour may be arranged. Bare Cove fire Museum offers visitors of all ages an opportunity to see how firefighting was once done in Hingham, as well as other communities, once upon a time. Visit the Web site at barecovefiremuseum.org. Email address: info@barecovefiremuseum.org. New members and old are always welcome.

Annabelle Wallace, who believes that people are hungry to reconnect with their inner spirit, looks out over the ocean near her home in Hingham.

Soul coaching leads to spiritual awareness

Hingham woman helps one reconnect

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

"Soul coaching is not affiliated with any religion; rather it provides quality time for folks to take a breather during their hectic lifestyles."
– Soul coach Annabelle Wallace

It's possible to find peace in the midst of the turbulence of everyday life.

That's the message Hingham resident Annabelle Wallace wants to convey during these challenging times.

Wallace recently took a reprieve from her psychotherapy practice only to find that after a year she wanted to get back to helping people. In what capacity, though, was uncertain until a friend suggested she explore "soul coaching."

Wallace, who had looked into executive and life coaching but found they didn't have the right "feel," took to the idea immediately. "My heart said, 'There you go. This is it,'" she said. "Soul coaching is a behavioral, cognitive, humanistic, and mind-body-spirit approach, with an emphasis on getting in touch with your own spirituality. It helps us clear away mental, emotional, physical, and spiritual clutter so we can discover our own inner wisdom and seek direction and clarity in our lives."

In her psychotherapy practice, Wallace would sometimes say to her clients, "We're doing soul work here," so soul coaching seemed a natural fit.

So off to southern California she went to take a class with Denise Linn of the International Institute of Soul Coaching, who wrote a book about this subject. "This really opened up a whole new world," Wallace said. "Soul coaching is not affiliated with any religion; rather it provides quality time for folks to take a breather during their hectic lifestyles. This is an opportunity to gain a higher perspective of something bigger than ourselves — a spiritual awareness."

After taking some deep breaths in order to gain a different perspective, Wallace felt "reenergized and reinvented" and ready to do some "soul work" upon her return to Hingham. "Soul coaching involves aligning ourselves with the inner spiritual sense of our being so we can feel peaceful in the midst of what's happening in the outside world," she said. "It gives us a healthier perspective at a time when we're being over-stimulated with the toxicity of the media — everywhere we look we're seeing images of war, starving children, the results of Hurricane Katrina, terrorist attacks, the sadness in Darfur, adolescent suicides and killings, and other tragedies of life. We feel their pain and a sense of compassion as well as frustration as we wonder what we can do to help. We sometimes feel overwhelmed with a sense of hopelessness, combined with our own individual issues."

Wallace is also concerned that "the ego is ruling our lives. All around the world we're not respecting each other or our neighbors and are putting too much emphasis on things," she said. "Big cars and houses make some of us feel important, but this thinking takes away from our spiritual selfhood. Prayer, reflection, and meditation help us become more centered."

Children, teens, and young adults are also affected by what's happening in their own lives, country, and in the world. "The role models we have, whether actors or politicians, are sending confusing messages to young people about morals and self-respect," Wallace said. "In addition, parents are overworked and stretched out with financial and commuting pressures. Children, who often don't get the attention they need, are sensing these feelings."

Kids these days are often overbooked with organized after-school activities. "Going out for walks, playing ball in the backyard, and connecting with nature is a gift parents can give to their children," Wallace said. "Soul coaching allows us to be in touch with our inner soul, and then we will honor ourselves and others rather than [indulging in] criticism and judgment."

Wallace believes that people are hungry to reconnect with their inner spirit. "They feel alone and depressed and seek material objects, alcohol, drugs, and others means to fill their emptiness," Wallace said. "With hard work, the inner peace we will find will carry us through the most challenging times, and that higher power, if we are open to it, will give us a sense of direction and of what our purpose is."

Soul coaching "energizes the spirit that has been dormant due to negative life experiences, inappropriate messages, or unhealthy beliefs that inhibit the expression of our true Spirit," Wallace said. For further information, including the one-day workshops Wallace offers, email her at aqwallace@comcast.net.

Old-Fashioned outdoor New England winter fun

Kim Foley MacKinnon
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Maybe your first inclination in winter is to hunker down inside and wait for spring, but in New England, you'll be waiting a mighty long time. Instead, why not pull on your long johns and snow pants and head into the great outdoors? You don't have to ski or snowboard to have fun in the cold. These winter family activities will give you rosy cheeks and cheer you up during those dark nights. Remember, there's always hot chocolate to look forward to after.

Massachusetts

If you have kids who wonder about the "olden days" (and we're not referring to your youth) head to Old Sturbridge Village, the Northeast's largest outdoor history museum which depicts a rural New England town of the 1830s. Roam around and inside more than 40 original buildings, each carefully restored. While there are special events for the holiday season, just visiting on a regular day is a treat. There is always something going on and the museum in winter looks as pretty as a postcard. Talk to the authentically costumed staff, visit the potter or make a craft at the Visitor's Center. Your kids will learn how their counterparts occupied their time in winter way before television and the Internet.

The museum gets gussied up in holiday finery in December for "Christmas by Candlelight," including on Dec. 15 and 16. Meet Father Christmas and Santa Claus (they are different!). You may even be able to take a horse-drawn sleigh or wagon ride if the weather cooperates.

Maine

New England Dogsledding offers something most people have only read about, the chance to yell "mush!" to a pack of sled dogs while you race through the woods.

Take a late afternoon or evening one-hour ride at Great Glen Trails at the base of Mount Washington, or try a longer trip (two to three hours) into the White Mountain National Forest – on the longer trip you'll get a chance to learn how to handle the dogs yourself and have more time to take in the scenery.

New England Dog Sledding is based at the Telemark Inn, an Adirondack-style wilderness lodge near Bethel. For more time with the gorgeous and intelligent huskies, book the National Forest Dogsled Ride Weekend Package. It includes two nights' lodging, all meals and a National Forest dogsled ride.

Vermont

For more than 20 years, the Adams Family Farm has offered traditional sleigh rides through the Vermont woods to an old log cabin where you can warm up by a wood fire with hot chocolate. On the 1 1/2-hour trip, the sleigh is pulled by two Belgian draft horses. While the sleigh rides are a relatively new offering, the farm has been in the Adams family since 1865. Make sure to pick up some maple syrup, which the family has produced for decades.

For an added treat, go on a Wednesday night for fondue. Dip fruit into the family's traditional chocolate fondue made with homemade fudge. Make sure to schedule time before or after to visit the indoor livestock barn, where kids can pet and feed horses, calves, goats, sheep, donkeys and llamas, not to mention alpacas, chickens and pigs.

The place also offers guided snowshoe tours for families with kids ages 6 and up.

New Hampshire

For a sleigh ride with an awesome view of Mount Washington Valley, head to New Hampshire and the Darby Field Inn. The inn is ideally located, just six miles from the hubbub of North Conway. Take a ride in an antique sleigh, pulled by either Welsh Cob mares or Spike, an 18-year-old Belgian gelding. After the ride, warm up with cider and homemade cookies by the woodstove. Or, book a ride-and-dinner package, which includes a four-course meal.

If you want to make a weekend of it, book the "Sleigh and Stay" package, which includes two nights' lodging, breakfast, dinner one night and the sleigh ride. If you do stay, take advantage of other activities, including snowshoeing.

Local Jeuscapades

For skaters, wintertime in New England means time to strap on your skates and channel your inner Olympic contender (or visions thereof). Skating indoors is one thing, but to truly enjoy the magic of the season, you need the bite of fresh air on your face as you glide (or fall) around an outdoor rink.

Combining ice-skating with lunch, a museum or shopping makes an outing everyone in the family can enjoy.

In downtown Boston, head to the Frog Pond (www.bostoncommonfrogpond.com), where the gold dome of the State House gleams in the background. If you bring your own skates, you get a great deal. Kids under 13 get free admission, while adults pay just $4. Skate rental is $8.

In Cambridge, the Charles Hotel converts its outdoor patio into a rink each year, making Harvard Square a great destination for skaters (and shoppers). Admission is $5 for adults, and $3 for kids, with skate rentals $5.

Spa-ing in the Berkshires at Canyon Ranch

Fran Golden
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

IN NEW ENGLAND

It was during the A.B.S. on the Ball class, where we bounced on a giant ball for the benefit of our tummies and backs, that I met Mary Freitas of Westport.

Freitas, 68, a former Fall River elementary school math teacher, has developed a routine of visiting Canyon Ranch in Lenox, Mass., between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

She considers it her special treat, her time to unwind between preparing a big Thanksgiving meal and other celebrations. She rushes to get her Christmas cards written, then heads for a few days with friends at the spa. She recently visited for the third time in three years.

"This is my Christmas present to me," Freitas said. "You almost feel selfish, but it's time for you. The holidays are so much stress, as much as you try to get it organized. Here you get to regroup."

Relaxing with a facial at Canyon Ranch.

There is a lot to be said for indulging here. The spa is in a beautiful Berkshires setting, built to incorporate a historic mansion with picturesque grounds. The décor is upscale country, yet this is a place where you can be casual at all times — pack sweatsuits.

The property gets all decked out for the holidays — last year, a Christmas tree creatively boasted peacock feathers.

And then there's the program, which includes eating gourmet meals — this is not a fat farm, though calorie counts are given on menus for those who want them — a choice of dozens of exercise classes and spa treatments.

My favorite class was Nia, a movement class where the instructor urges you to do "floor play" and to "find the movement that pleases your body." The result after 50 minutes is you find yourself both relaxed and energized.

In the spa, try the signature hot stone massage — heavenly — or the excellent Thai massage, which is sort of like having a yoga class with someone else doing the work.

Indoor water areas allow time to warmly soak and chat. Seasonal activities such as cross-country skiing give you a chance to explore the outdoors.

Guests can also pick the brains of health experts — I took a class in de-stressing that heavily emphasized breathing.

Nighttime activities include a Bingo night that's a blast, and movie nights.

A three-night package is priced from $1,830 per person, double occupancy, and includes accommodations, all meals, many activities and a $360 allowance for services. Call 800-742-9000, or visit www.canyonranch.com.

Village decked out for holiday stroll

"The great thing about the Holiday Stroll is its not all about retail. The banks, the realtors, restaurants, the Arts Center are all involved. It's a true downtown community event," says Beverly Bielewicz, owner of Paperscapes. She and her family have long been attendees of the Holiday Stroll, but this will be her first year as a merchant. Her shop will have a professional face painter to decorate children's faces with holiday cheer.

The merchants will also be holding raffles in every store, the proceeds of which will benefit the Appalachia Service Project. Cohasset ASP is an interfaith program that sends teens and adults to areas of Appalachia to do badly needed repairs on homes in some of the poorest areas of the United States. Last year, the village merchants donated over $1200 to the ASP cause.

Already the Village is "dressed in holiday style." For the second year, 72 wreaths were purchased from the school's METCO (Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity) scholarship fundraiser. In two workshops, a group of village merchants and business owners adorned the balsam wreaths with this year's signature burgundy bow and lots of glittering starfish. Employees at Pilgrim Bank decorated more than 400 starfish with gold glitter. A lighted tree is set up on the sidewalk in front of the Cohasset Hardware building.

Cohasset Police Officer John Small will be collecting new, unwrapped toys for the Marine Corps' Toys for Tots with a box in front of Darilynn's. The toys will go to a child in need on Christmas.

"We have a nice group of merchants and business owners who want to see the Village Holiday Stroll a success. We want to make it a nice event for families and the town."

— Darilynn Evans, Darilynn's

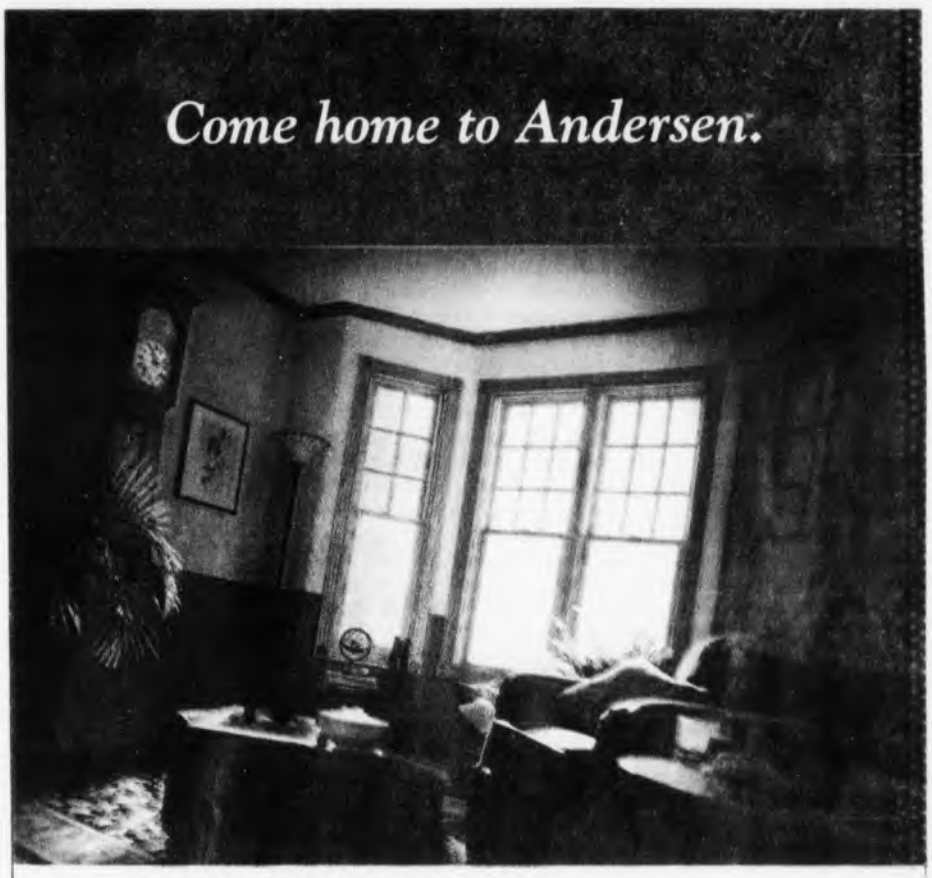
"We're helping some of the programs in town that are doing good things," says David Bigley, owner of All the Best Natural Foods.

The event, organized and sponsored by village merchants and business owners, has been in the works for over two months. A group has been meeting to fine-tune the event's logistics and organization of the evening at Atlantic Bagel every Wednesday morning for the past nine weeks. Police and fire officials were consulted to ensure the safety of the event.

"We have a nice group of merchants and business owners who want to see the Village Holiday Stroll a success. We want to make it a nice event for families and the town," said Evans.

A selection of Christmas music will be played on St. Stephen's Carillon Bells from 4:30 to 5p.m. to add to the merry atmosphere. Tours of the bells will be available following the concert. Live bands and carolers will get music flowing throughout the village.

"It really is a strolling party," says Bigley, adding the evening is a fun event for neighbors and families to meet and acquaint (or re-acquaint) themselves with the village shops, "there's a lot of new stores in the village so I hope people come and see what's here."



The Holiday Stroll wouldn't be complete without a visit from the jolly old St. Nick. Children with a wish list can visit with Santa Claus in the Coldwell Banker office, or to make sure he gets the message, send a letter to the North Pole in Coastal Countryside.

Although snow is in the weekend forecast, the Village Holiday Stroll will go off in the rain, snow or shine, but the merchants have their fingers crossed for clear skies.

The Cohasset Village Holiday Stroll will take place Saturday, Dec. 15 from 4-7 p.m. in Cohasset Village. The village will be closed to traffic on South Main Street from Elm Street to Brook Street, roughly from the Red Lion Inn to Cohasset Hardware during the event. There will be no parking on Elm Street or Depot Court near the Community Center. For more information, please call Darilynn Evans at (781) 383-1002.

Obituaries

Richard Francis Curry

Member of Local 12 and Local 275

Richard Francis "Dick" Curry, 77, of Scituate died Nov. 18, 2007, after a long illness.

A 1950 graduate of Braintree High School, Mr. Curry enlisted in the U.S. Air Force and served in the Strategic Air Command in Greenland during construction of the Thule air base. While in Greenland, he was made a member of the Royal Order of the Bluenose for crossing the 80th parallel on the ground. He also served in Guam during the Korean War. A skilled marksman, he was awarded Expert marksman status at basic training in the Air Force. Prior to joining the Air Force, he served in the U.S. Navy Reserve in Squantum.

Mr. Curry was a member of Local 12 Plumbers and Gasfitters Union and Local 275 in Quincy for more than 40 years. He retired in 1990. His work revolved mostly around heavy construction including Boston high-rises, the renovation of Boston Garden and Museum of Fine Arts, Tufts Dental School, Mass General Hospital and Brigham and Women's Hospital.

He was an avid historian, and, during his retirement, became interested in his family's link to his community's past. Through five years of research in archives and cemeteries, Mr. Curry discovered that he was a direct descendant of many Mayflower Pilgrims and became a member of the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendents, of which he was a life member. He marched in the Mayflower 375th Anniversary Parade with his granddaughter, Grace. He also devoted many hours to Scituate Historical Society and enjoyed helping others find their family history. His interest in history extended to his devotion for reading. Mr. Curry had a love for books and had a large library of historical and political books. The speed at which he could read was astounding to all who bought him a book as a present.

An adventurer at heart in his youth, Mr. Curry had a pilot's license and flew his two small planes around the region before starting his family. He also built his own SCUBA equipment in the early days of diving and continued diving for many years. He shared his love for adventure and the outdoors by becoming a Scoutmaster for Scituate's Troop 91 In the late 1960s and early '70s. He also coached youth baseball. He was a proud father and grandfather and took a great interest in his three sons' engineering education. Even though he suffered a profound illness he endured many hardships to attend his grandchildren's athletic events.

He leaves his wife, Franca Berardini Shapiro; his children, Michael Shane Curry of Jamaica Plain, Capt. Sean Curry of Cohasset and his two children, Gracie and Billy, and Scott Curry of Woburn, his wife, Paula, and son Davis; and two brothers, Gerry of Florida and Kevin of Braintree.

Friends and family are invited to attend visiting hours from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m., on Friday, Nov. 23. A funeral will be held at 10 a.m., on Saturday, Nov. 24, at Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, 382 First Parish Road, Scituate.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to Brigham and Women's Hospital, Center for Chest Diseases, 116 Huntington Ave., Boston, MA 02116.

Vets helping vets through Forget-Me-Not-Drive

By Joe McElroy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Lt. Ralph Talbot DAV, Chapter 65, Veterans' Weekend Forget-Me-Not-Drive was a great success. Chapter members want to thank the public for its outpouring of generosity that raised $6,000 from four store locations and mail-ins. We more than tripled the results of last year. Forty-five chapter members and seven non-member Masons did shifts at our several store locations. We are grateful to Stop & Shop and Shaw's for hosting us.

We have already begun distributing the donations for their intended purpose: to help disabled veterans and their immediate families who are in need. On Sunday, Dec. 2, Chapter members visited the West Roxbury Veterans' Administration Hospital. We presented a $2,000 check to the Joanne Assad, Administrator of Volunteer Services, and gave second check for $2,000 to the Department of Massachusetts DAV Van Transportation Program. Every penny of the balance will be distributed by the end of our financial reporting year, June 30, 2008.

We serve Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hanson, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Pembroke, Scituate and Weymouth. Perhaps you know a disabled veteran who needs help or would like to join our chapter; if so, ask them to contact Joe McElroy, Adjutant, by calling 781-383-0505, writing to Lt. Ralph Talbot DAV Chapter 65, P.O. Box 890300, E. Weymouth, MA., 02189 or emailing cohjoe@aol.com.

Joe McElroy, a Cohasset resident, is Adjutant Lt. Ralph Talbot DAV Chapter 65.

'Christmas' is a family affair

Harrington shares spotlight with children

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Franklin resident Michael Harrington and his four children are all appearing in this year's Reagle Players production of "It's Christmas Time." You have to look pretty closely, however, if you want to see all five of the Harringtons together at once.

"We're all on stage together during a production number set to 'The Most Wonderful Time of the Year,' but Megan is costumed to play a dancing Christmas tree so you wouldn't necessarily know it was her," explains Harrington of one of the parts his 12-year-old daughter is playing in the 25th anniversary holiday spectacular, which also features his sons, Sean, 15, and Danny, 5, and 9-year-old daughter, Julie. Members of the Harrington family have been appearing in the Waltham production since 2000 when the then 8-year-old Sean wanted to try out to be an elf and his father went along to support him.

"I auditioned for Reagle Players so my son would feel more comfortable trying out. Happily, we both made it and we've been doing the show ever since," said Harrington last week by telephone. "Sean started out as an elf, he later played one of the Santas in the show, and now he is in the chorus with me. Over the years, all of the kids have become involved in 'It's Christmas Time' and they see it is as part of our family's holiday tradition. We were living in Waltham for the first few years, but even after we moved to Franklin we stayed involved with this show even though it has meant a bit of a commute. We all travel together and do this whole thing as a family."

And, although she does not appear on stage, wife and mother Laurie Harrington also plays a key role.

Julie, Sean, Megan and Danny Harrington perform with their father Michael in the Reagle Players production of "It's Christmas Time."

Michael Harrington performing with Victorian Carolers in the Boston Public Garden scene of "It's Christmas Time."

"Laurie is the glue that holds us all together. She makes sure we have all our costumes together and everything else we need before we leave the house. We definitely couldn't do this without Laurie's support. On show weekends, when we have five performances in three days, we move the whole family to Waltham," says Harrington, a software developer with Zygo Corporation, who summers with his family in Mattapoisett.

Featuring a cast of hundreds under the direction of Reagle Players founder Robert J. Eagle, "It's Christmas Time" is often likened to "The Radio City Music Hall Christmas Spectacular," with good reason. Both revues feature a Living Nativity, a Parade of the Wooden Soldiers, Santa's Workshop, dozens of tiny tots, Raggedy Anns and Andys, and more. While the Waltham production does not feature the world-famous Rockettes, there will be precision dancing and a special guest appearance by soloist Sarah Pfisterer who has appeared on Broadway in "The Phantom of the Opera" and the 1994 revival of "Show Boat." Harrington welcomes the favorable comparisons with that other holiday spectacular now celebrating its 75th anniversary.

"The show is a lot like the Radio City Christmas show, complete with beautiful sets and costumes and just about every Christmas song you have ever heard in your life."

Reagle Players will present "It's Christmas Time" at the Robinson Theatre, 617 Lexington St., Waltham, for its final weekend of five performances, Dec. 14-16. For tickets and more information, call 781-891-5600 or go online at reagleplayers.com.

Theater review

Holiday tradition still sings

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESONDENT

When Joyce McDonough launches into "I'm Still Here" in act one of the South Shore Stars Dinner Theater's "Musical Holiday Party 20" — at Braintree's Sons of Italy Hall through Dec. 21 — she isn't just singing a Broadway show stopper, she is paying homage to the very show she has hosted since its inception.

Performing customized lyrics that Stephen Sondheim may or may not know about, McDonough — once again channeling both Kaye Ballard and Kaye Stevens — tells the tale of the 20th anniversary production of the South Shore holiday staple and the bumps on its road from Quincy's Masonic Temple to its new home in Braintree. If the enthusiastic full house attending last Thursday's performance is any indication, fans of this show will follow it wherever it may go. McDonough has made the move, too, and is not the only company member to head further south. Director and writer George S. Stevens, who founded and runs Braintree's Darling Productions with Molly Hochkeppel, is at the helm and, and the show, long presented as a Quincy Dinner Theater production, is now under the South Shore Stars Dinner Theater banner.

Not surprisingly, familiar music tops the evening's song list, from the Steve Allen opener "Something Big" through more than 20 Christmas favorites performed by an 11-member cast. While Stevens has cast three dependable veterans, McDonough, Jim Grassia, and Gina Nawazelski — he is otherwise presenting an all new company of young performers, several of whom are current students at either the Boston Conservatory or Berklee College of Music.

While the fresh-faced newcomers — Kristen Cooler, Sally Exilus, Diana Jelmini, Ashley Kenney, Joe Mullin, Mikayla Pachuki, Alex Valentine, and Kenneth Wilson — add youthful exuberance to the proceedings and look quite sharp in their elegant act two evening wear, only a few stand out musically. Alex Valentine proves himself comically on "I Saw Mommy Kissing Santa Claus" and also on the splendid "Can't Take My Eyes Off of You," which gives the men in the cast a chance to harmonize on the Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons hit. Wilson is clarion clear on "It's The Most Wonderful Time of the Year," and Nawazelski leads the other ladies on the touching and timely "Come Home for Christmas." The entire company is shown off beautifully in act two's lovely "Carol of the Bells," which includes some fine work by choreographer Michelle Webb.

The non-musical comic interludes are mercifully brief, but attempts at musical parody like "Shiver Dance" and "Women's Underwear" would do well with some trimming or perhaps could be cut altogether. Also sometimes problematic is the inclusion of too many non-holiday numbers like the "Dreamgirls" anthem "And I Am Telling You" which serve only to interrupt the evening's theme.

The performers are ably backed by a five-piece band, which includes Music Director Petros Sakelliou, Stellos Mihas, Marcelo Woloski, Francesco Marcocci, and Damion Corideo.

South Shore Stars Dinner Theater will present "Musical Holiday Party 20" at the Sons of Italy Hall, 161 King Hill Road, Braintree, Dec. 13-16, and 20-21. For tickets and information, call 781-843-5862 or go online at quincydinnertheater.com.

Parents lose special education fight

Effort to pull son from program fails

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A Cohasset mother no longer wants her eighth-grade son – the youngest of five boys – to receive special education services at the Cohasset Middle-High School.

Peggy Lewis says her son's individual education plan, dubbed an IEP, was doing him more harm than good.

So, eight months ago she and her husband Kevin tried to have their son, then in the seventh-grade, removed from the IEP.

Little did she know then the case would end up in Superior Court and the Lewises' issues with the school system would be splashed across the front pages of newspapers and reported on TV. Peggy Lewis was also asked to be a guest interview on a radio talk show earlier this week.

If anyone is surprised about the commotion the ruling has caused in the media, it's her. Lewis never sought to be a spokeswoman for parental rights in special ed ("for crying out loud, it's unbelievable," she says), but she firmly believes in what she has fought for — and still believes she's right.

The latest development came last Friday (Dec. 14) when a Norfolk Superior Court judge ruled the Cohasset Public Schools could keep the Lewis's son in a special education program against his parent's wishes.

The one-and-a-half day trial was the climax of the lengthy struggle between the parents and the Cohasset schools.

Since last spring, the fight to remove their youngest son from a special education program has consumed a good part of their life. To a recent interview, Peggy Lewis came armed with a thick binder full of information and relevant documenta-

Winter makes a snow-stopping entrance

'White Christmas' possible this year

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Residents dreaming of a "White Christmas" may just get their wish — barring a particularly warm day or heavy rain between now and Tuesday. A blanket of icy, crunchy snow still covers lawns and snow is piled up on along the streets after Cohasset, and towns throughout the Commonwealth, were hit with two snowstorms just two days apart. Together, the storms dumped about a foot of the white stuff.

With TV weather forecasters predicting several inches of snow to begin falling fast and furious shortly after lunchtime on Thursday, the Cohasset DPW was prepared. They had a full shed of sand and salt and their plow trucks stood at the ready.

"We managed to get it all cleaned up," says Kenny Thayer of the Cohasset DPW, "but it took a lot of extra man hours to accomplish it."

The Cohasset DPW is responsible for the 37 miles of accepted roads in town and 11 miles of private ways. MassHighway takes care of Route 3A, a state road.

The Highway Department has six standard trucks with plows and three sanders with plows. The whole fleet was out in full force during the storms. On Monday morning workers were still sanding and salting the roads to ensure safe passage for commuters and school busses alike.

"We managed to get it all cleaned up but it took a lot of extra man hours to accomplish it."
— Kenny Thayer of the Cohasset DPW

With Cohasset's signature country roads and dozens of cul-de-sac developments, snow removal can be a little tricky in those tight places, "we manage to work around it, we've been doing it for years."

When Sunday's storm rolled around, the DPW set to work while most were still in bed.

"It was a hard storm with the rain and wetness then it got cold and icy," says Thayer of the Sunday storm. Inches of snow fell, then the temperature rose and a wintry mix of sleet and rain began to fall from the sky. When the temperatures dropped again, the layer of rain turned to ice making for treacherous conditions both on the road and on foot, not to mention difficult shoveling.

The DPW is already looking ahead to the Mother Nature's next onslaught and refilled the near empty salt and sand shed.

Meanwhile, Joseph's Hardware was flooded with customers beginning last

Cohasset Police Officer John Small has coordinated the annual Marine Corps Toys for Tots drive at the police station for the past 21 years. He estimates Cohasset Toys for Tots has provided $200,000 worth of toys for needy children over the years.

Name: John Small.

Occupation: Cohasset police officer and coordinator of the local Toys for Tots drive.

Best day of your life: Every Christmas Eve when I realize that children who are less fortunate will receive toys.

Best vacation: Bermuda with my grandfather, Herbie Jason.

Favorite season: Spring.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Favorite meal: Roast beef with gravy and mashed potatoes.

Best magazine: "Four Wheeler" magazine.

Best movie: "Smokey and the Bandit."

Best TV show: "Sea Hunt" with Lloyd Bridges.

Most memorable moments: Working on the Lightkeepers Memorial, the Lighthouse Replica and the anchor project in front of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Pet peeve: When I am working police details and motorists do not follow the signs saying "road closed – do not enter."

Goal: To make it to retirement.

Person you'd most like to meet: My great, great grandfather whose endeavors included serving on a whaling ship and heading west during the 1849 gold rush.

Biggest worry: Staying healthy.

Best part of Cohasset: Cohasset Harbor.

Cat Dam clarified

The Selectmen briefly revisited the issue of Cat Dam, the tide gate in inner Little Harbor this week. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer reported there was still some confusion about the Board of Selectmen's stand on Cat Dam and what it would like to see the neighbors to accomplish in the coming months.

The Board voted unanimously on a clear and specific motion outlining the Selectmen's position. In addition to not seeking a study of Inner Little Harbor by Coastal Zone Management (CZM), the Selectmen will not turn over operational control of Cat Dam to the Conservation Commission.

They requested four abutters representing both sides of the issue be selected to recommend an operational schedule for April through December 2008, given that the dam will be fully open from January to March. If the representative group does not reach a consensus prior to March 1, the Selectmen will establish the operational schedule.

Bars open until 2a.m. on New Year's Eve

Cohasset bars were given the opportunity to remain open until 2a.m. on New Year's Eve. The Red Lion Inn requested the extended hour, but all other bars can stay open as well. Typically, bars close at 1a.m. The Red Lion Inn has given the town and the Selectmen a lot of trouble over the past year, said Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil, with both management and fire safety issues, "is it time to send a message to the Red Lion Inn?"

However, Selectman Paul Carlson said it wasn't fair to penalize the other establishments who might like to stay open late on New Year's Eve. The Board voted unanimously to allow establishments with bars to stay open until 2a.m. on Jan 1st.

Pocketbook with $500 cash stolen from parked car

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police Chief Hussey urges all residents to lock their cars and put any valuables, like a handbag, in the truck out of sight.

A woman who left her white Dooney & Bourke designer pocketbook that contained an envelope with $500 inside in her unlocked car while she went into the post office came out and discovered her pocketbook was missing, police said.

The incident was reported at about 2:45 p.m., last Thursday (Dec. 13). Police Chief James Hussey said the victim checked inside the post office to see if she may have left it there and did not come across it.

Officers checked the area and the mailbox to see if it had been discarded and were unable to locate it. They are also reviewing any security cameras from area businesses to see if they picked up anything.

Chief Hussey urges all residents to lock their cars and put any valuables, like a handbag, in the truck out of sight.

OUI arrest

A 38-year-old Cohasset woman who lives on N. Main Street is facing a host of charges after she allegedly hit several cars before pulling into her driveway last week.

The incident started at about 5:50 p.m. last Thursday (Dec. 13), when andofficer saw a car driving on the wrong side of the road in front of him on Ripley Road. The officer activated the blue lights but the car did not stop; it allegedly went through the red light at Ripley Road, hitting two cars that were stopped at the light, and then struck a third car at the intersection of N. Main Street and Ripley Road, before accelerating into a driveway on N. Main.

The officer left the cruiser and continued down the driveway. The car, driven by the woman, was stuck in the snow and was spinning its wheels. The officer tried to get the operator to shut the car off and open the door but she allegedly refused. The officer managed to open the door, remove the woman and shut the engine off. At this point other officers arrived at the scene. Based on their observations, the woman was placed under arrest and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol (third offense); operating with a suspended license and suspended registration; and failure to stop for a police officer. Police have information that she hit a fourth vehicle and charged her with leaving the scene of an accident (four counts). The woman could be facing still penalties under Melanie's Law, which stiffens penalties for repeat drunk driving offenses.

Road rage

An apparent road-rage incident on Government Island led to an altercation last Friday (Dec. 14) at about 11:30 a.m., police said. Police received a call about a fight in progress and that one of the people had left the area in a small gray car. The officer observed the car on Border Street and pulled it over. The operator admitted to having been on Government Island and said he and another motorist had exchanged words when one of them tried to pull around the other on Lighthouse Lane.

The driver of the gray car said he got out and approached the other man and claimed that he was grabbed and the man tried to drive away. At that time, he said he was not injured.

Police interviewed the other man, who was in a four-wheel drive vehicle and had visible scrapes on his face. He explained that he tried to pull around the gray car and yelling ensued. The other operator got out and approached his window, reached in and scratched his face. The man in the four-wheel-drive vehicle grabbed the other guy's sweatshirt and his vehicle started moving; the other man fell to the ground.

Later in the day, the man in the gray car discovered that a large area on his elbow was badly scraped and he was transported to the hospital.

Police have spoken to a witness and are waiting to see if the men involved want to press charges as a result of the altercation. If they wish to go to court, police can assist them in doing that, Chief Hussey said.

Footprints

Police are investigating whether footprints in the snow around a house on Jerusalem Road could belong to some teens authorities believe have been involved with several "missing bikes" and other activity. A Jerusalem Road resident reported the footprints last Monday (Dec. 10) at about 9:40 a.m. She thought someone had been looking in her windows. "We would not be surprised if it turned out some kids were snooping around," Chief Hussey said. "There have been problems in the neighborhood."

3A accidents

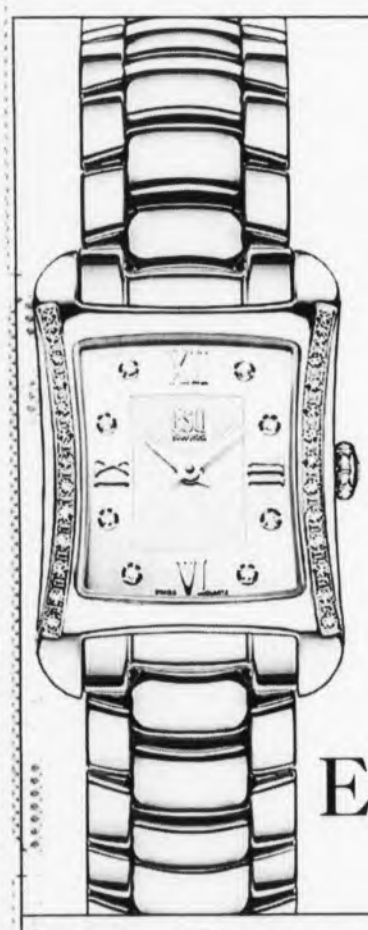
- Last Tuesday (Dec. 11) at about 5:20 p.m., two cars collided on Route 3A by Tedeschi Plaza. Police said a 2000 Volvo driven by a Cohasset resident that had been traveling south was trying to make a left into the plaza and a 2004 Lincoln driven by a Scituate resident was trying to make a left out of the plaza onto the state highway.

There was minor damage to both cars, police said. The operator of the Lincoln, who described heavy glare and did not see the Volvo, was cited for failure to use care when turning.

- On Friday (Dec. 14) at about 11:30 a.m. a 2006 Toyota driven by a Scituate resident and was headed south slowed down behind a car that was making a left from Route 3A into a curb cut just past the Beechwood Street intersection when it was struck from behind by a 2002 Hyundai. The Hyundai was driven by a Scituate resident who was cited for failure to use care in stopping. Both vehicles had minor damage, police said.

Potential scam

A caller complained to police that a man claiming to work for UPS had a package to deliver but the resident would have to pay $75 when it arrived. Chief Hussey said police are checking with other towns to see of there have been similar reports. He stressed that unless there have been arrangements for a package to be delivered COD (cash on delivery) then no one should have to pay money for delivery.



"We were glad to receive this report so we could follow up," Hussey said.

Firewood missing

Police are treating the loss of six cords of firewood as a theft until it is proven otherwise. The owner of a property on Lamberts Lane where a new house is being built reported the missing firewood to police last Thursday (Dec. 13). The maple firewood was part of the purchase and sale agreement for the property, Chief Hussey said. The property owner came down to cover the firewood with a tarp and discovered it was gone.

Hussey said it would have taken a large dump truck to cart the firewood away. "We are treating this as a theft until we determine what happened," he said.

Ski jump moved

Police asked a group of youths building a ski jump out of snow in the middle of the street to move it off the road last week. A caller from Ash Street reported the effort to police who followed up.

Vietnam vet

A Vietnam veteran had the wrong address when he went to a house on S. Main Street to collect household items. The resident contacted police and described the man as suspicious. However, police said it was an address mix-up. Residents can contact an organization representing Vietnam veterans who will come and collect used items.

Drinking water protection grant awarded to Cohasset

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, announce the town of Cohasset was among those receiving a Drinking Water Supply Protection Grant from the state Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs recently.

The grants pay for half of the cost – up to $500,000 – of purchasing land to protect public drinking water supplies. Land acquired through the program is deemed protected open space for drinking water supply protection purposes and cannot be developed, thereby limiting the water supply's potential exposure to pollutants or other environmental harms.

"These types of grants are a great use of state tax dollars. It is hard to put a price on the value of protecting our drinking water supply."

— State Sen. Robert Hedlund

Cohasset will receive $366,850 toward the purchase of 30 acres around Lily Pond, the town's main reservoir.

"These types of grants are a great use of state tax dollars," Hedlund said. "It is hard to put a price on the value of protecting our drinking water supply."

"I am pleased to see that the town of Cohasset received this water supply protection grant," Bradley said. "I would like to personally thank Gov. Patrick and his administration for recognizing all the hard work of the town of Cohasset and the success of the town's water department. I know that these funds will be put to good use and look forward to seeing the results."

No discharge area moves ahead

Selectmen approve draft application

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Our water is already polluted and suffering, anything we can do proactively to get to a solution is going to help the health of the harbor."
— Karen Quigley, Harbor Health Committee

Cohasset is taking steps to ensure the future health of its harbor — the centerpiece of town geography and home of boaters, swimmers, sailors, rowers and lobstermen.

The Harbor Health Committee has been toiling since December last year to put together an application for a "No Discharge Area" for Cohasset Harbor and its outer waters. The committee has teamed up with similar organization in Marshfield and Scituate to instate a regional No Discharge Zone for the body of water off the town's shores and in the North and South Rivers.

A No Discharge Area, or NDA, is a designated body of water in which the overboard discharge of all boat sewage, even if it is treated, is prohibited. In an NDA, vessel sewage must be discharged to a shoreside or mobile pumpout facility.

On Monday night, the Board of Selectmen signed off on the draft application to be submitted to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in January. The Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management will submit the application on the towns' behalf once all three communities have given their stamp of approval.

"It's not a groundbreaking effort, it's been done in other communities," said Harbor Health Chairman Karen Quigley in a phone interview.

The coastal waters off Plymouth, Kingston, Duxbury as well as all of Buzzards Bay already have the federal NDA designation. If the application is submitted by mid-January, Quigley hopes to hear back from the EPA by May, just before boating season is in full swing.

The Cohasset Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons is on board with the effort and is equipped with a town-owned pump-out boat.

"The NDA is an important step toward the goal of clean water in Cohasset Harbor and the shoreline," said Gibbons in an e-mail. The town pumpout boat is available to any boater upon request by calling the Harbor Department by phone or contacting by VHF radio.

The NDA designation will be another layer of protection for the water. Under the federal Clean Water Act it's illegal to discharge untreated sewage from a vessel into US waters within three miles of shore. However, boats with certain types of functioning sanitation devices may discharge treated effluent in the coastal waters, harbors and bays, unless an NDA has been established.

The NDA is a step in the right direction for Cohasset, whose harbor has been classified by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection as "impaired water," meaning there is enough pollution in the water to deem it not healthy, said Quigley. Concrete evidence can be found in the Harbor not meeting state water quality standards, beach closures and shellfish bed closures. An NDA is a tool towns can use to protest their waters from increased bacteria in the water.

"We're being proactive in this effort...Our water is already polluted and suffering, anything we can do proactively to get to a solution is going to help the health of the harbor," said Quigley.

Other communities, from Hull to Cape Ann, are pursuing an NDA designation. The Coastal Zone Management has an aggressive goal to have all Massachusetts water declared an NDA by 2009, said Quigley. Boston Harbor and North Shore regions are currently developing NDA nominations for their waters.

The tri-town NDA proposes outer delineations that match up with the Duxbury/Kingston/Plymouth NDA.

"We chose particular buoys and visual markers to tell boaters where it is okay to discharge," said Quigley. If successful in its pursuit of an NDA, flyers will be hung in key locations (Yacht Club, Sailing Club, Cohasset Harbor Marina) as well as a notice to all mooring holders.

"I don't think it's going to be a big change for the harbor since boaters were already subconsciously following the rule," said Quigley, who explains many boaters she spoke with were surprised something like this wasn't already in place. But, for out-of-town boaters signage in the channel will let them know Cohasset Harbor is an NDA.

The process to get an NDA designation is a unique one. Towns are required to request an application from the EPA; the designation is not one that is imposed upon a coastal area.

"It's the right thing to do for our environment," said Quigley.

EDC back again for guidance

Seeks Selectmen approval of new charter

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I apologize, we should have had you back before this."
— Gary Vanderweil, Selectmen Chairman

Since the last time the Economic Development Committee came before the Selectmen there have been major changes in Cohasset that could affect the town for years to come. At the end of October the long-awaited Greenbush train made its first ride through Cohasset and in November the much-debated village zoning bylaws made their way into the books.

But, in the two month span between the Oct. 15 meeting and the Dec. 17 meeting, the Selectmen did not make good on their pledge to provide some guidance and ranking of objectives in response to the Economic Development Committee's new charter.

Only Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil had provided the committee with the written input it was seeking in October. Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer and Paul Carlson submitted some ideas and suggestions on Monday, the day of the meeting.

"I apologize, we should have had you back before this," said Vanderweil, then praised the group for being proactive, "you get things done and that's why."

EDC Chairman Peter Brown told the Selectmen his Committee was looking for the Board's feedback and approval on the committee's newly drafted charter.

"We want to ensure our charter is acceptable and have us in sync with the Board," said Brown. The committee also was interested in hearing any different ideas from the Selectmen.

The EDC was originally charged in part with identifying strategies to increase the Town of Cohasset's commercial/industrial tax base and reduce the town's reliance on residential tax revenue. They also were to identify potential obstacles to development, such as zoning bylaws.

The new charter builds upon what has already been accomplished, including supporting the establishment of the Transit Oriented Overlay District (TOD) in the lot adjacent to the new MBTA train station and the new village zoning bylaws.

The new TOD development a 30,000 square foot shopping center, recently approved by the Planning Board, will increase the tax revenue on the site by four or five times over.

Thus far, the EDC has done little with marketing and promoting development because it felt it was premature, given the zoning bylaw obstacles. Now that a framework of zoning bylaws are in place for the TOD and the Village, the committee is ready to turn its attention to marketing Cohasset to the type of development its citizens would like to see. Building a web position was also a key effort, if the EDC were able to find the expertise.

Part of its new outlined charter was putting together a mix of people with different backgrounds and expertise to help the committee accomplish its varied goals. To that end, a new member with both a real estate and marketing background, Alain Pinel, was appointed to the EDC at the meeting.

Pinel is a relative newcomer to Cohasset: he moved to town within this past year. But, his love for Cohasset was immediate and passionate. Almost a year ago, he was visiting his son in Marshfield and took a drive through Cohasset village, "I just fell in love with Cohasset." Describing himself as a spontaneous person, he said he bought a house on South Main Street the very next day.

The native Frenchman has a diverse resume of real estate, journalism, sales and marketing experience.

"My real estate background will no doubt be very helpful," said Pinel, "Cohasset has many natural attributes — absolutely extraordinary attributes — that we can capitalize on. We can use those benefits for the benefit of the town."

Pinel sees the ocean and the arts as the main appeals of Cohasset and envisions a marketing strategy developing around those characteristics. Making changes that are in line with what Cohasset already has — like the art scene and the sea — would keep what people already love about Cohasset and come to Cohasset for at the focus.

Vanderweil asked the group to come back again to the Selectmen on Tuesday, Jan. 22 to re-visit the EDC's charge. He said he would canvas the Selectmen individually to see if they felt the drafted charter needed major changes in order to give the committee a heads up.

In the meantime, Vanderweil requested the EDC identify a few concrete goals of the next year to discuss at the meeting. But, Brown pointed out he would also like to look at goals that may take five years to accomplish.

"The EDC has viability well beyond an annual period. There's always a role for it and always a need for change," said Brown.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS

Happy Holidays Cohasset. I want to wish all a very Merry Christmas, happy vacation week to all who have one and a super Happy New Year of 2008! It looks like we are going to have a little bit of a warm up over the weekend with some rain in store but hopefully, it won't be too much of a mess, we have certainly had our share. Please send in all of your news and photos if you have any of family, friends and maybe some snow-time fun. Not a lot of news to report this week as everyone is busy getting ready for the week but here goes what I have.

REGISTRATION

Believe it or not, here is some great Spring-time news to read about and get ready to do for the kids. The Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Association (CYBSA) will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball spring season ON LINE Dec. 21 through Feb. 1. Parents/Guardians can complete the registration process by visiting our website: CYBSA.net. The CYBSA will also provide a one day walk- in registration on Saturday, Jan. 26. Please visit our website for more details.

MUSICAL SUNDAY

Due to last week's crazy weather, this wonderful performance will be happening this week instead on Sunday morning. Come one, come all to the Second Congregational Church at 43 Highland Ave at 10 am. A beautiful presentation of selections of the Messiah will take place with a 40-member chorus and full chamber orchestra. All are welcome and a reception will take place following the concert.

NEW ARRIVAL

If you see Tim and Donna Montgomery and Jane and Scott Herzog, all of Cohasset, smiling more than usual, be sure to congratulate them!

They are the brand-new grandparents to Wilder Hyland Herzog, who arrived on Nov. 30, 2007 at precisely 2:02 p.m. He weighed in at 9 pounds, three ounces!

Wilder's proud parents are Keith and Amanda Herzog of Scituate.

Congratulations all!

TREE PICKUP

This year's Christmas Tree Drive will be held on Jan. 5, and is sponsored by Cohasset Middle School Student Council and the PSO. Christmas trees will be picked up and take it away for $20 ($15 for seniors) between the hours of 10 a.m. and 1p.m. To have your tree picked up, please call: 781383-2492 and leave a message with your name, address, and phone number. On Jan. 5, leave your tree at the end of your driveway with a check made out to Cohasset Middle School. The school council and PSO thanks you for your support! Questions or to volunteer to help (a few trucks are needed!) please call Wendy Erler 383-0141.

SPECIAL NOTE

A special note was sent in for all to see last week. "Thank you to all for making the Fifth Grade Kinnealey Meats Fundraiser for Camp Bournedale such a sucess! The Fifth Graders did a great job selling and had a wonderful response from customers. Joe Kinnealey of Kinnealey Meats once again offered his time and excellent product to the students and their families and in addition, made a very generous donation to the Fundraiser. We especially want to thank those individuals who stood in the FREEZING COLD with all on that Saturday to make the pick-up so organized: Bet Baker, Ike Craven, Amy Davis, Carol Davis, Kevin Dooley, Donna Hayden, Patrice Vogelman Keniley, Collette McElhinney, Jamie Williams and Colby Williams. Thank you and we'll see you in the Spring for Pizza Kits!" Great work to all!

That is it for this week. Send me in all of your news and photos no later than Tuesday by 5 pm for next week's column.

LIBRARY CORNER

January book is 'The Thirteenth Tale'

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Library Book Group – The group will not meet in December. Instead, the group will meet after the holidays at 10 a.m., on Jan. 30, to discuss Diane Setterfield's book "The Thirteenth Tale."

Movie Matinee – Can't get out at night to see a movie? Come to a free showing of the film "To Catch a Thief" starring Cary Grant and Grace Kelly at 11 a.m., on Friday, Jan. 4. Free admission and light refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library. Movie site license generously sponsored by the Friends of the Library and the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

Homebound Delivery Service –A volunteer from the Friends of Cohasset Library will be pleased to visit homebound individuals at their residence to take requests for library materials. Requests may be made for specific books, including large print and audio, magazines and DVDs. The staff would also be happy to make suggestions. Selections will be delivered on a regular schedule. For more information, call the library at 781-383-1348 and ask to speak with the Reference/Adult Services Librarian.

FOR CHILDREN

Story & Craft Registration — Register now for Story & Craft. This program is for Cohasset residents ages 3-6, is a 4 week commitment, and requires pre-registration. Each week a theme is explored through literature, music, and craft. Online and telephone registration begins today. To register online go to www.cohassetlibrary.org, click on the Calendar tab at the top of the page, click on Jan. 10, and then click on Register. Please put your child's name and age in the appropriate field.

Twelfth Night Epiphany concert at Abbey

Glastonbury Abbey of Hingham is honored to offer the musical gifts of Walter Rossbach, organist, choral director and tenor soloist of Reston, Va., as he performs an Epiphany Organ Concert at 4 p.m., on Jan. 6, in the Glastonbury Abbey Church. Rossbach has spent 56 years of every Sunday professional performance at liturgical churches in the New York and Northern Virginia/Washington, D.C. areas. He recently retired after serving 12 years as minister of music at Christ the King Lutheran Church in Great Falls, Va. His career spans duties at Episcopal, Roman Catholic and Lutheran churches, and currently includes frequent performances at Arlington National Cemetery's Post Chapel. He is a gifted musician who is renowned for his virtuosity, dynamics and emotionally sensitive registrations that he brings out of the organs on which he performs.

This event promises to be an intimate and joyous close to the Christmas season.

Rossbach has performed numerous concerts and recitals especially in the dedication of new organs. He is one of only two organists to perform on an organ in the White House in the presence of the president (President Jimmy Carter). He enjoys performing before all sizes of Christian congregations and finds his greatest joy in leading the singing of rousing hymns, often improvising reharmonizations, interludes and modulations to heighten the worship experience in song. Rossbach enjoys informal settings for his programs, and will be sharing comments about the music performed during the concert.

A reception will take place at the Abbey Center following the concert where hors d'oeuvres and beverages will be served. This event promises to be an intimate and joyous close to the Christmas season. A good will offering with a minimum suggestion of $25 per family is requested. Tickets will be available at the door on the day of the concert as well as the Glastonbury Abbey bookstore, 16 Hull St., Hingham, prior to Jan. 6. Bookstore hours are Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Hingham PMC Kids Ride volunteer meeting

Although it looks like winter is here for a while, planning has already started for the Second Annual Hingham Pan-Mass Challenge (PMC) Kids Bike Ride. The initial organizational meeting for volunteers will be Wednesday, Jan. 9 at 7 p.m. at the Hingham Library. The ride, designed for kids from three to 15, will take place at Hingham High School on Sunday, June 22. Kids from all over the South Shore will raise funds to benefit the Dana - Farber Cancer Institute, learning about the satisfaction of philanthropy while participating in a fun family day and enjoying physical activity. Volunteers are needed for all aspects of the event from planning the post -ride celebration to monitoring the bike route and cheerleading.

Kids participating in the 2007 Hingham ride raised more than $64,000 to benefit the Dana Farber Cancer Institute and just as important, the more that 550 riders between the ages of 3 and 15 enjoyed a fun-filled family day and experienced the satisfaction of giving to others. Kids on all kinds of bikes including those with training wheels from all over the South Shore participated.

For information on the PMC and the PMC Kids program go to www.pmc.org.

Lifesaving Museum to host program on lost crew of the Portland

Walter Hickey, Archives Specialist at the National Archives Northeast Region will host the program, "Following the Paper Trail: Researching the Lost Crew of the Portland," at 7 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 10, in the Hull Lifesaving Museum at the Point Allerton U.S. Lifesaving Station, 1117 Nantasket Ave. Cost is $3 for members; $5 for nonmembers.

The devastating Portland Gale that struck New England on Nov. 27, 1898, which bears the name of the steamship Portland, was wrecked as she attempted to make the return trip from Boston Harbor to Portland, Maine. With all 192 passengers and crew tragically lost, the Portland is one of the worst disasters in New England maritime history.

The location of the wreck had long been one of the great mysteries of Massachusetts Bay, until recent underwater archaeology efforts at the Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary revealed the wreck site. Sadly, much of the Portland's documentation went down with the ship.

Walter Hickey, Archives Specialist at the National Archives Northeast Region in Waltham, has followed a paper trail of archival materials, including deceased seaman's papers filed by the victim's families to carefully identify the crew of the Portland. The program will cover how dedicated research has helped to solve one of the steamer's many mysteries.

Wednesday and it really hasn't let up since, says owner Barry Joseph, naming shovels, ice melt and snowblowers as top selling items. Over the past week alone, sixty customers became the envy of their shovel-wielding neighbors when they brought home brand new snowblowers.

"Business has continued to be steady all weekend because one storm rolled into another," Joseph attests. While he's heard other hardware and large home improvement stores have run out of ice melt and shovels, Joseph's Hardware has kept a supply on hand.

"Our customers are appreciative we haven't run out of anything," says Joseph. Two hundred additional shovels arrived on Saturday, along with a half dozen pallets of ice melt. Post storms the demand for ice melt was still there as residents tried to keep their walkways and driveways free of ice — and safe to walk. As a result, Joseph's ordered and received two truckloads of ice melt over a two-day period earlier this week.

"We've sold tons of shovels and snow-related items," says Joseph. He credits the store's intuition for a big storm coinciding with their ability to reserve product ahead of time from their suppliers as the reasons he hasn't run out of anything.

One customer brought in his snowblower with two flat tires and told Joseph's employees he didn't think he would have to use it this year so he never brought it in to be fixed. After last year's minimal snowfall, these twin storms seemed to catch some residents off guard.

In between the two storms, the annual Village Holiday Stroll was able to get off without a flake falling from the sky.

"It was very lucky, very lucky" says Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's, "it would have been a disaster if the storm came early."

Village merchants and businesses were able to entertain the community with music, games, food and plenty of holiday cheer.

"It was crisp and cold, that's for sure, but people of all ages came out," says Evans. Perhaps unlike snow people could handle being outside in the cold temperatures. Businesses throughout the village opened their doors to let people warm up inside, many of them offering hot soup or beverages.

Land Conservation Trust calendars benefit Weir River Estuary

The Hull Land Conservation Trust has published two calendars featuring the beauty of the Weir River Estuary. Links to the calendars and information about the trust can be found at www.HullLandConservationTrust.org. Each purchase includes a contribution to the Hull Land Conservation Trust.

The Weir River Estuary 2008 Calendar features the scenic beauty of the Weir River Estuary as seen from Hingham, Cohasset, and Hull. The calendar features information including where to put in a kayak, how to identify the estuary's rare volcanic rocks, and why the estuary is important for fish and birds. The calendar cover shows the Hull Land Conservation Trust's 2008 priority properties, the new Chatham Street entrance to the Weir River Woods and the western edge of Straits Pond.

The Sun and Moon 2008 Calendar also features pictures of harbor and beach sunsets and moonrises, as seen from Hull. Each photo is unique to its month: The March sunset is an example of cirrostratus fibratus clouds. The sky rain shown in April is known as virga. The May calendar shows how the sun sets behind Boston's Prudential Center, as seen from Hull on May 6 of each year. The number 11 in the September Boston skyline photo occurred at sunset on Sept. 11, 2004. As seen in the photo taken the Saturday after Thanksgiving, 2007, the full moon rises as the sun sets, pulling the tide out. The December sunset happened on Christmas Day, 2004.

You can also find the calendars by putting "Weir River Estuary" into the search at www.lulu.com.

Custom calendars with your own special photo are also available by emailing Judeth Van Hamm at one@hullportside.net or by calling 781-925-5665. Also contact Judeth for a gift card to say a calendar is on its way.

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

Recalling a Cohasset Christmas tradition

The Cohasset Historical Society wishes all of you safe and happy holidays and invites you to share with us your Cohasset Christmas traditions, as has former Cohasset resident, Samuel Ayres, who wrote this passage in 1995 recollecting the Cohasset Christmases of his childhood at 365 Jerusalem Road. We have edited it only slightly for length.

By Samuel Ayers

Christmas dinner at Rockayr was a truly festive occasion with all the proper accouterments; the immense silver loving cup brimming with fruit, pinecones and greens, guarded by four flickering candles; place plates and the best Dresden china; monogrammed linen napkins two feet square; cut glass finger bowls on lace doilies.

The first Christmas I can clearly recall was in 1921 when I was eight years old. At that time, we were just beginning to live permanently in what had hitherto been our summer home in Cohasset; a large, rambling, circa 1870 shingle house set well back from the road with a sweeping ocean view. How isolated we were during those first winters when a big nor'easter might maroon us for days, until a snow plow drawn by four horses could break through the drifts to our place, 2-1/2 miles out from the village.

The yuletide observance at Rockayr (as our place was called) was carried out in strict accordance with prevailing custom, commencing no earlier than Christmas Eve, and ending precisely on January 6th. In other words, the "Twelve Days of Christmas" was religiously adhered to, especially by good Episcopalians like ourselves. During the day of December 24th a large balsam wreath, with only a red bow for decoration, would be hung on our front door, and armfuls of freshly cut evergreens and red-berried holly were brought in to decorate the downstairs rooms. Thus the stage was set for old Michael the gardener to bring in the tree late in the afternoon and set it up at the end of the sun parlor, where an open fire would already be going (the tree would not be trimmed until later on, when I was in bed).

Once darkness had set in, the lighting of the candles took place with all the family gathered around. On the stair landing, cantilevered out from the house, were two large diamond-paned windows. In each one a white candle in an old-fashioned tin holder would be lit by Mother, to "guide the way to the stable for Mary and Joseph". Once that "mission of mercy" had been faithfully completed, the candles would be snuffed out for good. One other ritual — this one rather more secular — still lay ahead: the reading of the poems. These were a charming potpourri of Christmas verses — ranging in subject matter from the infant Jesus to The Boy's Post Prandial Chant — that Mother had come across in a magazine years earlier, and which ever since had been read aloud before the fire on Christmas Eve. Immediately thereafter "our stockings were hung from the chimney with care", pinioned by miniature clothespins to a venerable red cord spanning the mantle.

On Christmas morning when we foregathered in the dining room for breakfast, all present were properly dressed for the day; no bathrobes and slippers, no dishabille or hair-curlers. Although Father may have been in a holiday mood, we remained in our seats until he had his second cup of coffee, and only then were we allowed to break for the sun parlor.

What a sight that long, luminous room was in all its yuletide raiment, accompanied by the crackling of a log fire. There was the tree, nearly nine feet tall and literally bowed down with an eye-boggling accumulation of ornaments, including out-sized Victorian paper dolls dating back to my father's childhood (he was born in 1874), and strings of lights blown in the shapes of Santa Clauses, angels and even roses; collector's items all. The stockings, bulged with the promise of hidden surprises, each one accompanied by a colorful cornucopia filled with small hard-candies, and, on the mantel above, a barley candy Saint Nicholas or maybe a reindeer.

Christmas dinner at Rockayr was a truly festive occasion with all the proper accouterments; the immense silver loving cup brimming with fruit, pinecones and greens, guarded by four flickering candles; place plates and the best Dresden china; monogrammed linen napkins two feet square; cut glass finger bowls on lace doilies. Of course roast goose with chestnut stuffing the very aroma of which I can still savor to this day. To wind up on a traditional high-note, plum pudding immolated in flaming brandy.

Then, well replenished by dinner and in acknowledgement of Him whose birthday it was, Father walked into the living room and sat down at the piano—it should be remembered that this was all before the age of radio and television, and, accompanied by the spirited if sometimes discordant singing of his family, began to play the old familiar carols.

Bells on Christmas Day

Love, peace, hope.

The church bells chime out on Christmas Day with a joy beyond description.

Yet, in turbulent times such as these, when so many people are facing so many hardships, we can feel like we are just going through the motions.

Many are facing a "Blue Christmas," with loved ones overseas.

Others are facing a so-called "sub-prime Christmas," when a bucking economy has thrown dreams of tinsel-wrapped presents under the tree into the trash bin, and the hope for the holiday season is reduced to paying for the rent, heat, and food.

Health problems cloud the dreams of others.

Hovering over all are troubling reports of racial strife, cries of injustice, mall shootings, and the specter of a widening war.

Our souls resound with the sadness in the verse of this traditional carol:

"In deep despair I hung my head, there is no peace on Earth I said,

For hate is strong, and mocks the song, of peace on Earth, good will toward men."

Christmas carols are so much a part of the season, reflecting all our hopes and dreams, rejoicings and longings.

An "outburst" of the Christmas carol arose in England in the fifteenth century, according to Clement A. Miles in the Dover Publications book, "Christmas Customs And Traditions."

This outburst grew out of the realization that the Light of the Word shone from Bethlehem, a light to bring radiance to a time as dark and tumultuous as our own. This paraphrase of an Old English carol, quoted by Miles, tells how the birth of the Christ Child brought light into the dark world:

"It was dark, it was dim....

Till on Christmas Day.

Now man is brighter than the sun..."

This brightness comes not because all our troubles are swept away, but when we know in our hearts that light and love will ultimately overcome the darkness:

"Then rang the bells more loud and deep, God is not dead, nor does he sleep, for wrong shall fail, and right prevail, of Peace on Earth, Good Will toward men."

Each Christmas brings memories of those that passed before, to run like ribbons through this day. Some Christmas morns are bright and fun, others tinged with a longing for the loved one not with us.

The world is too often a dark place.

What the Christmas bells chime out is hope,

What Christmas bells chime out is the joy that, in the Son, we have a gift of light to help us through.

We need to be more like the children of the Grinch's Whoville, and let ourselves experience the wonder that Christmas is born not in trimmed trees, wrapped gifts, and "roast beast," but of joy and hope.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Board of Health, Jan. 9, 7 p.m.

CMHS School Council, Jan. 2 and Feb. 6, 2:30 p.m., Room 116 at the high school.

Conservation Commission, Jan. 3, 7 p.m.

Planning Board, Jan. 9, 7p.m.

Selectmen, Jan. 7, 7 p.m.

Sewer Commission, Jan. 7, 6 p.m.

Water Commission, Jan. 5, 10:15 a.m. at the King St. plant.

Zoning Board of Appeals, Jan. 8, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

Register to vote for Presidential Primary

The Governor signed legislation on Monday, Nov. 26, to move the date of the Presidential Primary to Tuesday, Feb. 5, 2008. The last day to register to vote will be Wednesday, Jan. 16. Registration will take place at the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a Town Meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If people move, they may register to vote as soon as they move into a new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each Town Meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If people register during a closed period, they will be eligible to vote only in later Town Meetings or elections.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Loss of parental rights

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to inform all parents to beware of the "No Child Left Behind Act." In 2001, Congress amended the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA) as the No Child Left Behind Act. This act requires public schools to bring all students to proficiency in reading and math by the 2013-2014 school year. The law includes sanctions for schools that fail to make acceptable progress. If the school does not educate any subgroup, the school will fail to meet this standard, which means every state needs to develop an accountability system in which the consequences fall on responsible adults. Failing schools should be closed, reconstituted or taken over. All students should have the right to leave poor schools for better schools. That is why you read in The Cohasset Mariner, "We are seeking children with disabilities. If you have a child or know of a child with a disability please call Linda Gill, director of Student Services."

This is how a want ad in the newspaper would read.

Congress also amended the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) in 2004, which at that time changed the "Parental Rights" brochure to the "Procedural Safeguards" brochure. Obviously there was a reason for that.

The brochure makes parents think that schools need their consent for initial testing and evaluation and to also implement services when in fact, if you read between all the lines very closely, the school district needs nothing from the parent.

These two acts of Congress did nothing more than take all your parental rights away from you regarding your child's education. If the school district needs your child for whatever reason, they can have him/her. So beware, if your child is not a straight A-B student the school district can get them and own them and all the laws give them all the rights to do just that. It is an option of the school district, approved by the Superintendent, as to how far and for whatever reasons they want to take out restraining orders on parents to gain total control of your child.

Cat Dam decision process flawed

AL STEFAN

Nancy White wrote an accurate summary of the current status of viewpoints surrounding the flushing of Inner Little Harbor through Cat Dam. I approached participation at these meetings with an interest in learning how our town's Selectmen would manage this delicate situation and what direction they would take concerning the health of Inner Little Harbor. While there have been many well thought out passionate opinions I am concerned with how those opinions are now being acted upon. Based on these interests and concerns I have agreed to serve on the new, Selectmen-mandated, scheduling committee. But I have serious concerns with the process that led to the establishment of this committee as well as the validity of any negotiated middle ground we may reach, (all past attempts have failed). In effect this new effort is just another measure to sweep this serious environmental issue back under the rug. Neighborhood rancor festers on, and Inner Little Harbor's health continues to degrade.

The neighbors advocating for increased flushing brought two historic town sanctioned studies from environmental consultants whose job it is to monitor tidal estuaries. These neighbors came with the goal of using that historic evidence as justification for a new study, again by environmental experts, to assess how much additional flushing is needed to stop the degradation of ILH and Peck's meadow, and hopefully reverse it.

The neighbors advocating maintaining the status quo due to concerns over property values and the desire to see water, not mud, brought forward no evidence from either personal experience or from an objective professionally performed study, to support a claim that their property values would be reduced. In fact, conversations with town realtors indicate that comparable homes on Little Harbor sell for more than those on Inner Little Harbor. If seeing water all day is so appealing, why are equivalent homes on the other side of Cat Dam selling for the same or more money? The answer: no one knows and an objective economic study should be performed, especially by those who wish to use this as an argument, and potentially increase the risk of long-term environmental degradation in the name of short-term property value and aesthetics. With regards to any environmental impact, these neighbors brought with them only their own non-expert observations and used these views to counter all previously funded studies. Examples of their logic included "We still see lots of birds, therefore everything must be fine." Or, "If ILH flushes out of Cat Dam every day, millions of fish will have no water to survive." To the latter argument I might suggest that the trillions of fish in tidal estuaries around the globe, including those in every other estuary in Cohasset, manage this issue just fine. They go with the flow. At any rate, however well intentioned, are inexperienced opinions from either side really what we want to base the health of ILH on?

Faced with third party, objective environmental science versus unsubstantiated property value concerns, the Selectmen have decided to maintain the status quo, deny the Conservation Commission the authority to manage the environmental health of this public resource and set up a new group of neighbors to attempt to negotiate amongst themselves the schedule for maintaining a public resource.

My concerns with this approach are as follows:

- A new group of residents will attempt, again, to make a decision about town-owned property with not a single member in the group having experience in environmental work or objective specifics of real estate assessments.
- One group will argue for increased flush-

'Greenbush Guys' wrap up three years

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

It hardly seems possible that we have been on the job as the "Greenbush Guys" for three years as of next month. The past three years have flown by in the twinkling of an eye. As most of you know, our principal obligation is to provide the interface between the Town of Cohasset and the Greenbush project. Since we are both engineers, we have the ability to understand the drawings and the design issues of the Greenbush.

When we started in January of 2005, the Greenbush plans were mostly complete and approved by the prior Town administration. The Town had already had its chance to provide comments on the design, so additional Town driven changes could not be made to the design. However, like any construction project, changes did happen as a result of unforeseen field and construction issues. We were able to provide significant Town input to these newer changes. Clearing the track bed began in spring of 2005. For the first time, it was evident where the train would run and the visual changes it would make in our Town. After clearing, you could see from King St. to the center of Town. That really opened everyone's eyes. Grading the rail bed soon followed, preparing the ground for the track system.

While we were working on Greenbush, we were asked by the Town Manager and the Board of Selectmen to take a look at the Village Revitalization Project and see what it might take to get that project off of top dead center. The Revitalization Committee was reinstituted and they agreed on a final set of details for the design. We engaged the engineers who did the original design to make the necessary changes to fine-tune the design. Unfortunately, so much had been spent on design and changes that we were worried about having sufficient funds to complete the project. Like all towns, the Massachusetts procurement laws require the construction phase of a project like this to be publicly bid. We did manage to organize the bid package in such a way that we could implement the construction in phases. So, if we got bids back that were too rich for our blood, we could at least get as much construction done, as available funds would allow. That's exactly what happened.

While we were working on Greenbush, we were asked by the Town Manager and the Board of Selectmen to take a look at the Village Revitalization Project and see what it might take to get that project off of top dead center.

When the bids were received we could only complete the drainage in the village and the surface work (streets, sidewalks, etc.) on Main Street and Depot Court. So, that portion was done in 2005 and early 2006. The balance of the work would need to wait for additional funding. Our residents and merchants suffered through the construction turmoil of this project. Clearly, this was not a stealth project. The Town subsequently applied to the Commonwealth for an increase in our PWED (Public Works Economic Development) grant that originally funded revitalization. Cohasset did receive sufficient additional monies to complete the Elm and Brook Street work. Finally, after more years than anyone would like, the Village area looks shinier and more up to date.

Another project we undertook was to apply for a Massachusetts Transit Oriented Development (TOD) Grant to construct a pedestrian pathway to the Greenbush Station. We were not successful on our first grant request. On our second try we were awarded a grant. The first leg of this sidewalk was completed on King Street to Route 3A this fall. The balance from King and 3A to the Greenbush Station will be constructed in 2008. This part of the station sidewalk is more complicated because it must dovetail with Scituate Hill development at 3A and Lower King Street, the new commercial/residential project next to the station and the MBTA widening of Route 3A at Lower King Street.

In 2005, the DPW stopped by to see us and asked if we could give them a hand getting the Forest Avenue street upgrade and sidewalk project going. The Forest Avenue residents have been asking for sidewalks for a long time, with not much happening. The DPW had been squirreling away Chapter 90 funds (State funds for road and sidewalk maintenance) for a few years in anticipation of funding this project. The Town Manager OK'd our involvement and away we went. Norfolk County did the engineering work at no cost to the Town. We acted as general contractors to maximize the work that could be done on our modest budget. This fall, lo and behold, after a lot of details were hammered out, we have a nice new road and great sidewalks. It was great to see the families strolling on the new sidewalk this fall.

At the same time Beechwood residents had received funds from Town Meeting several years ago for a sidewalk that had never been constructed. Again, the Town Manager asked if we could get that project moving. We managed to get plans generated, and supervise construction contractors. This walk was finally completed several weeks ago.

All while this was going on, many many things were happening with the Greenbush project. Tracks were laid, crossings were constructed and trains are running in revenue service. We have had the pleasure of working with a great number of Cohasset residents. The questions we've been asked have been very interesting and varied. Most had pretty straightforward answers. A few are very involved.

Not all have been solved to our satisfaction or to those of the residents. At this point we have developed a Punch List of Open Items that is quite lengthy. For the past six months dialog on these issues with the MBTA was set aside so that the Project's full attention could be devoted to getting the train up and running. Now that the train is running, we have asked the project to meet with us so that the outstanding issues in Cohasset can be resolved. Rest assured, we continue to work diligently to get these lingering problems solved.

It has been a real pleasure to have the opportunity to work for the Town and so many of its fine residents. These three years have just flown by. Due to the Holiday Schedules, there will be no Making Tracks column next week, so this is our year-end spectacular. Thank you all. Have a very Happy Holiday Season.

Asterisks for record book

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

When the next baseball record book comes out, the player at the top of the career home run column will be Barry Bonds with 756, more than Hank Aaron, Babe Ruth and any other major league slugger you can name.

His record may also carry after it an asterisk to show that most of them came at a time when steroids and human growth hormones were as important as the pre-game steak in the lives of professional athletes.

Roger Clemens has won 354 games in his career (eighth on the all time list) and seven Cy Young Trophies as the best pitcher in his league but, if last week's report on 'roids is right, his records will carry the baggage of an asterisk too.

Pete Rose's had 4,256 hits, the most by any player since Abner Doubleday banged out a single at Cooperstown, but that carries an asterisk, too, since Pete used to bet on the outcome of ball games and didn't report his winnings to the IRS.

If we're not careful, we're gonna run out of asterisks.

As far as I know, the first time the word asterisk appeared on the sports page was in 1961 when Roger Maris was making a run at baseball's most sacred (at that time) mark, Babe Ruth's 60 homers in 1927.

The baseball commissioner himself, Ford Frick, advised the asterisk, not because there were steroids or any other performance enhancing drugs in the Yankees locker room, but because Roger's season was 162 games and Ruth's only 154.

Ford didn't mention it at the time but, as a sportswriter for the New York Evening World, he was the Babe's ghostwriter for "Babe Ruth's Own Book of Baseball." Roger broke the record but the asterisk was forgotten.

Perhaps Ruth's record itself should have carried an asterisk.

The Bambino hit 29 homers in 1919 and 54 in 1920. The previous record was 24 by Ned Williamson of the Chicago White Stockings way back in 1884 and he had the advantage of being able to call for a high or low ball from the pitcher.

Somewhere in between the 1919 and 1920 season someone sneaked what became known as "the rabbit ball," the old ball with a new center and wound tightly with string, into the game. Don't all records after 1919 deserve an asterisk?

Josh Beckett was baseball's only 20-game winner last season. A gentleman named Charles Radbourn, who was called "Old Hoss" by his pals, won 60 games for Providence in the National League under 1884 rules. Who deserves the asterisk?

Despite his records, gambling on his sport has been enough to keep Pete Rose out of baseball's Hall of Fame and performance enhancing drugs may doom Roger Clemens and Barry Bonds chances for immortality at Cooperstown.

I say take all three, add Shoeless Joe Jackson and Eddy Cicotte of the Black Sox, and give them all a plaque in the Hall.

With asterisks, of course.

The problem with snow days

THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

It also means that right after the kids are appropriately bundled to go sledding in 10-degree weather, one will inevitably have to go to the bathroom.

If there were ever two words that cause normally rational parents to panic – besides "head lice" and "slumber party" – it's "snow day." Snow days mean no child care (back-up, emergency or otherwise) and the sudden need to come up with activities for children who, while surrounded by hundreds of expensive, barely used toys, still have the nerve to proclaim, "I'm bored." It means having to listen to SpongeBob non-stop for eight hours and/or holding conference calls while wearing a clown nose and juggling oranges to keep them quiet. (Yes, it's possible if you have one of those nifty headsets.)

It also means that right after the kids are appropriately bundled to go sledding in 10-degree weather, one will inevitably have to go to the bathroom. On your second attempt to go to the sledding hill, the other child – who by then would have been crying because she was too hot all bundled up while waiting for you to re-bundle the first child – will get stuck in a snowdrift. You pull her out, only to leave behind a boot. After you dig out the boot (shaking as much snow out of it as possible) you try to replace it on your child's now frozen foot only to have her cry and scream at you for freezing her foot off. Meanwhile, the other child has managed to get snow in his gloves, down his neck and in other places that have no logical explanation whatsoever.

So, with a few admonitions about not eating the yellow snow, you finally head out for the sledding hill loaded down with extra socks, mittens, hats and a large dose of Kahlua in your king-sized travel mug of coffee.

One hour later, as your teeth chatter and you can no longer feel your toes or fingers (having given your gloves to a child who somehow managed to leave the house without any), you want to collapse from the exhaustion of dragging sleds and kids up and down a hill that once seemed no bigger than a molehill, but now bears a striking resemblance to Mt. Everest.

This is when you start to miss the days when you might be considered an "essential employee" in a corporate office. This is a title reserved for those employees who deem themselves so essential that a blizzard, a declared statewide snow emergency and even a two-hour E! Television special on "whether Angelina and Brad should adopt Britney's kids" will not keep them away from the office. Generally, I've noticed that the individuals who deem themselves the most essential are those with small children at home. (Who could blame them? More Kahlua, please!)

But, then again, what's 2 feet of snow to someone who finally gets to use their four-wheel drive SUV? Of course, most of these "off-road" warriors have no idea how to drive in bad weather. But, that's not going to stop them because for some reason when they plop behind the wheel of that Hummer, they instantaneously sprout superpowers. It must be in the owner's manual or something. How else could one explain why they think that they can see through whiteouts like Superman, or sprout spikes before hitting black ice like the Batmobile?

For the non-four-wheeling crowd, after parking the kids back in front of SpongeBob, we're left to drag our exhausted selves back outside to shovel out our cars and pray for spring. Usually our reward is an hour or more of solitude, which gives us enough energy to keep going. But, this is also about the time when your perennially chipper neighbor (whose kids have long since gone off to college) walks by with his dog to comment, "Don't you think this is beautiful?" To which I have to stop myself from replying, "As a barely surviving parent who lost the essential employee argument and is in the second hour of shoveling and still have yet to locate my non-four wheel drive vehicle under this 8-foot tall snow drift, don't you think I should whack you upside your head with my shovel?"

Instead, I smile pleasantly, remind myself that this is the most I've seen of my neighbors since last winter and then I offer him what's left of my Kahlua.

Diane K. Danielson is a Cohasset resident who fondly remembers writing about global warming last December, but this year is instead stocking up on Kahlua, which she will gladly share with anyone who wants to shovel and de-ice her driveway.

HEALTH NOTES

Be on alert for carbon monoxide

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cold weather is the time to be wary of carbon monoxide. Exposures and poisonings occur more often during the fall and winter, when we are more likely to use gas furnaces, heaters and generators in our homes. A recent study by the CDC's National Council for Environmental Health found that approximately 480 United States residents died each year from non-fire-related CO poisoning. In addition, an estimated 15,200 persons with confirmed or possible non-fire-related CO exposure or poisoning were treated annually in U.S. hospital emergency departments. Highest fatalities occur in December and January with over 2,000 exposures and more than 50 fatalities each month. Although males and females were equally likely to visit emergency departments for CO exposure, males were 2.3 times more likely to die; perhaps attributable to high risk activities such as working in enclosed garages with generators or power tools. The CO poisoning death rate was highest among people over 65, possibly because of higher risk for undetected exposure. The most common symptoms of CO exposure are nausea, headache and dizziness, which can be easily mistaken for a viral illness or other conditions that are common among the elderly. More severe symptoms including loss of consciousness, shortness of breath and loss of muscle control are often not reported.

Cohasset's new defense against CO poisoning. Last August, the Fire Department acquired a new device that improves their ability to detect carbon monoxide poisoning. The Rad 57 Oximeter is now available on the ambulance, which responds to all emergency calls to the Fire Department. This $6,000 unit is a rugged version of the hemoglobin pulse and oxygen meters you've seen on patient's fingers in hospitals. It can detect the presence of elevated levels of carboxyhemoglobin saturation – CO poisoning – and several other life sign indications from a patient. The completely self contained device weighs less than a pound, is painless when applied and its batteries can be recharged while operating in the field. More important, it provides an instantaneous certain indication when a patient has dangerous levels of deadly CO in the blood. Thus, immediate responders can begin lifesaving treatment sooner.

To Prevent Carbon Monoxide exposure, Take the following precautions:

- Have your heating system, water heater and any other gas-, oil- or coal-burning appliances serviced by a qualified technician every year.
- Install a battery-operated CO detector in your home and check or replace the battery when you change the time on your clocks each spring and fall.
- If your CO detector sounds, evacuate your home immediately and telephone 911.
- Seek prompt medical attention if you suspect CO poisoning and are feeling dizzy, light-headed or nauseated.
- Do not use a generator, charcoal grill, camp stove or other gasoline- or charcoal-burning device inside your home, basement, garage or near a window.
- Do not run a car or truck inside a garage attached to your house, even if you leave the door open.
- Do not burn anything in a stove or fireplace that is not vented.
- Do not heat your house with a gas oven.
- If you smell an odor from your gas refrigerator's cooling unit have an expert service it. An odor from the cooling unit of a gas refrigerator can mean you have a defect in the cooling unit. It could also be giving off CO.
- Do not use portable flameless catalytic chemical heaters indoors. Although these heaters don't have a flame, they burn gas and can cause CO to build up inside your home, cabin or camper.
- When purchasing gas equipment, buy only equipment carrying the seal of a national testing agency, such as the American Gas Association or Underwriters' Laboratories.

For more information about carbon monoxide poisoning and prevention visit cdc.gov/nceh.

Dickens Christmas

Our Town is offering an end-of-the-year special that starts with Roving Reporter Rich Ofsthun heading south for the Dickens Christmas event in Scituate.

The show then goes on to highlight two big 2007 happenings for Cohasset; the Beechwood Ballfield dedication and the coming of the Greenbush Train line. Wrapping up this special one-hour show is a performance by Cohasset's very own Gr8fls playing the Sea Note. Tune in starting Monday at 9pm on Comcast channel 10.

Christmas tree drive

The Cohasset Middle School Student Council and PSO Christmas Tree Drive 2008 will be held Saturday, Jan. 5. Holiday trees can be picked up and taken away at the cost of $20 per tree. The cost for tree pick-up for senior citizens is $15. To arrange pick-up, call 781-383-2492 by 8 p.m., Friday, Jan. 4, and leave a message with your address, phone number and any special instructions. Make your check out to Cohasset Middle School and attach it to your tree. Trees will be picked up from the end of driveways between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 5.

Parents lose special education fight

"All I want is my parental rights back," she said about a month ago, before the Superior Court trial. Now, she feels her parental rights have been taken from her at the hands of the school. As seasoned parents of five boys, she believes she knows what's best for her youngest son.

To complicate the matter, Peggy Lewis has a dual role with the Cohasset schools — as a parent and as an employee. For the last three years, she has worked as the secretary in the main Middle-High School office.

From the Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh's point of view, the issue was never about the adults in the situation, "I've never seen it as a parent rights versus school rights issue, it's the right of every child to have a free appropriate public education," said Walsh in a phone interview this week.

"We're pleased with the result, as student advocates we work everyday to have each student achieve their best result," said Walsh, adding the decision reinforces what the school and its staff does day in and day out.

But, for Peggy Lewis the decision has only reinforced with her there is something wrong with the system: the laws and Cohasset Schools.

"Something has to happen because of this, parents don't know they could lose all say over their child's education," said Lewis.

Her son had been on an IEP since the first grade to address speech and language issues. It was never really a question of whether her son needed extra help; it was who was going to provide the extra services to her son, Lewis says. While her son was in the seventh grade last year, Lewis found the special education services being rendered were not helping her son achieve educational goals, like satisfactory grades. When the special education department proposed increasing her son's services, she disagreed. If the current services weren't helping, then what were additional services going to do, she argued.

What no one seemed to listen to, explains Lewis, is she and her husband never said they thought their son couldn't use the extra help, they just didn't want the Cohasset school system to provide it. "We don't have any trust in the Cohasset schools."

The distrust, born out of incomplete progress reports and what they said was unresponsiveness within the special education department, prompted the Lewises to reject the new enhanced IEP back in March. Instead, they proposed hiring an outside tutor to help their son with his schoolwork.

But, school representatives felt the student would not succeed without additional in-school special education services, said Walsh, and would not be given a "free and appropriate public education," legalese for the responsibility a public school system has by law to provide all students eligible for special education with the services they need to succeed.

Providing the Lewises' son with "a free and appropriate public education" has been the central issue throughout the process. Federal and state law ensures that all students with disabilities receive an appropriate public education at no expense to the family. A free and appropriate public education differs for each student because each student has unique needs.

When the Lewises and the special education department could not come to a consensus by the end of the school year in June, Director of Special Services Linda Gill filed for a hearing with the Bureau of Special Education Appeals (BSEA), a division of the Massachusetts Department of Education.

After a five-hour hearing in August, the hearing officer ruled that without the special education program the 13-year-old would not be provided with a free and appropriate education; however, enrolling him in a regular education program would not "seriously endanger the health and welfare of the child or the school district" and the parents had the right to remove him from the IEP. When the decision came down, the Lewises wrote a letter to Gill enacting their right to take their son off the IEP and enroll him in regular education.

Shortly after school began this fall, the School Committee brought a Superior Court suit against Peggy and Kevin Lewis. According to the BSEA hearing document, going to a Superior Court proceeding to show the child should be placed in an appropriate educational program is the only way to override the parents' lack of consent. At Superior Court, the school has to show that with the parents' recommended educational program there would be serious harm to the health and safety of the child, substantially disruption for other students or a denial of a free and appropriate education, according to the BSEA hearing document.

In September, the schools sought and were granted a restraining order from the courts that allowed them to place the Lewises son back on the new IEP.

Although the School Committee's name is on the suit, Chairman Rick Flynn says the School Committee had little to do with the case except being kept apprised by the administration as the developments were made.

"We support them [the school administration and special education department], but we don't get involved with the intricacies of the day to day operations of the school," said Flynn in a phone interview, "they have the expertise."

"Our responsibility is to provide a free and appropriate public education for students. If the Lewises' son was taken off the IEP his education would have been deficient," said Flynn.

How did it get this far?

A school department bringing parents to Superior Court so they can provide a student with more services is atypical. The majority of the time parents are the ones seeking extra services for their child from the public school system.

In the case of all students who need special services, there is a step-by-step process to determine a plan for the child. It begins with the development of an individualized education program (IEP) and the parents, as a part of the team, have to accept the IEP. The team composition varies but typically includes special education administrators, special education teachers, guidance counselors and the parents. Once an IEP is developed, the parents can accept the IEP in full, in part, or not at all.

If the team cannot come to an agreement the next step is a mediation session with a representative from the Department of Education and/or a hearing with the Bureau of Special Education Appeals (BSEA). Both steps were taken in the Lewises' case.

"Those efforts had been exhausted," said Walsh in a phone interview this week, "at each opportunity there was an appeal."

The efforts to get the Lewises' son on the new IEP was in support of a team decision, said Walsh, where the consensus of the team was the new IEP would work for the student and provide a free appropriate public education.

Although the idea of a team is to build a collaborative environment, according to the Massachusetts Department of Education IEP Process Guide, the schools have the ultimate responsibility to ensure the IEP has the services that a student needs.

But, Peggy Lewis believes the Cohasset schools went too far in her case.

"We did everything we were supposed to do, but we're still in this place," says Lewis, "the administration let it get this bad."

The administration has yet to respond to numerous complaints Lewis filed, she says. The School Committee refused to put her on the agenda to discuss her issues with the Special Education department.

The School Committee declined to meet with Peggy Lewis because it did not feel her concerns were appropriate for a public forum, said Chairman Rick Flynn. An executive session required legal counsel and Flynn says the committee was not prepared or biased to do so.

"If nothing else, this is making people aware how the school can use their power — if they want to," says Lewis.

A long road

For all parties involved with the issue, the culmination at Superior Court was a long time coming.

"We are very pleased to be able to provide the services this child needs to be successful," said Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh.

While the Lewises are not pleased with the situation, they plan to keep their son enrolled at Cohasset Middle School at least through the end of the school year, but will be keeping a close eye on his special education program through weekly meetings.

"We'll be protecting him along the way," said Lewis, "he's going to be okay."

Lewis plans to send her youngest to Xaverian High School in Westwood beginning in the fall, just like his four older brothers.

The time she has invested in her son's case is enormous. Over the summer, Lewis spent hours talking with special education advocates, lawyers and the Department of Education. This fall, as they prepared to appear in Superior Court, they spent thousands of dollars on a lawyer to help them fight their battle with Cohasset schools, but due to financial reasons they forged ahead in Superior Court without legal representation.

"I've learned so much, it's amazing," said Lewis, but not all of it is good news for her and parents like her.

"If you read between all the lines very closely the school district needs nothing from the parent," she writes in a letter to the editor this week.

Lewis was not afraid to take her situation public and has spoken freely to the media. When the Superior Court suit was filed and the School Committee declined to hear her in an open forum, she wrote a letter to the Mariner. The Tinytown Gazette wrote a series of articles on the Lewises' issues. After the court proceeding and decision last week, front-page stories and TV spots followed.

On Wednesday night (Dec. 19), she and her husband were guests on the WBZ 1030 night talk show, Nightside with Dan Rea. The host was surprised with the onslaught of calls so to accommodate them all he extended their time on the show into a second hour.

The school's legal counsel, Murphy, Hesse, Toomey and Lehane law firm, represented the Cohasset School Committee at the trial and at the proceedings leading up the day at Superior Court. Lewis requested the school's legal expenses devoted to her son's case and at the close of October the legal fees have mounted to almost $20,000 and it could be considerably more when all is said and done.

"There are parents begging for (special education) services and they can't get them," Lewis said, "it's a shame."

On the school side, School Committee Chairman Flynn explains each child and each case is looked at on an individual basis. In this case, at every step of the way the schools were affirmed they were seeking to provide what the child needed, "We had confidence in the administration and our legal counsel and felt it was the right thing to do…At the end of the day, we did what was needed to look out for the best interest of the child and it was upheld in the court."

But, for Peggy Lewis she believes her son has been treated poorly by the school district. She maintains he was closely monitored and unfairly singled out on numerous occasions.

"An IEP works against kids and we don't want it," she said, "I just feel this has been so big, so bad, something has to be done to protect the parents and children.

"I never would have agreed without a fight," says Lewis. She and her husband are still contemplating if they'd like to pursue an appeal or another avenue to get some more answers, "I know we're right, I know there's something wrong."

Glossary of Special Education Terms

• Individualized education program, or IEP: An IEP is developed at a team meeting (consisting of parent(s) and the school's special education representatives) and represents a formal agreement about the services that the school will provide for a child's special education needs. The IEP is a contract between the parent/guardian and the school.

• Free Appropriate Public Education, or FAPE: A child who is eligible for special education services is entitled by federal law to receive a Free Appropriate Public Education (FAPE). FAPE ensures that all students with disabilities receive an appropriate public education at no expense to the family. FAPE differs for each student because each student has unique needs. FAPE specifies that needed services must be provided without cost to the family.

• Bureau of special education appeals, or BSEA: A department within the state Department of Special Education that conducts mediations, advisory opinions and hearings to resolve disputes among parents, school districts, private schools and state agencies concerning eligibility, evaluation, placement, IEPs, special education services and procedural protections for students with disabilities.

• Special Education: Special education is specially designed instruction and related services that meet the unique needs of an eligible student with a disability or a specific service need that is necessary to allow the student with a disability to access the general curriculum. The purpose of special education is to allow the student to successfully develop his or her individual educational potential.

• Special education Team: A team is a group of teaching professionals and the parents who convene to plan and provide plan and provide the help that a child needs. The teams must include parent(s)/guardian, at least one special education teacher, at least one regular education teacher, someone to interpret the evaluation results and explain what services may be needed, the child (if between 14 and 22) and possibly others invited by the school district or parent.

LEWIS FAMILY TIMELINE

March

• The Lewises' reject their son's new IEP after the special education department recommended additional services. They told the school they would provide additional services outside of school, their proposal was rejected in part.

• The school and the Lewises go into "mediation," where a Department of Education representative attempts to mediate a resolution for the child. No resolution was met.

May

•Late May: Director of Special Services Linda Gill files for a BSEA (Bureau of Special Education Appeals, a department of the state Department of Education) hearing.

July

• Peggy Lewis files Special Education compliance complaints with the Department of Education.

August

• Aug. 6: Peggy Lewis, as an employee of the school department, files a harassment complaint against Linda Gill with the Cohasset schools.

• Aug. 7: BSEA hearing, five hours of testimony is heard.

• Aug. 23: BSEA hearing decision filed. The hearing officer found the school department would be providing a "free and appropriate public education" if the new IEP with additional services was implemented, but said the parents' had the right to make educational decisions for their child.

• Aug. 28: The Lewises send a letter to Gill requesting their son's removal from special service.

• Aug. 31: The Lewises receive notice from Gill informing them that their son will be a regular education student for the first two days of school (Sept. 4 & 5) then in the following days they will be awaiting the Superior Court decision on his special education plan.

September

• Sept. 5: A Superior Court suit is filed against the Lewises.

• Sept. 6: The Lewises receive a notice of hearing for a restraining order in the mail. The restraining order would prevent the Lewises from removing their son from services after the BSEA decision gave them the right to do so. The hearing was scheduled for the same day at 2p.m. At the hearing, a restraining order was issued and the Lewises's son was ordered to go on the new IEP.

• Sept. 17: The Lewises go back to court with a lawyer to try to keep their son on the old IEP while the new IEP was in dispute. The request was denied.

• Late September: Peggy Lewis contacts the members of the School Committee to see if she can be placed on an upcoming agenda. She is denied.

October

• Oct. 5: The Cohasset Mariner publishes a letter to the editor from Kevin and Peggy Lewis. Their letter explains how she lost her parental rights over her child and is facing a two-to-three day trial in Superior Court. The letter also indicates her frustration with the School Committee after they refused to put her on a meeting agenda.

• Oct. 10: The Tinytown Gazette publishes the first in a series of articles about the Lewises and their struggles with the Cohasset school special education department.

November

• Nov. 26: Kevin and Peggy Lewis represent themselves at a pre-trial hearing at Norfolk County Superior Court.

December

• Dec. 13 & 14: At Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham, school administration, teachers and experts testify over a one and a half day period. Judge Patrick Brady rules the Cohasset public schools can keep the eighth grader in a special education program against his parent's wishes. A written decision is pending.

ing of an amount of time they do not know or have the expertise to determine. The other side will argue to maintain the existing schedule in order to preserve their preferred view of a water filled ILH and minimize the unsubstantiated threat of property value reductions by some undetermined amount based on financial assessments that have not been performed, and environmental opinions they, as well, do not have the expertise to offer.

• If our group cannot come to a conclusion, (and how could we, and with what degree of confidence could anyone have that our decision, however well intentioned, was accurate), the Selectmen will make the decision for changing the schedule of dam operation. And they have not used the previous environmental assessments of ILH to make a decision, and to-date have not performed an economic study to substantiate maintaining the status quo.

• Faced with the above, where is anybody going with this?

• Beyond this Cat-Dam issue, is there now a broader town policy that supports local, non-expert, residents controlling, managing, and making critical decisions on town-owned property that we all benefit from and have access too? If this were an historic town building sitting on the Common, would we allow the set of abutting neighbors to make structural safety assessments and beautification changes without a single architect, or historian in the group? How does the health and beauty of Inner Little Harbor differ?

All historic town sanctioned studies have determined that ILH is polluted and getting worse due to many factors, one of which is Cat Dam; a dam installed decades ago when the knowledge base of environmental science was much smaller than it is today. No one has determined what level of increased flushing through Cat Dam can fix it. Rather than having an expert determine this (whether for free with Coastal Zone Management, or paid to a different consultant), and offer a non-binding report, we are instead allowing emotional opinions from non-experts determine the future of this body of water. How can this approach be in the short or long term interest of our town?

GIFTS of HOPE
Reaching out to help in your own community.
The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.
For the past 16 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.
How can you help this year? Please join the Cohasset Mariner in supporting the Social Service League of Cohasset in their efforts to help those in need this holiday season. A donation of any size goes a long way.

Cohasset knocks off reigning league champions

By David Wolcott
DWOLCOTT@CNC.COM

If the object of the game is to get the ball into basket, doesn't it make sense to take shots closer to the hoop rather than farther away? That's exactly the logic the Cohasset High School girls basketball team employed Tuesday night as it defeated the three-time defending South Shore League champion Carver Crusaders, 51-48, on the road.

"They beat us in every facet of the game that you could think of," Carver High School head coach Tony Pina said after the loss. "They got after loose balls better than we did and they got up and down the floor better than we did. They did everything better than we did. We didn't play well at all and I think Cohasset had a lot to do with that fact."

The Crusaders (2-1) had been able to use the three-point shot as a key to their success, but their shooting eye failed them Tuesday night. They ended up 5-for-21 from beyond the arc in the loss with many of those misses coming during an extended cold spell from the field in the first half.

"Early in the game we were forcing things with the offense and the shots were not falling," Pina said. "When that was happening we weren't looking for the inside game. We didn't show the patience we needed to let things play out. Cohasset did a good job with the press, forcing us to take a lot of time to get the ball up the court."

While Carver missed the long-range shots, Cohasset was more than happy to pound the ball inside to its tall girls and take its chances from a great deal closer to the basket. Sisters Tori and Sammi Lehr led Cohasset with 12 points each, combining to score 20 of Cohasset's 28 points in the second half.

Sophomore point guard Ally Thatcher led three Carver players in double-figures with 14 points. Classmates Ashley Fruzzetti and Mari Meserve added 10 points each in the loss.

Fruzzetti and Thatcher scored early to get Carver out to a 10-4 lead in the first four minutes of the game, but Cohasset battled back to get within a basket, 12-10, at the end of the first quarter.

Carli Haggerty's three-point play gave the Skippers their first lead of the game with six minutes left in the half, 17-14. The lead seesawed the rest of the half before Thatcher stole a pass and set up Fruzzetti for a jumper that tied the game heading into the break, 23-23.

Carver picked up the intensity in the third quarter. Meserve helped things out by setting up Thatcher and Lakiesha Govoni (six points) for easy hoops to give Carver a 28-27 lead, but Cohasset answered by pounding the basketball down in the paint to the Lehr sisters for high-percentage points. The Skippers had the momentum as well as a 39-33 lead heading into the final quarter.

The momentum was back in Carver's favor early in the fourth quarter. Megan Sheehan's arching three-pointer capped off a 7-1 run that tied the game, 40-40, with just under five minutes left. Sammi Lehr's free throw put Cohasset back on top by a point,

Wrestlers get back on mat

Young Skippers look to defend May Shore League crown

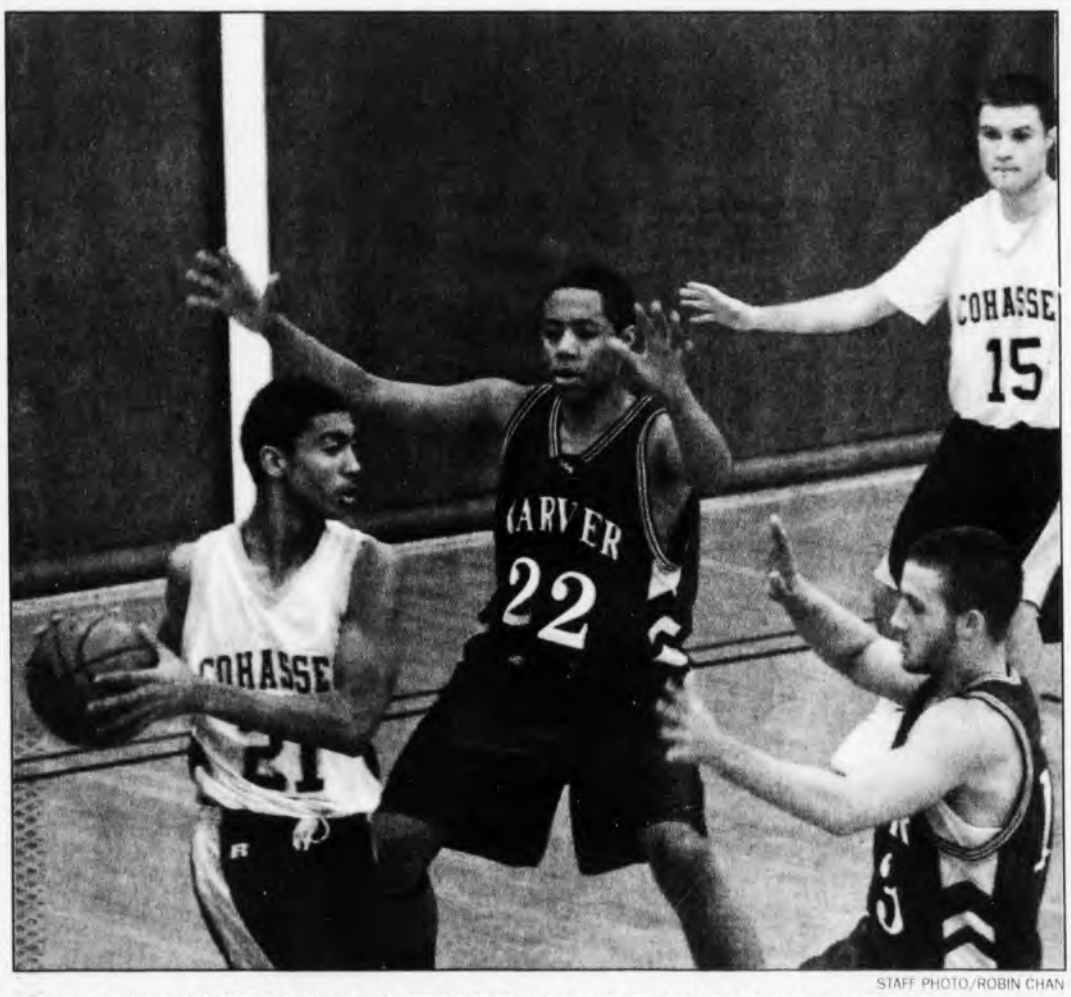
By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High School wrestling team may be a bit inexperienced and undermanned but it will be tough to face nonetheless this winter sports season.

The team has only a pair of seniors, Steve Hurlbut (215 pounds) and Nick Secatore (160-171). Both captains will be looked upon to lead the young team in the competitive May Shore League. Hurlbut finished third in the Division 3 South sectionals last year. Secatore has worked hard in the off-season and come into this year ready to lead the young Skippers.

Juniors Mike Froio (152-160) and David Toomey (145) are also captains on this year's team. Froio finished fifth as a freshman in the Division 3 South sectional and looks to get back in the mix this year. Toomey finished fourth in the sectional last year.

"We have a lot of underclassmen that don't have a tremendous amount of experience," head coach Torin Sweeney said. "We will be a work in progress."



As far as the four captains, they lead in the experience department and all four will be vital to the Skippers hopes for success in 2007-2008. Last year Cohasset finished 16-13 and won the May Shore League championship by finishing 7-0 in league. The May Shore combines teams from the South Shore and the Mayflower League into one league.

"Those guys have the most experience and will be looked upon for leadership," Sweeney said. "So far they have done a great job."

The biggest problem for Cohasset has been filling up its roster. The Skippers have 24 kids from the freshman up, but haven't found a wrestler at 112 pounds. Thus, they have been forced to forfeit the valuable points.

"We have great team chemistry and work ethic, but the biggest problem has been at 112

Learning as they go

Skippers win one; lose two to start the season

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

Despite winning its first game of the season, 66-42, against South Shore Christian Academy, the Cohasset boys varsity basketball team dropped two in a row to South Shore League opponents Abington and Carver. But, these two losses are not the same types of losses the Skippers experienced last season because this year, the team is putting forth strong, competitive efforts each time it takes the floor.

Although the final score of Friday's game against Abington, 77-57, makes it appear as Cohasset got blown out right from the start, the Skippers played a very competitive first half and head coach Dorian Bryant looked at the game as a "good learning experience."

Cohasset only trailed by six points at halftime and was in it for most of the game. The killer for Cohasset: turnovers. Led by sophomore point guard Kristian LaPointe, the Green Wave of Abington was able to run all over the court and force numerous turnovers on the Cohasset side. Lapointe, who finished with 18 points, is by far the fastest player in the league and makes quick decisions.

"We need to find a way to slow him down nest time so we don't end up running a marathon out there," Bryant said about the skilled player.

Junior and second year varsity player Marcus Charles led the way for Cohasset. He scored a team-high 17 points in the game and kept the Skippers in it for much of the first half. Senior captain Pat McCarthy, returning from a finger injury that kept him out of the first game, also hit double digits for Cohasset. McCarthy finished with 10 points.

Unlike the game at Abington, Cohasset was neck and neck with Carver until the final minute of Tuesday night's game. Thanks to McCarthy's six points in the first quarter, Cohasset led by one point going into the second half. Fortunes turned bad though for the captain as he tallied his third foul on a technical foul called by the referees. With three fouls this early in the game, McCarthy was forced to sit the rest of the half.

Despite Charles' two three pointer's, one coming with an extra foul shot making it seven total points, Cohasset fell into a tiny slump and trailed by three at the half.

With McCarthy back in the game to start the second half, Cohasset appeared to be rejuvenated. He hit two big three-pointers to keep Cohasset within eight points at the end of the third quarter.

Split decision

Eighth grade girls travel basketball team defeats Pembroke, falls to Abington

The eighth grade girls travel basketball team faced Abington and Pembroke last weekend and came away with one win and one hard fought loss. Saturday night, Cohasset traveled to Abington and came home on the short end of a deceptive 31-21 score.

Defense set the tone early with Cohasset playing an aggressive 1-2-2 against a strong Abington squad. Abington took an early four-point lead, but it was not destined to last. Strong defense forced it to play an outside game and when the girls tried to come inside they ran into tall Cohasset centers and forwards who shut them down with 22 blocked shots, led by Allie Farren (eight), Watson Leffel (five), and Olivia Franklin, Christie Fitzgerald and Anna Seraikas with three each.

The score went back and forth throughout the first half. The half court press generated scoring opportunities on steals by Anna Seraikas and Christie Fitzgerald, which combined with breaks off defensive rebounds kept Cohasset neck and neck with its opponent. The energy was high and players ran the court full speed for the entire half, and even through substitutions, the team played like a well-oiled machine. Ellie Tedeschi off an assist hit a short jumper in traffic, adding two points for Cohasset. At the close of the half, Cohasset connected on a long pass over the press to a breaking Allie Farren, but her heavily defended lay-up did not count due to a travel call. When the buzzer rang the score stood 17-13 in favor of Abington.

Cohasset continued the intensity in the second half. The game was physical, but Cohasset held its ground. The team moved the ball well on offense and was able to get off a lot of shots. Strong offensive rebounding by Watson Leffel (eight), Allie Farren (seven), Jen Mullin (six), and Isabel Robinson (three) gave Cohasset additional chances to score. In the last four minutes of play, Abington's aggressive press forced turnovers that led to points. Cohasset continued to hustle and put up shots, but the ball did not fall in its favor. The hard fought contest ended with Abington winning, 31-21, but according to spectators the score hardly reflected how the game was played.

Every player on the team gave a 100% effort and worked well with their teammates. Special recognition goes out to Anna Seraikas who had an outstanding game, leading the team on offense and sparking the squad on defense. In recognition of her tenacious play Seraikas earned the coveted Hustle Award tallying six points, two rebounds, seven steals and three blocked shots.

Sunday the team defeated Pembroke at home, 38-21. Cohasset came out aggressive, but it took three minutes for the team to warm up and settle into its game. With the score 2-2, Cohasset's defense sparked offense activity. Jen Mullin put in a short jumper and Allie Farren chipped one in on a second effort to make the score at 6-4. Well-executed traps on Cohasset's half court press created turnovers and fast breaks. Anna Seraikas and Isabel Robinson were sent to the line where they made 3-of-4 attempts. Sage Stebbins took control of a loose ball and hit Watson Leffel for two points. A high-speed lay-up off a steal by Christie Fitzgerald put Cohasset in the lead at the half, 15-4.

The squad came out in the second half and made a number of nice plays both from the offensive set and on breaks. Sage Stebbins with (11), Allie Farren (10), Watson Leffel (eight), Isabel Robinson (seven), Jen Mullin (six), and Olivia Franklin (two) and Ellie Tedeschi (two) all rebounded well. Anna Seraikas found Allie Farren for two points before Pembroke put in a lay-up. Cohasset answered right back. Allie Farren scored and then she assisted on Olivia Franklin's basket. Press breaks led to drives and lay-ups by Christie Fitzgerald, Isabel Robinson and Sage Stebbins pushing the score to 34-18. A swish dropped from the corner by Olivia Franklin was called back on a three-second violation. With 50 seconds remaining in the contest, Sage Stebbins stole the ball and drove the length of the court for two points. Just 25 seconds later, Sage stole the ball again, finding Seraikas for a pair and putting the final score at 38-21.

Once again, all players came out to play ball against Pembroke, but it seemed Sage Stebbins was all over the court. Stebbins received the Hustle Award in recognition of her focused effort and high level energy that resulted in four points, three offensive rebounds, eight defensive rebounds and seven steals.

Close calls

Sixth grade boys basketball travel team wins one, loses two

The sixth grade boys travel basketball team kicked off its regular season last weekend against a very talented ball club from Weymouth. It was a close contest for most of the first half that featured a lot of back and forth on both sides with many near misses for the boys in blue. Jack Conte played well at the point guard position with a couple of nice baskets from the outside. Mark Rattenbury had some great opportunities in the middle and made his share of rebounds. Mark Brown scored four points. He led the team in rebounds and fought hard all game with a terrific effort.

Rocco Laugelle generated several turnovers that were converted into points and continued to disrupt Weymouth's even tempo. Mark McKenna drained a nice free throw from the line. Timmy Cavanaro and Jack Stanganelli played well off the bench on defense and picked up a few key rebounds along the way. Doug Fitzgerald and Zach Coggins contributed from the guard position, including two points for Coggins at the buzzer. But it was Weymouth's double teaming tenacity that would confuse Cohasset in the end and ultimately keep it at bay throughout the game. Weymouth prevailed 34-22 to take the season opener.

Cohasset faced Hanson next. Hanson rolled out its right-hander to intimidate the lads from the coast, but fear not, Cohasset's keen coaching staff scouted the one-armed bandit early and matched him up with its master of dexterity Rocco "hands" Laugelle. Laugelle would torment his opponent's talented attack with toughness and a knack for forcing the righty to pitch lefty. He scored six and loved every minute of it. Mark Brown led his boys with a dozen and played both ends of the court like a champ. Henry Brown posted five points. Brendan O'Connell directed the show from the point. He scored a half dozen and served up some dishes to the big heavy's down low.

Joe Buckley delivered his usual punishment on the boards and on defense, and oh yeah, scored five points along the way. Chris Haggerty scored a deuce. He also played terrific on the boards yanking down his share of rebounds. Jack Conte, Zach Coggins and Mark McKenna all contributed big on defense and make great decisions with the ball. Connor Green did his thing with rebounds and heads up play all night that complemented an overall outstanding team effort that led Cohasset to its first win of the young season, 36-27.

Cohasset took on Abington next. The boys in blue knew coming in that the Green Wave were a well coached, great shooting, tough bunch with good height. Doug Fitzgerald came out firing with his Cousy-like rhythm. He provided some nice points to keep it close early with well-timed rebounds. Brendan O'Connell had some nice bids from the perimeter. Chris Haggerty posted a pair and snatched many a rebound. Jack Stanganelli played terrific at the forward post. He scored two points to knot it up at 10-10 with a minute left in the first half.

Connor Green drained a nice foul shot to keep things close before Abington began to pull away as the second half rolled on. Then the Brown and Buckley show turned on the lights. Henry was on fire as he logged six points in the second half alone. Joe added six to his first half pair to post a snowman for the night. But it was Joe B. on the boards and seemingly matching every rebound with a steal that kept this game close down to the wire, and that wire was stretched thin at the buzzer. Cohasset pulled ahead 25-24 with 29 seconds remaining. Timmy Cavanaro snagged an offensive rebound and took it to the hoop, but it rolled off the rim and into an Abington players' hands with 10 seconds left in the game. The Abington player went coast to coast for the lay-up to go ahead by one point. Cohasset inbounded the ball, but its last second shot wasn't meant to be as the boys in blue lost, 26-25, on the road.

but the speedy Thatcher answered back in a flash with a driving hoop to give Carver its final lead of the game, 42-41, with 4:03 remaining on the clock.

Cohasset charged back into the lead with a little help from everyone as four different players scored a hoop to give them a 49-42 lead with 1:50 to go, but Govoni and Thatcher responded with baskets that cut the lead to 49-46 with 1:10 left to play.

Chelsea Pilling made sure her only hoop of the night was a big one when her short jumper got Carver to within a single point with 39.4 seconds left.

Tori Lehr nailed a jumper to put Cohasset on top 51-48. Carver turned the ball over in the backcourt and was forced to foul Sammi Lehr with 5.9 seconds left. She missed the front end of the one, which meant Carver had to go the length of the court in less than five seconds.

The Skippers (2-1) weren't about to allow a miracle comeback by Carver as they stalled Carver in the backcourt long enough for time to run out before it could get a shot off.

Up next

The Cohasset Holiday Tournament will take place Thursday, Dec. 27, at the high school. West Bridgewater faces Hull in the first game at 3 p.m. The Skippers face Sacred Heart at 6 p.m. Friday, Dec. 28, the consolation and championship games will take place at the same times. Cohasset resumes its regular season schedule Friday, Jan. 4, when it travels over the bridge to face Harwich at 6:30 p.m.

pounds, we can't cover it because we only have one kid at 103," Sweeney said.

Despite the youth, Cohasset will compete against a very difficult schedule. The kids may be young, but Sweeney thinks the good slate of meets will make his guys stronger.

"This is one of the most difficult schedules we have had," Sweeney said. "It's tougher than we anticipated, but our guys are only going to get better with every match at the varsity level."

Cohasset faced Pembroke and Mansfield to begin the season Saturday, Dec. 8, and dropped both matches. The Titans and the Warriors are strong teams, but many Skippers fared well.

Pembroke won, 36-26, but in that match Matt Dooley (103), Andrew Littauer (140), Jake Wheelwright (152), Froio (160) and Hurlbut (215) all won for Cohasset. Littauer won his match by pin.

Mansfield defeated Cohasset, 56-18, but Dooley, Toomey (145) and Jack Murphy (119) all won by pin.

Since then

Entering Wednesday night's (Dec. 19) home match against Bristol-Plymouth the Skippers have alternated wins and losses en route to a 2-5 record. Cohasset picked up its first victories of the season Saturday, Dec. 15, as it defeated Canton, 39-31, and Hanover, 56-18, in a home quad-meet. The Skippers didn't fare as well against Hingham, 46-27, or Norton, 38-32. Cohasset's other loss came Wednesday, Dec. 12, as it lost, 49-19, to the Eagles at BC High.

Up next

The Skippers are on the road now for a while as they compete in two tri-meets, a holiday tournament and a dual-meet. Saturday, Dec. 22, the squad travels to Lynnfield High School to take on Wakefield, Wilmington and the host school. The meet begins at 10 a.m. Thursday, Dec. 27, and Friday, Dec. 28, the boys take part in the Marshfield Holiday Tournament at Marshfield High School. Competition begins at 10 a.m. Thursday and noon Friday. Saturday, Jan. 5, the team travels to Braintree to take on St. John's Prep, Bridgewater-Raynham and the host school. Competition begins at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 9, the boys travel to Norwell to face the Clippers at 3:30 p.m.

Cohasset returns home Saturday, Jan. 12, to take part in its Invitational Tournament. Competition begins at 10 a.m.

Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball launches new online registration

The Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Association (CYBSA) will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball spring season online beginning Friday, Dec. 21, through Friday, Feb. 1. Parents/Guardians can complete the registration process by visiting our Web site: CYBSA.net

Registrations that are completed after Friday, Feb. 1, will be charged a $50 per player late fee and late registrants will only be placed on a team if space permits, on a first come-first serve basis. The late fee will be strictly enforced, and there is no guarantee that late registered players will be accommodated, as uniform orders and other season plans will be made Feb. 1. Everyone's cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated as it allows the Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Association to establish rosters and order equipment and uniforms so that it's ready for Opening Day.

Be advised that returning players already assigned to a Major League team are still required to register.

The Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Association will also provide a one day walk-in registration Saturday, Jan. 26. Visit CYBSA.net for details.

final quarter, Cohasset looked to be drained. That is until rising freshman star Robert Jones went on a scoring rampage. Jones drilled two three-pointers and then made a lay-up scoring eight Cohasset points in a row to bring the Skippers to within a basket of Carver.

"For a freshman, I was surprised how well Robert knows the game and how well he can control the floor from the point position," Bryant said about his first year player.

Cohasset still trailed by two with about two minutes left in the game when junior and second year varsity player Danny Martin sunk two free throws to tie and the game. Then, on Carver's next possession, Martin grabbed a rebound and beat everyone down the floor for an easy lay-up attempt. Well, an easy lay-up attempt for most players, but for Martin, as he showed the fans last year, and open lane means only one thing: a slam dunk. And that is exactly what Martin was thinking on this night as he went up with both hands, dunked the ball, and even swung on the rim; all a part of giving his team a two-point lead with two minutes left in the game.

"We lost our composure a little bit on the floor, which happens, but we can take this as a positive learning experience."
Dorian Bryant

Unfortunately, the roaring crowd was soon to be disappointed, as Cohasset could not muster a point the rest of the game consequently losing to Carver, 59-50. When asked what happened at the end of the game, Bryant responded, "We lost our composure a little bit on the floor, which happens, but we can take this as a positive learning experience."

With Martin finishing with 10 points, McCarthy finishing with 12 points, and Jones finishing with eight and showing signs of maturity, Bryant has a lot to take away from this game as his team heads into the Holiday Tournament. Most importantly though, Bryant noted that, "It's nice to see we can play with a team like that [Carver] whom most coaches around the league see as one of the better teams."

Cohasset 66, South Shore Christian 42

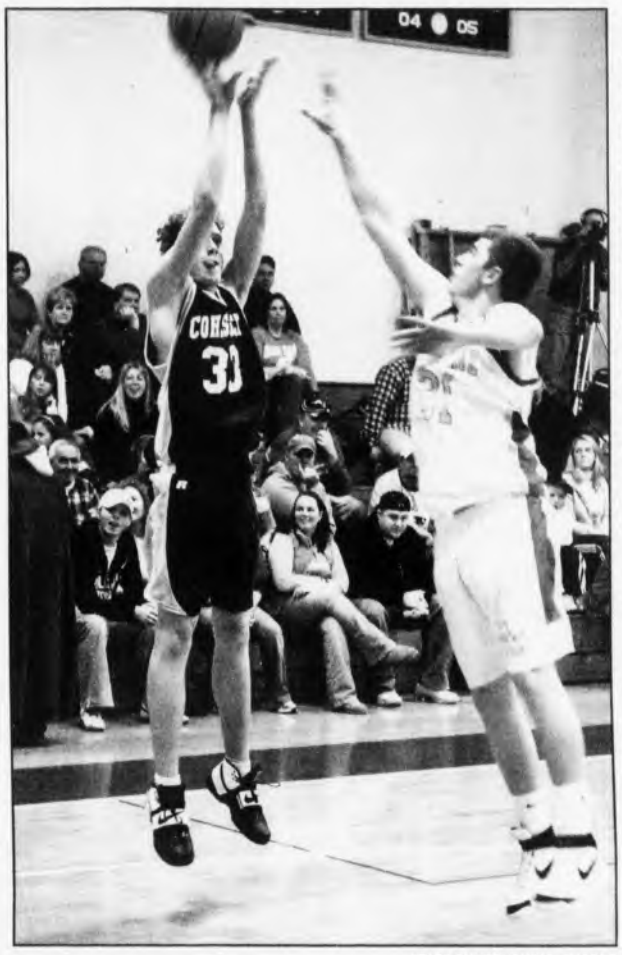
Following the team's first game over South Shore Christian Academy, Bryant stressed the fact that his basketball team had a much better attitude than it did a year ago. Well with their new and improved attitude the Skippers were able to go on to defeat South Shore Christian, 66-42.

With McCarthy out of action due to a broken finger, it was up to the rest of the team, including four new varsity players, to step it up. These four new players consist of junior Gordon Smith, who played both junior varsity and varsity last year, sophomore John Maher, and two freshmen K.J. Pontes and Jones. All were able to get significant playing time and make contributions to Cohasset's first win of the season. Jones finished with seven assists from the point guard position.

At halftime Cohasset already led the game by 14 points, 34-20. This was largely due to the outstanding performance of Charles. After draining two three-pointers with under a minute to go in the half, and finishing with three three-pointers, Charles tallied 15 points by half. He would go on to finish with a game high 19 points.

Martin also played fantastically in the game, starting right where he left off last season. With seven points in the first and six in the second, he played solid the whole game and finished with 12 points.

The Skippers dominated the game right from the tip and it continued in the second half where they played almost flawless basketball and like a team should.



"They're a bunch of guys that like to be together," Bryant said after the game about his team's chemistry. "The attitude is a lot better than it's been in the locker room," Bryant said about the fact that for the first time in a while the team believes in itself and the players are excited to play.

Bryant also talked about what his team is going to be working on the hardest and most this season to continue winning.

"Defense and rebounding is going to be our focus," Bryant said. "If we can do those things then we'll have a chance." One difference from last season Bryant also pointed out is the fact that because of the age of his team it's "not afraid to fail."

Up next

The Cohasset Holiday Tournament will take place Thursday, Dec. 27, at the high school. West Bridgewater faces Hull in the first game at 4:30 p.m. The Skippers face Sacred Heart at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Dec. 28, the consolation and championship games will take place at the same times. Cohasset resumes its regular season schedule Friday, Jan. 4, when it hosts Harwich at 6:30 p.m.

Winter vacation has officially begun!

LIFE AT LINDEN PONDS

CHRISTINE KENT

Too bad there were no snow days or "ice days" to shorten the week, which many students struggled to complete with grace and motivation! Who can blame us? With the distraction of glistening snow just waiting for kids to play Man VS Wild, it was hard to focus on any homework assignments…oh and did I mention the fact that for some it's only a matter of days until Old Saint Nick visits?

For the seniors, the anticipation of receiving college letters proved, or rather continues to be, exciting enough amidst the holiday chaos. No worries guys, like the saying goes, "there is a school for everyone" so keep on the sunny side…and if all else fails, TRAVEL! Sorry parents, it may not be the best advice, but it's all I've got right now!

On a different note, middle school English teacher, Mr. McCabe has started a clothing drive for adult winter apparel for the homeless. Packages of new socks, jackets, hats, gloves, and any other warm garments are needed and can be dropped off in room 224 in the middle school.

Next up, a special message from the Cohasset Education Foundation: "Please check your mail for the recent annual appeal that went out to all of you from the Cohasset Education Foundation. The CEF funds projects that enhance and enrich our program. It also is building an endowment to ensure long-term support for our schools. Check out the website www.cohassetedu-cation.org and send in your donation to the CEF at PO Box 309, Cohasset, MA. Students, Parents, and alums-please Support the CEF!"

Now, it is time for the run down of the weekly events!

• Monday, Dec. 17: The girl's varsity gymnastics team flipped into enemy territory to compete against Carver.

• Tuesday, Dec. 18: National Honor Society hopefuls met in the library during lunch to discuss a possible future in NHS. Also, the boys and girls swimming team beat Silver Lake.

• Wednesday, Dec. 19: The wrestling team donned their spandex suits before facing Bristol Plymouth Voc. Tech. If the wrestling matches did not provide enough excitement for viewers than maybe the boys varsity hockey game in Carver did the trick!

• Thursday, Dec. 20: Forget the Boston Pops… the Chorus and band members were able to channel their inner superstars for the delightfully entertaining High School Winter Concert.

• Friday, Dec. 21: The last day before vacation…enough said!

Well, that's it for me this week! Have a safe and great holiday break!

SSCC Nursery School registration to start

South Shore Community Center Nursery School announces applications for the 2007-2008 school year will be available Tuesday, Jan. 2, at the Nursery School and Community Center offices. All families on the South Shore are eligible to apply. The registration process is based on a lottery system. All applications are due back to the Nursery School office by 3 p.m., on Jan. 25. Included in the envelope should be a copy of the child's birth certificate and a $100 registration fee. Application envelopes should be clearly marked Nursery School Registration. The lottery will be drawn the week of Feb. 4, and acceptance letters will be sent via mail the following week. Any child who does not get a placement in the program will have their registration fee returned.

South Shore Community Center Nursery School offers three levels of programs to meet the needs of children ages 3 to 5. The morning program is from 9 to 11:30 a.m., and the afternoon program is from 12:30 to 3 p.m. Lunch Bunch or Discovery Class is offered as an extended day program as well as various Community Center programs. The program for the youngster children, the Nursery Program is for children who will be 3 years old by Nov. 1. The Pre-Kindergarten Program is for children who will be 4 by Nov. 1. Also offered is a special Enrichment Program for those children who are older 4s and 5s who are looking for a challenging year before they enter kindergarten.

The Nursery School program's goal is to provide a happy, safe environment where children will develop trust and have a positive school experience. The children will have the opportunity to recognize their own talents and abilities and will be encouraged to approach new experiences with a spirit of enthusiasm and self-confidence. Guidelines for Preschool Learning Experiences created by the Early Childhood Advisory Council to the Massachusetts Board of Education are followed. It is based on the standards set up for the Massachusetts Curriculum Frameworks.

The Nursery School has observation mirrors in each classroom so feel free to stop in any time to see all of the things that occur in the program. For more information or to set up an appointment to meet the director, call Ann Madden at 781-383-0036. The director can also be reached by email at amadden@southshorecommunitycenter.com. South Shore Community Center Nursery School is licensed by the Massachusetts Department of Early Education and Care and is at 3 N. Main St., Cohasset Village.

Teen Center to hold dance

A dance for Cohasset youngsters in grades 6 through 8 will be held from 7 to 10 p.m., Friday, Jan. 4, at the Midnight Blue Teen Center, next to the Red Lion Inn. A student identification card will be required when signing in for the dance and no one will be admitted after 8:30 p.m. Youngsters should make sure they can gain admittance before their ride leaves, as once the center reaches capacity, no further admittance will be allowed.

The cost is $5 per person and snacks and refreshments will be available for purchase. This is not a school function. For more information, call the Recreation Commission at 781-383-4109.

Bikram Yoga classes

Cohasset Recreation Department has announced registration is underway for Bikram Yoga classes to be taught by Katrina Klein of Bikram Yoga South Shore. Klein is a national licensed master yoga teacher.

Classes for ages 7 through 13 are scheduled to begin Wednesday, Jan. 9, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., at Bikram Yoga Cohasset Studio, 380 CJC Highway, second level, west wing.

The session will be six weeks in duration, meeting each Wednesday from Jan. 6 through Feb. 13. The fee for the six-week session is $70 per participant. Those attending need to bring a mat and water to each class.

Registration may be made online at Bikramyogacohasset.com or at Cohasset Recreation Department at Town Hall.

Bikram Yoga focuses on physical flexibility, coordination and strength of mind and body. Children who practice yoga often experience increased self-esteem and are better able to cope with stress according to many studies. More detailed information is available on the Web site.

Class size is limited; early registration is advised.

Drama Kids classes available

Drama Kids is offering after-school classes for children ages 3 through 12. The Drama Kids program focuses on developing children's verbal abilities while enhancing creativity, social confidence and building self esteem. Classes take place at locations in Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham.

Call 781-749-4911 or visit dramakids.com for more information.

Lifesaving Museum vacation activity

The Hull Lifesaving Museum at 1117 Nantasket Ave., Hull, will host a drop in activity for children from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Wednesday Dec. 26 and Thursday, Dec. 27. Children can drop by the museum to make their own Hull pop-up book. The museum staff will capture the charm of the town, with pop-ups of local landmarks, such as the Lifesaving Museum, Paragon Carousel, and Boston Light. Kids can begin with the museum's template and add plenty of their own creativity. The activity is recommended for children 4 and older. A donation of $5 is suggested.

For more information, call 781-925-5433 or visit www.lifesavingmuseum.org.

New exhibit at art center

A national show, juried by Boston artist Gerry Bergstein, "Paint!" has opened at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road. Gerry selected 56 pieces from more than 600 images for the show. Among the artists whose work was selected are Boston artists Lisa Houck, Colleen Kiely, C.J. Lori, and William Tarnowski. Artists from the South Shore include Abby Zonies from Milton; Vcevy Strekalovsky, Michael Weymouth, Page Railsback, and Priscilla Seddon from Hingham; Paul Andrade from Quincy; and Richard and Kimberlee Alemian from Cohasset.

Eleven states across the country including New York and California are represented in the exhibition. The exhibition will continue through December.

In addition The Dillon Gallery will showcase the work of SSAC Gallery Artists with "Small Works," featuring artwork under 400 square inches and priced for holiday giving.

South Shore Art Center gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday and noon to 4 p.m., Sunday. For more information, visit www.ssac.org, email shannan@ssac.org or call 781-383-2787.

New Years Eve Celebration

The Hull Knights of Columbus will host a New Year's Eve Celebration at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Dec. 31, at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 440 Nantasket Ave., Hull. A roast beef dinner will be served at 8 p.m., and dance music will be provided by D.J., Gerry Connell. Tickets cost $30 per person. Everyone is welcome. For reservations, call 781-925-1712.

Mrs. Welch's class Holiday recipes

Jessica Moy concentrates on her holiday recipe.

Kalin McMahon, Olivia McAlarney-Gross, Luke Adams and Sam Fox are hard at work coming up with creative recipe ideas for the holidays.

Julia Gallagher thinks up a great recipe for hot cocoa.

Christopher Fitzsimmons has a great idea for pumpkin pie!

Well it's that time of year again. Crazy schedules, decorating, shopping and running here, there and everywhere. Of course, all of this leaves very little time for creative cooking. To make this busy holiday season just a little easier for you and your family, Derry Schwantner has compiled recipes from Mrs. Welch's kindergarten chefs in the new computer lab at Osgood School.. Students lent their talents and cooking expertise to this fabulous cookbook and each recipe was carefully typed using their exact wording. Enjoy and Happy Holidays!

Sam Hess and Reid Hosp agree it takes a lot of big thinking for all of these great recipes!

GRILLED CHEESE

Gregory Smith

All you have to have is cheese and mayonnaise.

Put some bread and cheese and mayonnaise on a plate. Then put on the other half of the bread. Cook it with an oven or with a stove. All we just do is play while it cooks. My mom makes it. The grilled cheese is cut into triangles and then we pick it up and eat it.

PASTA

Elena Marcelli

Water
Butter
Plain pasta
Shake cheese

My mom uses a pot. She stirs it I think on the stove. It cooks for I think about 20 minutes. When its done my mom puts shake cheese on it.

CHRISTMAS COOKIES

Ellery Sledesky

Dough
Chocolate chips
Sprinkles

Mix it around. Put some frosting on it and make it into a shape. Put it in the oven for maybe like an hour or tow. That's it.

HOT COCOA

Julia Gallagher

Marshmallows
Nothing else

Brown sugar in a pot for 10 minutes. Put it together with milk.

PIE

John Ford Centeio

Blueberries
Eggs
Bread

Mix it together. Put it in the oven for I think 15 minutes. The oven needs to be 40 degrees.

GINGERBREAD HOUSE

Samuel Kefallinos

Ginger
Other things and stuff

Put it in the oven before you decorate it for about 10 minutes or 20 minutes on 400 degrees or something. Put decorations on and then smash it with a hammer. That's the end of the recipe.

VEGETABLES

Lenna Pellegrini

Some corn

I cook it in the oven and I butter it for 5 minutes. I put it on a plate with a kind of special dinner like at a dinner party.

PIZZA

Luke Adams

Dough
Cheese
Maybe sauce

I think you put it in the oven for an hour and I don't know what else.

BROWNIES WITH CANDY CANES IN THEM

Madeleine Donovan

Butter
Sugar
I think flour

You mx it all together and put it in the oven for I think 10 seconds. The oven should be 30 degrees.

PUMPKIN PE

Christopher Fitzsimons

Pumpkins
Some pie crust
I forget the rest

You slice it and put it in the oven for 5 hours. Wait until its dinner time and have dinner. After dinner, you have the dessert and the dessert is the pumpkin pie. You eat it with a fork.

GINGERBREAD MEN

Samuel Fox

Ginger bread
Candy
Ginger
Some sprinkles

You cook it in the oven for 8 minutes. The oven should be kind of in the middle of hot and cold. You wait until it cools off and then you eat it, but it might be too hard because once I made a volcano out of gingerbread and it was way too hard to bite.

ORANGE JUICE

Samuel Hess

Some oranges

You squeeze the oranges into a container. Take out the orange pieces with a knife. Then drink it.

EGGNOG

Maggie Hoffman

First you crack 3 eggs. Then you put a pound of milk in it and then you stir it up. Then you put it in the oven for about 5 minutes. The oven should be like about 2 degrees. Take it out of the oven and then you just pour it into glasses.

SANDWICH

Reid Hosp

Just peanut butter
Fluff
Jelly
I guess that's it

Just put one bread down and then put fluff and anything else on it. Then you put the other bread on it. Cut it four times.

SANTA COOKIES

Olivia Mcalarney-Gross

Frosting
Sprinkles
Sugar
Flour
Vanilla
Water

Mix it all together. Put it in the bowl and then in santa cutouts. Put them in the oven for a half an hour and the oven should be just a little bit hot. When they're done cooking we put sprinkles on them and then we put frosting.

CRANBERRY SAUCE

Kalin McMahone

Cranberries

Open the can. Take it out with a fork. Sometimes I put it on a plate. Then I eat it. My mom says sometimes I can eat the whole thing because I love cranberries!

COURTESY PHOTOS/DERRY SCHWANTNER

Mrs. Welch's class puts their "thinking caps" on to come up with some great holiday recipes.

ICE CREAM

Anna Thomas

Flour
Taste of Peppermint stick
Peppermint
Little bit of water

Mix all together and then it would taste like peppermint sticks. Put it in the freezer. You serve it in a cone or a bowl.

PIZZA

Regan Thomas

Salsa
Cheese
Pepperonis
Crust

You do salsa first and then the cheese. Then put the pepperoni and then the crust. Put it in the oven for 15 minutes. The oven should be very hot. Put it on a plate or a pan and then you pick it up and eat it.

HOT CHOCOLATE

Michael Sanderson

Chocolate
Water
Crème I think
Candy canes

We just put water in a pan and put chocolate in the pan and wait for it to boil. Then my mom pours it in a mug and then we dip candy canes in it.

Business Notes

New instructors join growing Pilates studio

An explosion of interest in Pilates exercise has led Mindfull Body Works Pilates Studio in Cohasset to expand. By taking a larger space and increasing the number of instructors from one to three, MBW can accommodate more clients who are interested in Pilates equipment training.

Ann Rein

Donna Silva

There are few who take on the demanding educational requirements of equipment certification. Both Ann Rein and Donna Silva have received certifications through accredited international education programs and are qualified to teach private and semi-private equipment based lessons as well as mat classes. Each brings a unique history and style to their teaching.

Ann Rein has lived on the South Shore for most of her life, working in business and project management. She left corporate life and started a gardening business, pursued herbal studies and became a beekeeper. After suffering with low back pain for many years, and on the recommendation of her chiropractor, she started taking Pilates mat classes in 1999. Within a few months her back pain was gone. Ann's personal experience motivated her to further her own practice and teach Pilates to help others. She is certified in the classical method through the Peak Pilates program.

Donna Silva was introduced to Pilates exercise through the dance world. Donna danced, taught and lived in New York City, Seattle, Wash., and Switzerland. After enjoying a successful 15-year-span of dancing with several companies, including the Joffrey Ballet, she founded and directed Dance Academy Silva in Switzerland, training young dancers there for 13 years. She continues to teach dancers as a guest teacher in various programs and schools across the U.S. and Switzerland and is presently on the faculty of The Gold Studios, Boston Ballet and The Boston Conservatory. Her certification is in both the contemporary Stott Pilates style and the classical style through Peak Pilates.

MBW is a fully equipped, privately owned Pilates studio that offers private and semi-private partner training, and mat classes. It is located in the James Brook Crossing Shoppes center at 1 Pleasant Street. Personal training is by appointment and is available from 8 a.m. to early evening, Monday through Friday; and from 9 a.m. to noon, Saturday. For more information, contact owner, Lynn Stafford at 781-383-3256.

Pilgrim Bank welcomes Judith Cogan

Pilgrim Bank announces that Judith Cogan has joined the bank as vice president, commercial lender, as of December 2007. In this newly created position, Cogan will be responsible for expansion of Pilgrim's commercial real estate, commercial lending and business development areas. She brings several years of commercial lending experience to Pilgrim.

Pilgrim Bank is a full-service community bank based in Cohasset, providing services to residential and commercial customers throughout the South Shore.

Monkeys and tree sloths and sharks, oh my!

Fran Golden
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Golfo Dulce, Costa Rica -

It was the banana the monkey was interested in, but I couldn't take my eyes off the long fingers of her dark monkey hands as she reached for her treat.

I was holding the monkey at Canas Blancas animal sanctuary on the Golfo Dulce (Sweet Gulf) of Costa Rica, and it felt an awful lot like I was holding a toddler – I even found myself rocking the animal on my hip.

I had come here to get up close with nature and this was about as close as you can get.

My exploration of the remote Pacific coasts of Costa Rica and Panama was on the 100-passenger expedition ship Pacific Explorer.

The ship took us mostly to places where we did not encounter any other tourists – there are few roads in these parts.

But there were howler monkeys, their cry deep and threatening, and white-faced capuchin monkeys swinging from trees. We saw tree sloths that looked a lot like women's wigs, their hairy bodies high in trees; bright red macaws; toucans with bright yellow beaks and more.

We kept our binoculars always at the ready.

Aboard the ship, our routine was quickly established: Cruise mostly at night – the seas were sometimes rough and rocking in bed felt a lot better than standing – and hike during the day, with most of the treks of the easy variety.

At each stop we used inflatable Zodiak rafts to get to shore – clumsy to get into and out of at first, but by the end of the trip, throwing our legs over the side seemed routine.

Mud and wet was a factor in our exploration – not surprising since we spent a lot of time in the rainforest. The crew has developed a quirky system to deal with muddy, wet shoes: You leave them on deck where they are washed down with a hose and then taken to the engine room to dry.

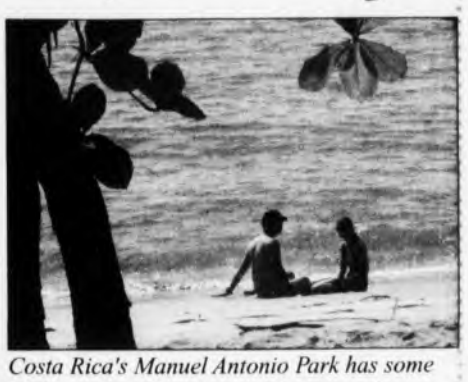
Embera children in Panama's Darien Jungle.



Simplicity works best in a place with no Internet access, no CNN, no stores or restaurants even. The one exception was Manuel Antonio National Park in Costa Rica, which has a small tourist town nearby – those of us who wanted to test our Spanish ordering cervezas (beer) walked over there after our hike.

One day, we were the only humans on a tiny island in Panama's Coiba National Park, home to the richest waters in Central America. Our naturalist guides led snorkeling tours with sightings including sea turtles and reef sharks (and tiny biting jellyfish). Kayaks were downloaded from the ship, and a friend and I paddled around the island a couple of times before settling into one of the canvas chairs the crew had set up along the pretty, sandy beach.

Later, dolphins and a pair of whales were spotted off the ship, the captain maneuvering the vessel to give everyone a view.

The most remote stop on our itinerary was in the Darien Jungle, the huge protected forest that runs from Panama to Columbia. Here we visited an Embera village where 100 people or so live a traditional rainforest lifestyle complete with huts on stilts and limited electricity – this wasn't a hokey tourist place where they turn on satellite TV when visitors leave, but the real thing (the Pacific Explorer is the only ship to visit and the villagers otherwise subsist mostly on fishing and hunting with bows and arrows).

The villagers greeted us on a beach, the women clothed only in skirts and beads; the men in loincloths. All wore tattoos. Machine gun-armed Panamanian guards patrolled nearby, keeping an eye out for drug smugglers who are known to pass through the jungle.

Costa Rica's Manuel Antonio Park has some of the prettiest beaches on the country's Pacific Coast.

The chief greeted us in Embera, which was translated by a tribe member into Spanish and then by a crew member into English.

"The community of Embera people are happy to see you arrive here," he pronounced.

Dancing ensued to live music – drums and wooden flutes – the dancers more shy than exuberant as they moved their feet to the beat, inviting passengers to join in. An impromptu market followed – with the natives selling handmade baskets and carved wood creations for U.S. dollars (the money is used mostly to support education).

And then for something completely different… Next day we found ourselves at the manmade wonder that is the Panama Canal. After visiting the excellent Miraflores Locks Visitor Center and watching a big Princess cruise ship slowly traverse the lock, we boarded a small boat, the Isla Morada, once owned by Al Capone (who used it to smuggle booze in the Great Lakes) for our own partial crossing. In a 1,000-foot lock we were lowered to the next level, watching 26 gallons of water flow into the chamber at three million gallons per minute.

It was fascinating, but my mind wandered back to the monkeys and my time away from civilization.

IF YOU go…

Cruising there: The Pacific Explorer offers nine-night itineraries, Nov. through April, between Los Suenos, Costa Rica and Colon, Panama (including a pre- or post-cruise overnight at the Courtyard by Marriott in San Jose, Costa Rica). The ship visits Manuel Antonio National Park, Caletas Beach and the Golfo Dulce in Costa Rica, and Coiba National Park, the Darien Jungle, the Panama Canal (partial crossing), Portobelo and the San Blas Islands in Panama. Cruise-only fares are from $3,799 to $5,599 per person. Two-week land/cruise packages are from $5,299 to $7,099 per person. Fares include most excursions, soft drinks (alcohol is extra). In the few cases where there are additional excursion opportunities, they are reasonably priced – for instance, a Zipline Canopy Tour offered at $55. Passengers receive an information-packed folder before each trip including a "suggested reading" list.

Wallace does his thing at the British School of Falconry in Manchester, Vt.

A day in the life of an American hawk handler

Lindsey Parietti
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

IN NEW ENGLAND

Manchester, Vt. -

Before Wallace starts his day, he has to face the scale.

If he or any of his colleagues is more than a half-ounce over their ideal weight of 2 pounds, boss Rob Waite won't let them work.

And that means a long day without flying or tasty bits of beef for these Harris hawks.

The hawk's flying weight is a measure of its motivator: hunger.

When Wallace isn't hungry, he's lazy, indifferent, and might even skip out on his job, which is mostly flying to the outstretched arms of slightly nervous and awestruck tourists.

"He's selfish, but you have to admire him for it," says Waite, who trains, exercises and hunts with the 16 hawks and two eagles that belong to the British School of Falconry in Manchester, Vt.

When the school opened here in 1995, it was the first of its kind in the U.S. to teach hawk handling and hunting (there is a sister school in Scotland). Hawks were the means of bringing home the bacon before the advent of guns.

When Waite, originally from Buckinghamshire, England, unties Wallace's leg from his glove and "casts" the sleek, powerful auburn-colored bird, he flies to the nearest perch.

Waite tells me to raise my gloved arm, signaling Wallace to return. There's no loyalty here: It's his fondness of meat, not of the falconer, that makes Wallace comply.

In an instant, he's coming in so fast that my arms and shoulders tense, instinctively bracing me for the landing.

Before I can close my eyes, Wallace lands. I only feel the sole of his bird feet as he gulps his cube of beef.

Wallace and another hawk named Elmer are constantly looking for prey, rotating their heads nearly 360 degrees to search the grassy field for pheasant and other temptations – they can spot a mouse a quarter of a mile away.

Waite throws a decoy pheasant on the ground. Elmer attacks the decoy, turning his back to Waite, protecting it with his wings and ferociously ripping out its feathers to get to the meat.

Suddenly, any urge to pet the birds' feathers disappears.

Waite points out these birds are hardly pets. "You've got to respect them," he says.

The British School of Falconry, which is affiliated with nearby resort The Equinox (800-362-4747; www.equinoxresort.com), offers introductory lessons ($89), hikes with the hawk ($149) and a hunting experience ($299).

Gates Memorial Clock to be dedicated

People traveling through North Scituate will be sure to notice the flurry of activity as a majestic 10 foot, 9 inch Verdin Company Howard Replica II double-sided clock becomes part of the new landscape at the village green.

The clock will be officially dedicated at 9:30 a.m., Saturday, Dec. 22, in memory of Lawrence "Chick" Gates. Born and raised in North Scituate, Mr. Gates was known for his deep love of Scituate and his many quiet acts of generosity. The clock will serve as a lasting tribute to Chick's unwavering care and the joy he took in serving his community. An informal gathering will be held at Chick's office at 366 Gannett Road, next to Nor'easter Surf Shop following the dedication ceremony. Breakfast fare and hot drinks will be served and everyone is invited to join Chick's family and friends in celebration of his lifelong commitment to Scituate.

Several of Chick's closest friends, including Scott Roberts, Myron Boluch and Gil Wilder, spearheaded the effort to raise the necessary funds for purchasing the naming rights to the clock; once installed, the clock will belong to the town.

"Many people have donated time and materials to this effort," said Chick's daughter, Jan Gates Yeh. "Plymouth Quarries is donating the granite stone for the plaque, the cobblestones and stone dust. Ed Duffy is donating his time, labor and expertise in picking up the materials from the quarry and working with the committee in creating the cobblestone design that will surround the clock base. Scituate Concrete Pipe donated the footing." And Yeh said that there are "so many others who helped in big and small ways."

Stop & Shop raises funds for Campaign Against Hunger

The Stop & Shop store in Cohasset demonstrated its commitment to hunger relief by raising $4,966 as part of Stop & Shop Supermarket Company's record-breaking year with Food for Friends. Stop & Shop's 18th annual Food for Friends campaign raised more than $1.24 million for over 300 local hunger relief organizations throughout the Northeast.

"We're very proud of our customers and associates," said José Alvarez, president and chief executive officer for Stop & Shop. "Not only have we been able to support food banks and hunger relief agencies across our trade area through Food for Friends, but we've been able to raise the most in the history of the program at a time when food pantries are seeing their reserves dwindle."

The funds to be donated by the Cohasset store include money raised from paper turkey sales and a matching donation from the Stop & Shop corporate office.

As part of Stop & Shop's Food for Friends campaign, each Stop & Shop store sold paper turkeys at checkout in $1, $3 and $5 denominations. The turkeys could be personalized by each customer and were displayed throughout the store. One hundred percent of the funds raised by Stop & Shop will be donated to local and regional hunger relief organizations.

"This continues to be a critical year for fundraising. With the rising costs of fuel and oil, many families have to decide whether their money will go toward food or heat, because they can't afford both," Alvarez said. "More than 12 percent of Americans live at or below the poverty level and nearly a third of them are children. This is something we can't ignore, and as one of the largest retailers in the Northeast, we're committed to help."

The funds to be donated by the Cohasset store include money raised from paper turkey sales and a matching donation from the Stop & Shop corporate office. The majority of the funds raised will go toward a local organization dedicated to feeding the hungry, with the remainder going toward state and regional food pantries. The 2007 Food for Friends campaign took place Oct. 26 through Nov. 29.

'Messiah' performed this Sunday

Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., will perform selections of Handel's "Messiah" at 10 a.m., on Sunday, Dec. 23. The choir will be accompanied by a chamber orchestra featuring Atlantic Strings and vocal soloists from the Boston area.

The public is welcome to join the congregation for this holiday tradition. Admission is free.

Good as Gold

Jewish mothers make good comedy

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESONDENT

Judy Gold in "25 Questions for a Jewish Mother" at the Calderwood Pavilion, 527 Tremont St., Boston, through Dec. 31.

Moments after arriving at a recent press conference to promote "25 Questions for a Jewish Mother," wearing a starched white apron and offering up a platter of rugelach, playwright and performer Judy Gold makes what she considers to be an important point about her latest project. According to Gold, the play, at Boston's Calderwood Pavilion now through Dec. 31, is a respectful look at Jewish mothers, which just happens to be performed by a comedienne who is often accused of doing jokes that play to stereotypes when she speaks of her own Jewish mother in her act.

"This piece is all about seeing your mother as a human being. It is based on interviews that playwright Kate Moira Ryan and I did all over the country with 50 Jewish mothers from all walks of life. This show deals with so many issues, but it is not stand-up comedy. It is a play with a beginning, middle and end and I love it so you better give me good reviews," said Gold, 45, to a room full of Boston arts writers.

An out lesbian who received two Daytime Emmy Awards for writing and producing "The Rosie O'Donnell Show" and who has also headlined her own comedy specials on HBO and Comedy Central, Gold acknowledges feeling some nervousness when it came time to speak with the more religious of her subjects.

"We started with the orthodox Jewish women in Queens and then played Jewish geography ('Do we know anyone who lives around here?') to meet the others. I was very nervous with the Orthodox women, because I'm gay. They were great, however, maybe because I am not their daughter. They were fascinating, too, because they always referred us to other women. And, whatever age they were or whatever their economic circumstances, there was always food offered, usually rugelach, in every home. And every mother talked to her children every day. One woman we spoke with told us she got up every day at 3 a.m. to call her daughter in Israel."

"I think Jewish mothers are often the butt of jokes because they are just very funny."
Judy Gold

Gold said the desire for frequent contact with their children made perfect sense given the history of the Jewish people.

"I suppose because the Jews have been kicked out of every country since the beginning of time, it is important for the mothers to know that their children are safe."

With two young children of her own, 11-year-old Henry and 6-year-old Fenn, from a now-ended nearly 20-year relationship, Gold says she has been inspired by her own mother to take a traditional approach to parenting.

"My mother really passed along her love of the Jewish traditions to me. I keep a very traditional kosher home, even though I've done nothing else traditional. I'm a gay woman with two children from artificial insemination and I make my living as a comic."

Her work on the play, which was presented off-Broadway last year, has given her new perspective, but Gold still believes Jewish mothers make good comedy.

"I think Jewish mothers are often the butt of jokes because they are just very funny. Jewish comics also feel safe enough to say whatever we want, because we know we'll always be loved by our mothers, and we'll always talk to them, no matter what."

The Huntington Theatre Company will present Judy Gold in "25 Questions for a Jewish Mother" at the Calderwood Pavilion, 527 Tremont St., Boston, through Dec. 31. For tickets and more information, visit the box office, call 617-266-0800, or go online at huntingtontheatre.org.

School vacation

SOUTH SHORE NATURAL SCIENCE CENTER, Norwell, will offer December vacation week programs on Wednesday, Dec. 26, Thursday, Dec. 27, and Friday, Dec. 28, for grades kindergarten through two, and children 3 fi to 5 years of age. Choose one session or attend all three sessions. Sessions will take place 9:30 a.m. to noon, and grouped by age. Cost per day is $30 members, $35 non-members. Register by Dec. 19. Pre-registration and prepayment required. Clever Critters is the topic for children in kindergarten through grade two. Explore the world of wildlife, and investigate a different animal group each day to discover what makes them special. Topics are: Wednesday, Dec. 26: Wolves, Coyotes and Their Canine Cousins. With large sharp eyes, alert ears and a bushy wagging tail, these "dogs" may resemble Fido, but don't bring one home as a family pet. Thursday, Dec. 27 includes: Rats and Other Rodents. Can a rat really cook like Ratatouille? No, but they are smart. Find out how smart, and visit with rat, Dunkin. Dunkin's rodent cousins – mice, beavers and the biggest of all, the capybara, will also be discussed. Friday, Dec. 28, will feature: Out Flightless Feathered Friends. What do a penguin, ostrich and a kiwi have in common? They are all birds that cannot fly. Find out what these creatures do to get around and why being flightless may not be all that bad. Dress for the weather as participants may go outside each day. Favorite Animal Authors is the topic for 3 fi- to 5-year-olds. Join Nature Center preschool teacher/naturalist Melissa Kurkoski for a Vacation Week Program of free play, art, outdoor exploration and more. Authors and their stories will come to life. Sessions include: Wednesday, Dec. 26: Animals Near and Far with Jan Brett; Thursday, Dec. 27: Creatures Under Water with Leo Lionni; and Friday, Dec. 28: Bugs All Around Us with Eric Carle. Each day will be a new adventure as animals and places near and far are discovered through stories and illustrations! Dress appropriately to go outside. For more information and to register, call South Shore Natural Science Center, 48 Jacobs Lane, Norwell, Education Department at 781-659-2559, ext 214, or view the Web site at ssnsc.org.

HULL LIFESAVING MUSEUM, 1117 Nantasket Avenue, Hull. Children's School Vacation Activity School Vacation Activity: Pop-Up Books, Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 26 and 27, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission: $5 suggested donation. Contact: Victoria Stevens, 781-925-5433. Email: lifesavingmuseum@comcast.net Pop In to make a Pop-Up Book! Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 26 and 27, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Drop by the museum between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 26 and 27, to make your own Hull Pop-Up Book. Capture all the charm of Hull with pop-ups of local landmarks, such as the Lifesaving Museum, Paragon Carousel, and Boston Light. Kids can begin with our template and add plenty of their own creativity. A great way to spend a winter afternoon. Recommended for children ages 4 and older. $5 suggested donation.

THE NORTH RIVER ARTS SOCIETY is offering the following winter classes. For information or to register, visit northriverarts.org, call 781-837-8091 or email info@northriverarts.org.

Memberships – The NRAS offers memberships with benefits including reduced class fees and the opportunity to participate in its Member's Show, Focus on Figures Show, Switch Gallery exhibits and the annual holiday art sale. In addition, members have the opportunity to be considered for the Spring Juried Show, as well as solo and group shows at the Ventress Gallery in Marshfield and the Dolphin Gallery at the Hingham Library. Governed by a Board of Directors, the NRAS awards annual $1,000 scholarships to young Marshfield artists pursuing an art degree.

Bird carving – Join Kevin Dunn to create a hand carved and painted bird from wood using knives, gouges, and/or grinding devices. This 10-week course will teach basic techniques and help the more advanced carvers improve their skills. Carving blanks provided. Students must provide their own carving knife and sandpaper. To be held from 7 to 9 p.m., Tuesdays, Feb. 12 to April 29, with no class held Feb 26 and April 1. Fee: $80 for members and $100 nonmembers. For more information, call Kevin Dunn at 781-837-3786.

The Business of Your Art – Join Liz Haywood-Sullivan for this intensive two-day workshop full of tips on how to develop your art career and/or how to manage it. The workshop will include promotion techniques, getting noticed and published, managing artwork, bookkeeping tips, pricing, galleries, competitions, and much more. Handouts included. Bring a notebook and questions. Limited to 30 participants so sign up early. Held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 26 and Sunday, Jan. 27. Fee: $80.

Everyone Can Draw and Paint – Susan F. Lynch Raffa will conduct this class, which is primarily a beginning still-life class, but all levels are welcome. Work in a simplified, controlled setting to learn the skills necessary to begin and complete a drawing and/or painting. Instruction will be provided to all students in order to build skills and use the correct tools to consistently create successful projects. Work primarily in oil from a still life. A supply list will be provided upon registration. Bring charcoal and a sketchbook. Purchase a punch card and attend the weeks that work best for you in this ongoing class held from 7 to 10 p.m., Mondays. The fee is as follows: four-week minimum punch card, $90 for members and $105 for nonmembers; five weeks, $110 for members and $130 for nonmembers; six weeks, $125 for members and $145 for nonmembers; 7 weeks, $140 for members and $160 for nonmembers; and eight weeks, $160 for members and $180 nonmembers.

Drawing for the Absolute Beginner – Andrea Favret will conduct this seven-week course designed to help the beginner gain the confidence to draw what they see. Learn to think, see and feel like an artist in this comprehensive approach to developing fine art skills. Students will be taught using a variety of exercises designed to tap into the part of the brain that speaks in a visual language. The class will start with the basics of line, shading, posture, materials and attitude in a relaxed and understandable approach to learning. The instructor will field questions to fine-tune the class to individual needs. Bring a sketchpad and drawing utensils to the first class. Additional materials will be discussed at that time. Held from 10 a.m. to noon Mondays, Jan. 28 through March 17, with no class held Feb. 18. Fee: $125 for members and $145 nonmembers.

Watercolor for the Absolute Beginner – Andrea Favret will teach how to handle equipment, proper posture and how to mix paints and color by creating your own color wheel. Attention will be focused on techniques such as making flat wash, controlled blooms, dry brush and much more. Students will watch demonstrations and will be given exercises to complete their own works of art. A materials list will be provided upon registration. This seven-week course will be held from noon to 2 p.m., Mondays, Jan. 28 through March 17, with no class held Feb. 18. Fee: $125 for members and $145 for nonmembers.

Beginning/Intermediate Watercolor – Join Mary Callahan for this seven-week course designed for all levels, which will provide the necessary fundamentals and explore the techniques of watercolor. Work from still-life setups, photos, or from your imagination. The emphasis will be on color and design, with the goal of creating an organized emotional statement. Held from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Tuesdays, Jan. 8 through Feb. 26, with no class held Feb. 19. Fee: $140 for members and $160 for nonmembers.

Oil Painting – Join Jody Regan to learn to see and paint from life in this beginning to intermediate oil painting class. Study color mixing, paint application, value, and composition of the picture space. Improve powers of observation and drawing while painting from still life and landscape in a supportive environment. This eight-week class will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Fridays, Jan. 11 through March 21, with no class held Jan. 25 and Feb.15 and 22. Fee: $160 for members and $180 for nonmembers.

Winter Landscape in the Studio – Join Sue Charles in this class where painters will work from their own photographs or ideas and explore the process of composing and producing finished landscape paintings over a period of seven weeks. Includes cropping for composition, preliminary charcoal drawings, and thumbnail color studies. Artists may work in any style and are encouraged to try new methods. The class will venture outdoors when the weather permits. Previous drawing or painting experience required. Slideshows and critiques included. Held from 9:30 to 12:30 p.m., Tuesdays, Jan. 8 through Feb. 26, with no class held Feb 19, or from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., Wednesdays, Jan. 9 through March 5, with no class held Feb 13 and 20. Fee: $140 for members and $160 for nonmembers.

Still Life in Oils: Mastering Edges – Join Margaret McWethey for this six-week class. This class will concentrate on creating dynamic edges and studying edge types and how to make them; both graduated and blended. Held from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Wednesdays, Jan. 9 through March 5, with no class held Jan. 23 and Feb. 13 and 20. Fee: $125 for members and $145 for nonmembers.

Beginning Pastels – Join Donna Rossetti Bailey to learn about pastel painting. This eight-week class, geared to beginners, will cover the basics from materials to techniques. Drawing skills will also be reviewed, along with instruction on composition. There will be plenty of one-on-one instruction in an informative and encouraging atmosphere. Held from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Thursdays, Jan. 10 through March 13, with no class held Feb. 14 and 21. Fee: $160 for members and $180 for nonmembers.

Painting a Pastel Portrait – This eight-week course, led by Margaret Farrell Bruno is an exploration of using the pastel medium to paint a portrait. The class will begin with a traditional approach to the pastel painting technique. Drawing, composition, light, shadow, and values will be emphasized, along with pastel application and capturing a likeness. As the course progresses, students will be introduced to under-painting as well as learning how the use of different papers and supports creates varying and different effects. Whenever possible, they will work from a live model, but suggestions will be made on how to create vibrant portraits from your own photographs, as well as using photographs as an aide to finishing a portrait. Held from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Mondays, Jan. 28 through March 24, with no class held Feb 18. Fee: $160 for members and $180 for nonmembers, plus a model fee when applicable.

Open Life Studio – No instructor. Working from a live model is a time-honored way to greatly improve your drawing and painting skills. Join this dedicated group and enjoy the camaraderie from 7 to 10 p.m., Thursdays. Call Coordinator Karl Nestelberger for details at 781-337-7398 or email karlnestelberger@yahoo.com.

Drop-In Knitting with Mac – Participants will all levels of knitting experience are welcome to join Mac Haran for this drop in class, which is both fun and informative. There is no charge. This ongoing program is held from 4 to 6 p.m., Wednesday, at the GAR Hall, 157 Old Main St., Marshfield Hills.

Switch Gallery – All North River Arts Society member artists are invited to sign up for the Show Two Exhibition to be held from Monday, Jan 7 to Sunday, Feb 3. Show hanging takes place at 11 a.m., Sunday, Jan 6. To be added to the list and for information, send email us to info@northriverarts.org. Switch Gallery is the NRAS member's co-op gallery and is open during regular business hours from 9:30 to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Project success

Author Lisa DiTullio keeps it simple

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"...keep your eye on what needs to get done and keep a steady pace."
— Lisa DiTullio, "Simple Solutions"

Keeping things simple amid a full-time job and a family is a difficult task. Add in speaking engagements and writing a book and the task seems almost insurmountable. But, one Cohasset mother is managing to keep all the balls in the air, stay sane and enjoy life.

Lisa DiTullio is the working mom who is balancing it all. The title of her first book "Simple Solutions" is also the key to how she does all the things she has charged herself to do. It's the blueprint to her successful career as the current director of project management at Harvard Pilgrim Health Care and the secret to her multi-tasking lifestyle.

Her self-published book is geared toward business-minded individuals looking to inject simplicity and efficiency into their businesses, whether they are large or small.

In a straightforward style, the book based on examples and case studies of the business and corporation DiTullio knows best — Harvard Pilgrim Health Care.

For 18 years, DiTullio has been an employee at Harvard Pilgrim Health Care in a variety of positions. But, it's her current job as Director of the Project Management Office at Harvard Pilgrim that gave her the basis to write her first book.

While many dream of writing a novel that will become the next must-read on the New York Times bestsellers list, DiTullio set out to write a business book based on her corporate experiences and philosophies.

For the last two years, she began speaking at corporate meetings and conferences on her strategies to keep project management uncomplicated.

"Through audience reaction to what I was saying during speaking engagements, I realized there was really a story there to tell," DiTullio says so she set out to write a book, "but, of course, I had no concept at all of what that meant," she quips. To accomplish her goal, she saw her project through from soup to nuts — writing, editing, formatting and publishing.

With the publishing of the book, she set clear goals for her end result. She wanted to become recognized as a thought leader in the project management world and attract more speaking engagements.

Last January, she began the time-consuming process of writing. With five children between the ages of 10 and 18 she leads a pretty busy lifestyle like most working mothers so finding time to devote to writing a book was a challenge.

FY 2009 numbers are on the horizon

School budget process starts

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For some the winter months mean hot chocolate by a fire, snowball fights and mountain skiing, but for all town departments winter means the budget season begins in earnest. Much like the early snowstorms New England has received, the School Committee got a jump-start on the season last week.

The school administration presented a preliminary fiscal 2009 budget of $14,358,893 that includes projected state aid numbers. The budget is a 4.9 percent increase, or $672,493, over this year's budget.

There are rumblings at the state level that there could be a revenue shortfall this year or next, said School Committee member Alfred Slanetz. As a result he would like to see the proposed budget err on the side of caution. The administration projects a one percent increase in state aid for fiscal 2009.

"I don't see state aid for education being decreased" given the state's commitment to MCAS achievement, said Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh although she agreed a state shortfall was likely in the coming years and the numbers presented were appropriately conservative.

Last Wednesday night (Dec. 19), the school administration presented a budget overview to give School Committee members a big picture vantage point before diving into the nitty-gritty of budget line items in January.

"Often time we can get caught up in the line items and lose sight of the big picture," said Walsh to open the presentation, "this is our chance to stop and assess our progress and report back to the town."

The budget overview touched on the major efforts the administration has made to streamline their operations in order to achieve a greater degree of efficiency. Walsh said the key focus for this year's budget was "operational efficiency." Principals were asked to look within their schools to identify inefficiencies and come up with solutions to maximize existing staff, materials and technology.

While efficiency was a main goal in the budget, Walsh said about 90 percent of the budget was fixed costs, including teacher and staff salaries, transportation (regular and special education), cleaning costs, contractual services and utilities.

"Those are things we don't have any control over," said Walsh.

Several indicators of progress being made throughout the school system were identified: strong MCAS scores in grade 3 reading and math and grade 6 and 8 math, significant jumps in SAT mean scores, increased participation in AP testing and progress toward proficient/advanced MCAS scores district-wide.

To begin to address areas not as strong, the proposed budget includes a math specialist shared between the two elementary schools, two new AP electives, foreign language classes for grade 6, continuation of Virtual High School program, reorganization of middle school staff to increase instructional

Vanderweil to call it a day

Koed says he will seek reelection

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I made it pretty plain to my supporters three years ago I was only running for one term."
— Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil

The 2007 election will be remembered for its last minute write-in campaigns for a seat on the School Committee, but what will go down in the history books for the 2008 election?

The election landscape will begin to take shape as early as next week when candidates can begin to pull papers, which are available Jan. 3, and start to obtain the required signatures. The town election will be held on Saturday, April 5.

Both the Board of Selectmen and the Planning Board have two seats with expiring terms, while the School Committee has one seat. The Mariner checked in with each of the committee members up for re-election this spring on those boards to see who is planning on running for re-election. However, come next week the field will be wide open and citizens longing to serve their town will have just as much as chance as any of the incumbents.

The Board of Health, Board of Assessors, Recreation Commission, Sewer Commission and Water Commission each have one seat expiring in April. Paul Pratt Memorial Library Trustees has three terms expiring. The Town Moderator and Town Clerk are up for election as well.

The Board of Selectmen will see some change following the election. The terms of current Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil and Fred Koed expire in April.

Koed will seek re-election to his fourth term on the Board of Selectmen in April, he said in a phone interview earlier this week.

Vanderweil, however, will not seek another term as a selectman. "I made it pretty plain to my supporters three years ago I was only running for one term," and time hasn't changed his mind, he said in a phone interview. Before running for Selectmen Vanderweil served on the Sewer Commission for two decades.

Over the last three years, the town and the Selectmen have tackled myriad issues from the Cook Estate to forecasting the town finances to town-wide stormwater and flooding issues.

He's quick to say all the accomplishments over the past three years have been team effort and he was only one-fifth of the team. "I don't deserve any more credit than 20 percent."

Vanderweil names better financial planning through long-range capital planning, amortization schedule and development of a financial model for the time, and development of an in-house elementary level program for children with severe special needs.

Although the school department is proposing a $14.3 million budget, Walsh said that amount only covers about 90 percent of the cost to actually run the district.

"We're having an increasing reliance on outside revenue to support the operating budget," said Walsh, adding the committee needed to acknowledge that while the school budget is increasing, the percent of town contribution is decreasing. In the fiscal 2009 forecast, 77.5 percent or $12,517,582 is coming from town taxpayers with state aid projected to make up 11.4 percent, or 1,841,311. Then, offset funds provide 11.1 percent of the district spending — close to $1.8 million — to bring the projected cost to run the district to $16,154,126.

"It's a significant increase over fiscal 2006," said Walsh, in fiscal 2006 only 8.5 percent of actual spending came from offset funds, with the town contributing 82.4 percent and the state chapter 70 aid making up nine percent.

The offset revenue has multiple components, including athletic fees, booster club funds, transportation/bus fees, use of facilities fees, state circuit breaker (special education funding), Metco reimbursement, grants and donations. Since fiscal 2006, bus fees, parking fees and athletic fees have either been instated or increased.

"We would not have made it any other way," said Walsh, "if we didn't have offsets, we'd be asking for an additional $730,639."

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said the increased fees have hurt a lot of families, "it's a very sore subject for a lot of people." While other towns may have similar high fees for athletics and parking, she said, Cohasset has a higher tax rate so families are getting hit both ways.

In order to maximize instructional time and teaching staff, surprisingly the administration is proposing two full-time teachers to be cut at the middle school level. The teaching staff will be re-allocated at the middle school to increase math lab time and foreign language studies as well as hire a math specialist for the elementary schools.

Slanetz was concerned with giving up two full-time teaching positions from the schools budget, "why don't we use that to add a grade five math teacher or to enhance the science program at Deer Hill," he said, adding instead of giving up two teachers the schools should apply the two teaching positions to move the district ahead and toward the School Committee five-year district goals, like lower class sizes.

"Changes need to happen in stages, this is the year for math," said Walsh.

The overview of the budget highlighted key points of the budget, but more in-depth school-by-school budget breakdowns will be in January. The final School Committee budget certification will be in early March.

School budget calendar for fiscal 2009

Jan. 10: Budget overview with school principals and the athletic, curriculum, special services directors.
Jan. 16: School Committee meeting
TBD: Budget summit with the town and presentation of the budget to Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee
March 5: School Committee public hearing on budget/final adoption and certification of budget.
March 6-14: Central office staff prepares Town Meeting budget materials.
March 14: Budget document ready for distribution.

POLICE BEAT

Snowball throwing is accident waiting to happen

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police Chief James Hussey said police are encouraging parents to talk to their children about the dangers of throwing snowballs at passing cars. Hussey said he believes that some kids think it is fun to try and hit a moving target, like a car, and may not realize what could occur if the driver is distracted and takes his eyes off the road, or if the snowball causes damage to the vehicle.

Last week, officers spoke with some youths following a snowball incident on Grace Drive that has been described as an ongoing problem.

"We want to counsel our adults to communicate with their children so they understand the potential harm," Hussey said.

Police will seek complaints if they find the same children they spoke to engaged in the same activity again.

Over the past week, there were several complaints reported in the police log about kids throwing snowballs. In one incident the snowball hit a windshield wiper and broke it.

Jewelry theft

A thief or thieves made off with a jar full of change and some bills totaling about $30 and 33 separate items of jewelry ranging in value from $50 to more than $1,000 last week. The Sohier Street homeowner reported the theft after seeing the change jar missing in the kitchen and then discovering the missing jewelry. Detectives are investigating. There was no sign of a break-in. The family was out most of the day. Police believe the theft occurred sometime between 7 a.m. and 6:30 p.m., Wednesday (Dec. 19).

MV crashes

• A 2002 Audi, owned and operated by a Cohasset resident, went into a skid when it tried to drive around a parked UPS truck and slid sideways into the rear of the truck that was parked on Jerusalem Road near N. Main Street last Thursday (Dec. 20) at about 1:30 p.m. The driver's side of the Audi sustained some damage. A tow truck had to pull the car out of the snow, but it was drivable, Chief Hussey said. No one was cited and there were no injuries.

• Two vehicles merging on 3A just past the Beechwood Street intersection made contact resulting in the mirror of the 2002 Dodge, owned and operated by a Hull resident, being clipped by the wheel of a semi-trailer truck. The mirror was broken. The truck driver and motorist both called police, who assisted them with the paperwork.

• An off-duty officer observed a hit and run accident on 3A at Pond Street and followed the blue Chevy, stopping it near Beechwood Street. Further investigation revealed the operator, a 45-year-old Scituate, woman was operating under the influence of alcohol. She was charged with OUI and also with leaving the scene after causing property damage and negligent operation of a motor vehicle. Police said she struck the rear of a car that was on 3A waiting to turn left onto Pond Street and then drove off.

Cabinets gone

Police are investigating a report of missing kitchen cabinets from a barn they had been stored in. When the owner went to retrieve the cabinets, they were gone. It is unclear when they went missing because they had been in storage for quite some time, Chief Hussey said.

Identity theft

A woman notified police that she believes her former boyfriend has access to her Jet Blue mileage points and is using them for a trip on the airline. Detectives are investigating, Chief Hussey said.

Suspended license

A man who was driving a yellow Ferrari without permission was arrested after police received a tip that his license was suspended. Police arrested the 47-year-old man, who was a caretaker and lived in an apartment on the property where the owner of the car lives, for operating on a suspended license and driving a motor vehicle without authority. The man, who owns the Ferrari, was out of state, police said.

After the tip came in, an officer saw the yellow Ferrari on S. Main Street, stopped it and asked for the operator's license. The operator did not have a valid license, he was taken into custody and the car was towed.

Warrant arrest

A man was arrested on a warrant Sunday following a report from a caller that she was missing some valuable belongings. Police responded to White Head Road and ran a computer check on the 57-year-old South Boston resident that revealed he had a warrant out of South Boston Court for larceny over $250. The man was arrested on the warrant. The caller was relocating to the residence when she discovered the missing items, police said. The man was a friend of the caretaker arrested in an unrelated incident last week for driving the Ferrari without permission, police said.

Annoying calls

Police called the number on the caller ID of a resident who told the officers about receiving numerous annoying phone calls from Colorado. Chief Hussey said the officer left a message on the Colorado number that if the calls continued, the authorities in Colorado would be contacted. Since that warning, the calls have stopped, Hussey said. He explained that the resident thinks the person making the annoying calls had him confused with someone else.

Parking lot

A 2005 Toyota Sequoia parked at Stop & Shop was struck and damaged by an unidentified vehicle last week. The caller told police she had just came out after doing her grocery shopping and saw that someone had hit her car and left the scene. The video surveillance cameras were not operating at that time, police said. There was obvious damage to the Toyota. The incident occurred at about 6:50 p.m. on Monday (Dec. 17).

Internet chat

A woman whose ex-boyfriend made threats during an internet chat with her was advised that she could seek a restraining order at Quincy District Court, police said. If she does not, then police will warn the ex-boyfriend that if this type of activity continues, it could lead to court action. Police have a copy of his online remarks.

Post cap

Police are investigating the loss of a plastic, fence post cap valued at $200. The report came in at about 6:15 p.m. on Saturday (Dec. 22) from a King Street resident.

Snowman

A motorist, who backed into a snowman statue at a local hardware store, is going to pay for the damage, police said. The incident occurred on Monday (Dec. 17). Police said the store provided a plate number and police contacted the motorist who did not realize the mishap had caused damage.

Parking ban

No all-night parking is allowed on any street in Cohasset from Nov. 15th-April 1st per the town's traffic rules and orders.

town will make a difference in the town for years to come. The Selectmen also worked to re-structure fees so the revenue was more in balance with the cost.

The creation of active Selectmen-appointed committees, like the Housing Partnership Committee, the Harbor Health Committee and the Stormwater Committee are also high on his list of undertakings over the last three years.

"I think I'm leaving the board in good hands. The Board is very effective right now," said Vanderweil.

— Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil

Planning Board

Two Planning Board seats, one for a three-year term and one for a five-year term, will expire in April. The seats are currently held by Bob Sturdy and Bill Good.

Good was appointed to the Planning Board in May to fill the remainder of the year on Peter Pratt's term. Pratt stepped down from his position on the Planning Board in late April. Good made it clear from the get-go he would not seek to be elected in 2008.

"I'm thrilled to have had the opportunity to participate during the last year," said Good, naming the approval of development of Old Colony Square shopping plaza next to the MBTA station and the passage of the village zoning bylaws as two highlights.

"There is an opportunity for a more thriving village economy as a result of new zoning bylaws that will pay off for years to come," he said.

Good was appointed to the Board in May largely because of his previous 15-year experience as a Planning Board member and the knowledge that came with that.

"I can't imagine someone coming in and not having that," said Good. As a result, he'd like to see someone with a broad base of experience in town government, particularly with planning, land use, zoning, affordable housing —"all the issues that are constantly in front of the Planning Board."

Good will not disappear from the face of town politics; he plans be a part of the re-activated Design Review Board. The Design Review Board was active in the past in assisting and advising the Planning Board in a variety of ways, but had fallen off the map over the past few years.

Long-time Planning Board member Bob Sturdy could not be reached for comment. However, board chairman Al Moore has said at recent meetings that Sturdy does not plan to run for reelection. Sturdy will complete 25 years on the board in April.

School Committee

School Committee member Alfred Slanetz is the only member of the five-person committee up for re-election in April.

"Definitely, I'm running," he said in a phone interview with no hesitation. Over the last three years, Slanetz has seen a lot of positive change in the schools and the School Committee, including development of a five-year plan with specific measures and goals as well as increased financial accountability.

"When I came on the board every year we were cutting teachers (to balance the budget) and that was unacceptable," said Slanetz, "now, we know where the money is being spent."

Figuring out where the school needed to go and how to get there was also a big accomplishment, "we have definitions of what is excellence and in some measures we're making progress," he said. With measurable headway being made, Slanetz's doesn't want to leave the job half finished.

"I'd like to see our five-year plan to the end and make Cohasset one of the top 10 districts in the state," he said, "all of the kids deserve the best education they can get and the town deserves a school system to can provide that."

Although Slanetz has children at the elementary level with a lot more schooling ahead of them, he said his motivation for being involved on the School Committee extends to a philosophical level, "I'm a big believer in education."

Nomination papers available Jan. 3

Nomination papers for the Annual Town Election for 2008 will be available on Thursday, January 3, 2008 at the Town Clerk's Office. The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 14.

In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. It is important to note that you are not running for office until you take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures.

Positions available for the 2008 town election include: Selectmen — two for three-year positions; Moderator — one three-year position; Town Clerk – one three-years position; School Committee — one three-year position; Trustees Paul Pratt Memorial Library – three three-year positions; Assessor—one three-year position; Board of Health — one three-year position; Planning Board — one for five-year position and one three-year position (to fill an unexpired term); Recreation Commission – one five-year position; Sewer Commission–one three-year position; and Water Commission — one three-year position.

Friday, March 7, 2008 is the last day for voters to register for the Annual Town Meeting held on Saturday, March 29, 2008 and for the Annual Town Election to be held on Saturday, April 5, 2008.

SSCC Nursery School registration starts Jan. 2

South Shore Community Center Nursery School announces applications for the 2007-2008 school year will be available Tuesday, Jan. 2, at the Nursery School and Community Center offices. All families on the South Shore are eligible to apply. The registration process is based on a lottery system. All applications are due back to the Nursery School office by 3 p.m., on Jan. 25. Included in the envelope should be a copy of the child's birth certificate and a $100 registration fee. Application envelopes should be clearly marked Nursery School Registration. The lottery will be drawn the week of Feb. 4, and acceptance letters will be sent via mail the following week. Any child who does not get a placement in the program will have their registration fee returned.

South Shore Community Center Nursery School offers three levels of programs to meet the needs of children ages 3 to 5. The morning program is from 9 to 11:30 a.m., and the afternoon program is from 12:30 to 3 p.m. Lunch Bunch or Discovery Class is offered as an extended day program as well as various Community Center programs. The program for the youngster children, the Nursery Program is for children who will be 3 years old by Nov. 1. The Pre-Kindergarten Program is for children who will be 4 by Nov. 1. Also offered is a special Enrichment Program for those children who are older 4s and 5s who are looking for a challenging year before they enter kindergarten.

The Nursery School program's goal is to provide a happy, safe environment where children will develop trust and have a positive school experience. The children will have the opportunity to recognize their own talents and abilities and will be encouraged to approach new experiences with a spirit of enthusiasm and self-confidence. Guidelines for Preschool Learning Experiences created by the Early Childhood Advisory Council to the Massachusetts Board of Education are followed. It is based on the standards set up for the Massachusetts Curriculum Frameworks.

The Nursery School has observation mirrors in each classroom so feel free to stop in any time to see all of the things that occur in the program.

For more information or to set up an appointment to meet the director, call Ann Madden at 781-383-0036. The director can also be reached by email at: amadden@southshorecommunitycenter.com.

South Shore Community Center Nursery School is licensed by the Massachusetts Department of Early Education and Care and is at 3 N. Main St., Cohasset Village.

Land Conservation Trust calendars to benefit Weir River Estuary

The Hull Land Conservation Trust has published two calendars featuring the beauty of the Weir River Estuary. Links to the calendars and information about the trust can be found at www.HullLandConservationTrust.org. Each purchase includes a contribution to the Hull Land Conservation Trust.

The Weir River Estuary 2008 Calendar features the scenic beauty of the Weir River Estuary as seen from Hingham, Cohasset, and Hull. The calendar features information including where to put in a kayak, how to identify the estuary's rare volcanic rocks, and why the estuary is important for fish and birds. The calendar cover shows the Hull Land Conservation Trust's 2008 priority properties, the new Chatham Street entrance to the Weir River Woods and the western edge of Straits Pond.

The Weir River Estuary 2008 Calendar features the scenic beauty of the Weir River Estuary as seen from Hingham, Cohasset, and Hull.

The Sun and Moon 2008 Calendar also features pictures of harbor and beach sunsets and moonrises, as seen from Hull. Each photo is unique to its month: The March sunset is an example of cirrostratus fibratus clouds. The sky rain shown in April is known as virga. The May calendar shows how the sun sets behind Boston's Prudential Center, as seen from Hull on May 6 of each year. The number 11 in the September Boston skyline photo occurred at sunset on Sept. 11, 2004. As seen in the photo taken the Saturday after Thanksgiving, 2007, the full moon rises as the sun sets, pulling the tide out. The December sunset happened on Christmas Day, 2004.

You can also find the calendars by putting "Weir River Estuary" into the search at www.lulu.com.

Custom calendars with your own special photo are also available by emailing Judeth Van Hamm at one@hullportside.net or by calling 781-925-5665. Also contact Judeth for a gift card to say a calendar is on its way.

"The philosophy I talk about in the book, I applied to this project," she explains. By dividing it into smaller, manageable chunks she says she was able to make significant headway in a matter of months. She carved out time to work on the book by going into her quiet office in Quincy to write on Saturdays.

Although she says she was never one who loved to write, a bout of writer's block never hit her, "it poured out, I never was sitting at a blank computer screen."

In addition, she was fortunate to have both an understanding husband and children, "I made it clear this was something I really wanted to do and no one ever made me feel guilty because of my choices," she says. She dedicates the book to her family and her parents.

As an added bonus, she says her children were able to see just how much they could accomplish, if they set their mind to something.

In the short span of four months, DiTullio finished the first draft of her book, then spent the next two months editing.

"The hardest thing is knowing when to be done," especially for a self-described perfectionist like herself but, following the methods set forth in her book, she had set a firm deadline for the book to be complete. She wanted to have it ready and available at a November Project Management conference in Anaheim, California. With a week to spare, her books were available for purchase at the conference — they sold out within the first day and a half of the weeklong conference.

DiTullio says people gravitate toward her philosophy of keeping it simple, "some of the things I write about are so obvious but so often people need to be reminded to keep it simple."

The book outlines a step-by-step process to project management, "business is complex no matter what the industry," says DiTullio, her book outlines how a business, no matter what the size or trade, can introduce successful project management. By maintaining a simple recipe, with simple requirements and standards in place, the project leaders do not burden the team with complexity. A chapter is devoted to how to build cohesive project teams in today's corporate world.

"Some of the things I write about are so obvious but so often people need to be reminded to keep it simple."

— Lisa DiTullio, "Simple Solutions"

"All business needs teamwork," she says, but building a successful team for a short-term project can be a challenging. DiTullio outlines efforts a corporation or project manager can take to build a productive team that will both do the project well and on time.

Believe it or not, DiTullio is already thinking about writing another book about how her project management philosophies can come out of the boardroom and into day-to-day life.

"Business and life can be overcomplicated and run at high warp speed, my approach is to give (readers) simple reminders to keep things simple to maintain sanity and get it done," she says, "keep your eye on what needs to get done and keep a steady pace."

"My life is very full, very rich, very busy," she attests, "whatever is embedded in book is what I live by. I apply it to my day-to-day life and I still manage to have fun doing it."

"Simple Solutions" is available in hardcover and paperback online at Barnes and Noble, Amazon and at any bookstore by-request. To find out more about Lisa DiTullio visit www.lisaditullio.com.

Larson twins have arrived!

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Hey Cohasset, Happy New Year! I hope that everyone has had a wonderful Holiday Vacation week so far and continue to enjoy it into the year of 2008! Due to the wonderful week of holidays, kids being home from school and so many who have time off from work, the news is a bit sparse to share but that is ok! I will share with you what I have and look ahead to a year filled with positive and fun-filled news along with additions, weddings and school news galore.

TWINS!

Congratulations go out to Matthew and Elisabeth Larson who are the proud parents of twins born on Dec. 15, 2007. Chloe Elisabeth Larson was born at 12:30 pm weighing in at 5 pounds 15 ounces and was followed shortly thereafter by her brother Max Roar Larson at 12:33 pm weighing in at 6 pounds 1 ounce. Both babies are in excellent health and are now at home with their parents. Max and Chloe are the grandchildren of the proud grandparents Mary and Don Larson of Cohasset and Bob and Maggie Gill of Weston, Mass. Enjoy these wonderful new little ones!

CYBSA SIGNUPS

The Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Association (CYBSA) will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball spring season ONLINE through Feb. 1. Parents/Guardians can complete the registration process by visiting the website: CYBSA.net. The CYBSA will also provide a one-day, walk- in registration on Saturday, Jan. 26. Please visit the website for more details.

TREE PICKUP

This year's Christmas Tree Drive will be held on Jan. 5, sponsored by Cohasset Middle School Student Council and the PSO. Christmas trees will be picked up and taken away for $20 ($15 for seniors) between the hours of 10 a.m. and 1p.m. To have your tree picked up, please call: 781383-2492 and leave a message with your name, address, and phone number. On Jan. 5, leave your tree at the end of your driveway with a check made out to Cohasset Middle School. Thank you for your support! Questions or to volunteer to help (the pickup neesd a few trucks!) please call Wendy Erler 383-0141.

TEEN CENTER DANCE

A dance for Cohasset youngsters in grades 6 through 8 will be held from 7 to 10 p.m., Friday, Jan. 4, at the Midnight Blue Teen Center, next to the Red Lion Inn. A student identification card will be required when signing in for the dance and no one will be admitted after 8:30 p.m. Youngsters should make sure they can gain admittance before their ride leaves, as once the center reaches capacity, no further admittance will be allowed.

The cost is $5 per person and snacks and refreshments will be available for purchase. This is not a school function. For more information, call the Recreation Commission at 781-383-4109.

BIKRAM YOGA

Registration is underway for Bikram Yoga classes to be taught by Katrina Klein of Bikram Yoga South Shore. Katrina is a national licensed master yoga teacher. Classes for ages 7 through 13 are scheduled to begin Wednesday, Jan. 9, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., at Bikram Yoga Cohasset Studio, 380 CJC Highway, second level, west wing.

The session will be six weeks; the fee is $70. Register online at Bikramyogacohasset.com or at the Recreation Department at Town Hall.

That is the news for this week. Please send in all of your news to share by email or mail.

Volunteers key to popularity of Girl Scouts

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Girl scouting is alive and well in Cohasset.

Two hundred girls, from kindergarten to high school, registered for girl scouts in Cohasset this fall. Four recent high school graduates earned their Girl Scout Gold Awards, the highest honor in the organization, this past year. Nearly every month the town's girl scouts of all ages come together for a town-wide event - the popular Halloween party, the mother/daughter tea and father/daughter social, to name a few.

This year, every girl who registered could be placed in a troop — an accomplishment Cohasset Girl Scout coordinator Lillian Curley says was no small feat.

"If we didn't have the adult volunteers, we wouldn't have Girl Scouts," says Curley. Five new leaders and mothers stepped forward to lead troops this fall, as well as returning veterans. Curley and her co-leader Liz Richardson have been with their current troop, which includes high school freshmen and sophomores, since they were Daisy girl scouts in kindergarten. The troop has lost some numbers, but a small group of motivated teens still attend bi-weekly meetings. Most of the girls are aiming to complete their requirements of the Gold Award before the end of their junior year.

Although not much will change on a local level for the Cohasset girl-scouting program, the greater Girl Scouts Patriots' Trail Council, which incorporates 65 communities in and surrounding Boston, will merge with two other Massachusetts councils in February. As of Feb. 1, 2008, the Patriots' Trail Council will cease to exist and the Eastern Massachusetts Council involving nearly 50,000 girl scouts will take its place, says Curley.

Curley has been Cohasset's delegate to the council realignment meetings. In the first week of December, she along with delegates from area towns, voted to approve the realignment.

Council realignments are happening all over the US as part of the Girl Scout USA's new business strategy to revitalize the Girl Scout movement, according to their website.

Camping, cookies and the outdoors are and always will be a part of girl scouts, but keeping the organization fresh and relevant for a new generation involves constant change.

"Girl scouts made a huge difference in my life, some of my best memories of childhood is with girl scouts," says Curley.

Curley and Richardson grew up together and were in the same Girl Scout troop from first grade into high school. They decided to be troop leaders so they could give their daughters the same opportunities they had growing up.

"It teaches them to work together as girls," says Richardson, "they get beyond personality conflicts and cliques."

Keeping girls interested in girl scouts in middle school and high school has been a challenge, says Curley. Kids are so busy and have myriad activities available to them often girl scouts doesn't top the list, she says. Mixing traditional Girl Scout activities, like camping, with more modern activities, like shopping and having lunch out has kept girl scouts from becoming a chore for the high school aged girl scouts. The community service and leadership opportunities being a Girl Scout allows have also kept many of the girls involved through high school.

"In the crazy world we live in, Girl Scouts gives them some balance and teaches them to be true to themselves," says Curley and of her troop, "I think they are proud of their accomplishments."

The oldest girls now run the majority of their own meetings and organize some of the town-wide Girl Scout events, including the popular Halloween party and the father/daughter social both held at the Deer Hill gymnasium. "Even if a girl is only a part of a troop for two years, they usually get something out of it," says Richardson.

The biggest challenge right now in Cohasset is finding troop leaders for the girls of all ages.

"My hope and goal is to have every girl who want s to register can be a part of troop. We need parents to come forward to be leaders," says Curley. Volunteer troop leaders are given training provided by the district council, as well as support with activities. New leaders can always consult seasoned troop leaders for advice and guidance, says Curley.

"The scouting program as a whole in Cohasset is great," says Curley, "the parents have been unbelievable."

In September, the Cohasset Girl Scouts got together at the Black Rock Country Club in Hingham for a mother/daughter tea. A clown provided hilarious entertainment for the youngest Girl Scouts. The tea is just one of the annual events put on the Cohasset Girl Scouts.

Cookie sale starts Jan. 3

Last year, Last year, current Caty Gilman of Cohasset troop 4775 was the town's top cookie seller with 357 boxes. Over a period of two weeks, she pounded the streets near her home to knocking on doors to sell the cookies.

She begins again with a clean slate when the Girl Scouts commence their cookie selling campaign on Jan. 3. The sale of the famous cookies generates revenue for the local troops and district council to support quality Girl Scout programs, according to their website.

"I try to at least pass 100 boxes," says Caty, but each year her eyes are on the prize, literally. At major landmark cookie sales, 100, 200, 300 — even 1000 — Girl Scouts are given prizes for their sales. Prizes begin with selling just 12 boxes. This year, Caty notes if a girl scout is able to sell 1000 boxes, she will be awarded a coveted iPod music player.

While the majority of the money raised through Girl Scout cookie sales goes to the regional Girl Scout council to maintain campsites, fund training for adult volunteers and special programs, the individual troop benefits as well.

Caty Gilman of Cohasset Troop 4775, who was last year's top seller, is getting ready for the annual Girl Scout cookie sale that starts Jan. 3.

"With half the money we do things for ourselves, and the other half we do things for someone else," says Caty. In the last year, they have sent letters and supplies to soldiers in Iraq, donated books, collected food pantry items and visited homeless shelters. They also use the money to go on unique camping trips, like last year's sleepover at Plimoth Plantation.

"It's a great confidence builder, you have to be very professional and polite," says Beth Marsden-Gilman, Caty's mother. While selling cookies, girls from across the council are learning life skills including: leadership, entrepreneurship, decision making, goal-setting, business skills and money management, according to the Girl Scouts' website.

For Caty, it's just a fun experience that leads to more fun experiences in Girl Scouts.

Look for Girl Scouts knocking on your door between Jan. 3 and 28. They'll be having booth sales outside local supermarkets January through mid-March.

Thin Mints remain the most popular cookie across the nation, but Caramel deLites and Peanut Butter Patties are also favorites. This year all varieties of Girl Scout cookies will be zero trans fat, in compliance with US FDA guidelines. Cinna-Spins, a new variety, are five 100-calorie single serving packs for those diet conscious consumers. All varieties are $4 per box.

The Cookie Sale is Girl Scouting's single largest program activity and the public's most recognizable image of Girl Scouting. All registered Brownie and Junior Girl Scouts and all Girl Scouts 11-17 are eligible to participate in the annual sale.

Did you know that half of all college graduates transfer from their first school?

But at Dean College, we prepare them for it.

Your student has taken the first step in pursuing a college degree only to find the chosen school may not necessarily be the right fit. Maybe the right college fit is closer to home than you think.

Why not try Dean? Transfer preparation and helping students make the initial college adjustment are our top priorities.

With Dean's rolling admissions process, this is still a good time to apply for the Spring 2008 term.

Traveling igloos

Editor's note: This week we are recycling this editorial from 2005. It is worth repeating judging by the number of "traveling igloos" we have seen over the past two weeks.

We're not sure if it's a nationwide problem or unique to New England.

But why do so many motorists drive with snow all over their cars?

Could it be many houses don't have garages? Could it be those that do are so cluttered the family car is parked outside? Could it be laziness?

We admit to being totally perplexed about this and there isn't a great deal written about the practice.

Granted the recent snowstorms during the holiday season when we were all stressed were events that put even self-proclaimed "snow lovers" near the edge. They may be considering becoming "snow birds" by looking in the travel pages for a warm oasis.

In addition to cabin fever, those fans of winter — like the rest of us — have been coping with tons of snow to remove from walkways and driveways and the potential of no-school days for children that aren't always a vacation for working parents.

But there are SUVs out there that cost upwards of $60,000 whose owners are driving them around with nary a peephole to see the outside world and upwards of a foot on snow on the hood and roof. We have news for them: anti-lock brakes and four-wheel drive aren't going to protect you or the motorists and pedestrians around you if you can't see out the windows.

Flying snow and ice can also hit another vehicle causing that motorist to crash.

It's just commonsense: lack of visibility and huge pieces of ice and hardened snow flying through the air are safety hazards. Even light, powdery snow coming off a car or truck causes a fog-like condition for other vehicles.

One Internet Web site put it best. According to Car Talk's Official Winter Driving Tips at: www.cartalk.com: "You need visibility in poor conditions, because you have to keep your eye peeled for every other knucklehead on the road."

Tom and Ray Magliozzi of Cambridge (a.k.a. "Click and Clack, the Tappet Brothers"), who also host a talk show on National Public Radio member stations, offer these suggestions:

"Make sure every glass surface is clear and transparent using a snow brush and/or ice scraper. Your side-view mirrors and all lights should be brushed and cleared as well.

"Now if you haven't been smart enough to do so already, clean the snow off the rest of the car. Why? Because the rest of the snow will either (a) slide off the roof and cover your windshield as you're slowing down; or (b) fly off onto someone else's windshield and cause him or her to smash into you."

So let's not see any more traveling igloos out there — they know who they are!

If those drivers are not going to listen, then we hope they take the following advice.

Among myriad other winter driving tips ranging from tune ups to keeping windshield wipers in good shape, the Magliozzi brothers also add this: "Our best tip is still this: move to Hawaii!"

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Board of Health, Jan. 9, 7 p.m.

CMHS School Council, Jan. 2 and Feb. 6, 2:30 p.m., Room 116 at the high school.

Conservation Commission, Jan. 3, 7 p.m.

Planning Board, Jan. 9, 7p.m.

Selectmen, Jan. 7, 7 p.m.

Sewer Commission, Jan. 7, 6 p.m.

Water Commission, Jan. 5, 10:15 a.m. at the King St. plant.

Zoning Board of Appeals, Jan. 8, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

Register to vote for Presidential Primary

The Governor signed legislation on Monday, Nov. 26, to move the date of the Presidential Primary to Tuesday, Feb. 5, 2008. The last day to register to vote will be Wednesday, Jan. 16. Registration will take place at the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a Town Meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If people move, they may register to vote as soon as they move into a new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each Town Meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If people register during a closed period, they will be eligible to vote only in later Town Meetings or elections.

HEALTH NOTES

Small injuries need attention

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

From one who is nursing three burns, seven minor cuts and scratches on his hands and is afraid to look at his shins, it's time to write an article on the health implications of becoming diverted. Holidays seem to be the time to think about something else, and unless you are very focused, it's done at some peril. However, the real peril is thinking the small injury will go away. How many have said "Oh gosh! It needs a Band-Aid, but I don't have time now" – wrong! Minor cuts, scrapes and burns can easily become infected if not cleaned and dressed properly.

Burns: To treat a burn, it needs to be cooled immediately. Use a cloth soaked in cool water or place it under running cold water. Keep it in the water for up to 10 minutes, if necessary. This is the single most effective way to help the pain of a burn. If no skin is broken and no blister appears, it's OK to leave it open. Do not pop blisters or pull the skin away from a broken blister. Cover the blister. We'll say how later.

Cuts and Scrapes: A cut may result in a lot of bleeding, or very little. Clean the wound with soap and water. Minor cuts and scrapes usually stop bleeding on their own. If not, the edges of a cut can be held together by using a butterfly bandage. A puncture wound, where a sharp narrow object goes through the skin, often does not bleed much. Allowing a minor puncture wound to stop bleeding on its own may help clean the wound out. Simply cover a minor puncture wound with a bandage.

Minor cuts, scrapes and burns can easily become infected if not cleaned and dressed properly.

Remember, these tips are for minor cuts. Seek medical attention if: a wound will not stop bleeding, the injury is near your eye or ear or if it's associated with a dirty or rusty object. Also, see a doctor if your last tetanus shot was more than 10 years ago or if signs of infection are present, such as redness, fever or severe pain.

Stop the bleeding, clean the wound, disinfect and cover the wound.

Antibiotics and bandages can do the job, but there's now a better way.

Should you have a liquid bandage product in your first aid kit?

Once the wound is disinfected and closed, liquid bandages are better, faster, more convenient and effective than Band-Aids. As a trial horse for treatment of minor cuts, etc., I can testify that the liquid bandage beats Band-Aids, no contest. Many companies make a liquid bandage product that requires just one application. They also offer a gel-based product that can fill in and protect skin cracks. The liquid or gel barrier keeps out dirt and germs that can help prevent infection. Moreover, although it may sting slightly during application, the spray-on type disinfects along with providing surface protection.

Scientific tests have conclusively proved that FDA-approved medical grade adhesives used in some spray on or liquid bandages heal wounds as rapidly as wounds under conventional bandages. No statistical differences were observed between the number of completely healed wounds or speed of healing between liquid and fabric bandaging systems. The major differences favoring the liquid bandages were ease of application and stopping bleeding.

Using liquid bandage

Using a liquid bandage product will usually not cause any major discomfort. Some bandages have a sticky feel, but they are nearly invisible and, unlike Band-Aids, require no removal procedures after healing other than washing with soap and water. Serious cuts require medical treatment, so don't use a liquid bandage product in those cases. If you can't seek medical treatment immediately following a more severe cut, you should use cloth bandages or whatever else you have in hand rather than a liquid bandage product. And be sure to read all the instructions.

Caution: Liquid bandages are new on the market and problems are sure to arise, but considering the benefits, they are worth a real look. What they won't do is reduce the results of distraction or inattention.

Unsafe ice on Lily Pond this winter

There will be no winter activity on Lily Pond this winter. To reduce the amount of discolored tap water in the distribution system, the Water Department has installed a system of aeration tubes in Lily Pond. The units create a steady stream of tiny bubbles that rise to the surface of the water.

"This aeration system will make all of the ice on Lily Pond unsafe for any winter activity on the ice this year," said Glenn A. Pratt, chairman of the Water Commission. "We may not need to run the aeration system every winter, so this may not be a permanent situation."

Because of the unsafe ice, warnings will be posted and the police will enforce the ban on any winter activity on Lily Pond. The Water Department has discussed this with the Recreation Department, Police Department, Town Manager and Fire Department so all affected town agencies are working together to ensure a safe winter.

The bubbles will add oxygen to the pond water helping to reduce some of the iron and manganese that is dissolved in the pond water, which should help to reduce discolored water in the water distribution system. The aeration system will also improve the ecological state of the pond, according to the Water Department.

Signs are being placed around Lily Pond to warn people from walking on the ice. The Water Department activated the system Dec. 15.

Who is Cohasset's top citizen?

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

This year's recipient will be the 15th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year.

In keeping with an 15-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Roger Whitley as Citizen of the Year. Whitley, a retired architect, former Advisory Committee member, and Paul Pratt Library Trustee, who has spent much time over his 50 years as a Cohasset resident "involved." That involvement has not stopped at Town Hall or at the library. He is active at First Parish Church, once led the Rusty Skippers (town band) as its drum major, and joined the Peace Corps with his wife, Kitty, after the kids were grown and off on their own.

The deadline for nominations for the 2007 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Feb. 1. Please see the nomination form on page 5. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Letters of nomination by email to mford@cnc.com are also welcome.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the Citizen of the Year.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the15th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

1993: Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset": for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

1994: Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

1995: Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

1996: The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

1997: Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

1998: Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

1999: Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

2000: former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader, and then as selectman. She was also honored for her public service as state representative for more than two decades and for always putting her constituents first.

2001: Glenn Pratt for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and spearheading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

2002: Arthur Lehr for more than 50 years of volunteer service on worthwhile projects including the Boy Scouts; serving on the Zoning Board of Appeals and as a Registrar of Voters; Clerk of the Works for the DPW garage, Little League Complex, and Mariners Park; serving on the Recycling Committee, as town Civil Defense Director, on Gravel Pit Reuse Committee and more.

2003: Marjorie Murphy for touching countless lives through her roughly 25 years as school librarian at Deer Hill. With eyes that twinkle and an infectious smile, Mrs. Murphy devoted her life to helping children discover the wonders of reading and the value of a good book.

2004: John Coe, a WWII veteran, for all his volunteer service at the Senior Center where he helps make the center a warm place where people come and meet friends; for his work quietly behind the scenes helping fellow citizens and his service as the "beloved Town Crier" every year at the Village Fair.

2005: Marjorie "Margie" Steele, who is the "heart and soul of the Cohasset Food Pantry," for her energy and long-time commitment to the important service, which has helped countless people in need over the years.

2006: Roger Whitley, a retired architect, former Advisory Committee member, and Paul Pratt Library Trustee, who has spent much time over his 50 years as a Cohasset resident "involved."

Radar patrols on Mass Pike

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Many years ago, when I was working for my Uncle and living at his expense in a gated community in Cherry Point, North Carolina, a bunch of us guys used to hop in a car on weekends and drive to Washington, D. C., to visit the museums and listen to the lectures and do other things.

Sometimes the other things delayed our departure until the wee hours of Monday morning and we had to hustle to drive the 200-or-so miles back to our gated community before they closed the gates and ran out of chipped beef on a shingle for breakfast and guys with armbands fanned out to retrieve the stragglers.

The problem was a certain suburb of Petersburg, Virginia, known as, if I recall correctly, Colonial Heights.

I'm not sure if enough people lived in Colonial Heights to field a baseball team but they had a police department that patrolled Route 1 through town with the enthusiasm of a father riding herd on a daughter who has just reached puberty.

Nor did I know the tax rate of Colonial Heights, or even if they had one, the amount of money changing hands between police and speeders on Route 1 being enough, I suspect, to cover the municipal budget. It was my guess that a speeder was one doing 31 miles an hour. Remember, this was 60 years ago.

Colonial Heights came to mind last week when I learned that state troopers patrolling the Massachusetts Turnpike have been ordered to fire up their radar guns and ticket more speeders inside Route 128 since receipts from speeding fines have slumped to only $1.7 million this year.

The order to ticket unwary speeders on the pike was issued, said spokesman Mac Daniel, because revenue from fines had dropped off by $600,000 since the troopers who usually wrote them up had to be deployed elsewhere to make the Big Dig tunnels safer after a ceiling became unglued and collapsed, killing a woman.

At least the pike people are giving us a warning, which is more than we get for most speed traps. And they're apologizing, too. Well, sort of.

"It's extremely unfortunate the Big Dig has drained the Turnpike's resources to such an extent that this method of balancing the books is even on the table for debate," Mary Connaughton, a member of the board, told the Herald.

Add a hefty speeding fine to tolls that are scheduled to rise the first of the year and soon it will require a small bank loan to visit that maiden aunt in the Berkshires next summer.

Not that it matters to me. I gave up driving a car several years ago and my friend who chauffeurs me on long journeys, like a trip to Chelsea, is no more enamored of tolls and speed traps than I, and she's never even been to Colonial Heights, as far as I know.

Let's see now, does Route 9 go all the way to the Berkshires?

The Bachelor Diet

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

I'm quite aware that the blame for my expanding waistline must be laid squarely on my wife's shoulders. She's the one who introduced me to decent food.

Maintaining a healthy weight isn't the no-brainer for me that it once was. It's a major brainer now, and I'm not certain I'm equipped to handle it. Obviously I'm not alone — two or three trips to BJs are all it takes to figure that out. Something has changed in the wider society. Have you seen a photo album from the 60s or 70s lately? Everybody looked like a total dweeb, and it wasn't just the terrible hair and loud slacks. They were all scrawny and British-looking by today's standards. Relatives we once considered grotesquely overweight look pretty hot now, I'll be honest.

But my weight problem is not society's problem. I'm quite aware that the blame for my expanding waistline must be laid squarely on my wife's shoulders. She's the one who introduced me to decent food. Before we met I'd never heard of yellow pepper risotto, warm spinach salads, chicken Marsala, rack of lamb... Will you excuse me? I'm suddenly in the mood for leftover beef tenderloin.

Ah, that's better. Do you see the problem, though? Do you see how she took an innocent bachelor and corrupted him forever with all her fancy stews, her home made merlot-infused Bolognese sauces, and, uh... Excuse me again.

Yes. Now, I never meant to marry an excellent cook. It's just something that happened. I'm not proud of it, but as an honorable man I'm not renouncing my vows this late in the game. I promised to love and cherish and devour everything she sautéed. I'm pretty sure that's how it went. But acting with this kind of fidelity comes at a price: the obligation to get off my duff and sign up for a gym membership every December.

Instead of that, this year I've decided to help others lose weight by writing a book called The Bachelor Diet. So far it contains two recipes, and I'm pretty sure I can come up with at least one more. Here's a free preview, exclusive to Mariner subscribers:

Wheaties and Milk

Pour 3 1/2 cups of Wheaties into a bowl. Cupping your hand, push Wheaties that have overflowed the bowl off the table and back into Wheaties box. Add 1-1/3 cups milk. Push newly-overflowed Wheaties/milk combo off table and back into Wheaties box. Eat by rounded spoonfuls. Drink remaining milk from bowl, dribbling two teaspoons onto shirt collar. Press right-hand shirt sleeve against wet collar. Wheatie belch optional. Calories: 150.

Angel Hair Pasta

Fill a 3-quart saucepan with water, place over high heat and cover. Lean back against opposite counter and think about bras. After two minutes, uncover. Small air bubbles appearing at bottom of saucepan indicate water has reached a mere 130 degrees, but stubbornly add 2 pounds of angel hair pasta anyway. Cover. Become distracted by a televised sport, preferably football, although Texas Hold'em will do in a pinch. When pot inevitably yet unexpectedly overflows, yell "Aaa!" and pat pat pat the stove top dry with a dish rag. Scald hand with sopped up boiling water. Yell again. Stir pasta.

Leaving pot uncovered, alternate attending to pasta and watching televised sport, being sure to chisel pasta fused to bottom of pot each time you return to stove. Smell smoke in the steam, and wonder how it is possible to scorch and blacken something that is completely under water. Allow anywhere between 8 and 30 minutes to pass, depending on the frequency, duration, and quality of commercial breaks.

Place a clean colander in sink. Recall that you are a bachelor, and therefore neither own a colander nor even know that is the name for one of those bowl-shaped sieve thingies. Instead, cover saucepan and lift from stove. Carefully holding the cover with your left hand and the pot handle with your right, dump all the pasta into the garbage disposal. Let stand for one minute while you grit your teeth and make a noise similar to that of a hungry, crying person. Stare at the black rubber flange between you and your pasta, then at the cupboard, the TV room, and back again at the flange. Think how relatively clean the garbage disposal was, in theory, before you dumped all your pasta into it. Pull hanks of congealed angel hair pasta from the disposal, halfheartedly rinsing them before placing them in your bowl. Fetch jar of pasta sauce from refrigerator and pour over cold pasta. Microwave at high power for two minutes. Hear crowd noise rising from the TV room and remove bowl from microwave after only 15 seconds have elapsed. Add far too much Parmesan cheese. Stir cold sauce and cheese into cold pasta and eat about half before realizing you've lost your appetite. Calories: 150

There's never been a better time to publish this diet book than the week after Christmas, when so many weak souls are tempted by leftover mashed potatoes, lasagna, apple pies, caramelized... uh, would you excuse me for a week or two?

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, around which he plans to run three times per week very very soon, pushing a turkey and a spiral-cut ham in a double jogger.

LIBRARY CORNER

Movie 'To Catch a Thief' airs Jan. 4

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Library Book Group – The group will not meet in December. Instead, the group will meet after the holidays at 10 a.m., on Jan. 30, to discuss Diane Setterfield's book "The Thirteenth Tale."

Movie Matinee – Can't get out at night to see a movie? Come to a free showing of the film "To Catch a Thief" starring Cary Grant and Grace Kelly at 11 a.m., on Friday, Jan. 4. Free admission and light refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library. Movie site license sponsored by the Friends of the Library and Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

Basic Genealogy and Family History – Meet professional genealogist Michael Brophy at 7 p.m., on Thursday, Jan. 31. He will discuss how to research family roots, organize findings and explore record sources. This is an opportunity for budding or experienced genealogists. Register for this free event either online, by telephone or in person at the library. Sponsored by Friends of the Library.

FOR CHILDREN

Children's Author to Visit – On Friday, Jan. 18, from 3:45 to 4:45 p.m., local author Randy Houk will preview her soon to be released children's book, "In Wheelwright Park Don't Bite, Don't Bark," a true story about teaching dogs to respect each other while enjoying Wheelwright Park. Houk is well known for her work with the Humane Society of the United States. "Chessie, the Travelin' Man" and "Jasmine," two of her true rescue stories, can be found in the Children's Room. This event is for caregivers and children age 5 and older. Registration is required and children must be accompanied by an adult. To register, go online to cohassetlibrary.org, click on Calendar, find Jan. 18, and click on Register.

MamaSteph is Back – MamaSteph will perform in the Meeting Room on Monday mornings in January from 10:30 to 11. This is a lap sit program. To ensure the safety and the enjoyment of all participants, children will need to be with their caregivers at all times. All ages and communities welcome. Funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library. Doors will close promptly at 10:35 a.m.

Drop In Story Time – Story Time will take place in the Story Room Monday mornings from 10:30 to 11 during the month of January. Join others for big book adventures, music and movement. All ages and communities welcome.

Afternoon Story and Craft – There are still a few spaces available in the afternoon Story and Craft program. Story and Craft is for Cohasset residents age 3 through 6, is a four-week commitment and requires pre-registration. Each week a theme is explored through literature, music and craft. Online registration is available by going to cohassetlibrary.org, click on Calendar, find Jan. 10, and click on register.

BRIEFLY

Dickens Christmas

Our Town is offering an end-of-the-year special with Roving Reporter Rich Ofsthun heading south for the Dickens Christmas event in Scituate.

The show then goes on to highlight two big 2007 happenings for Cohasset: the Beechwood Ballfield dedication and the coming of the Greenbush Train line. Wrapping up this special one-hour show is a performance by Cohasset's very own Gr8fls playing the Sea Note. Tune in Monday at 9pm on Comcast channel 10.

Christmas tree drive

The Cohasset Middle School Student Council and PSO Christmas Tree Drive 2008 will be held Saturday, Jan. 5. Holiday trees can be picked up and taken away at the cost of $20 per tree. The cost for tree pick-up for senior citizens is $15. To arrange pick-up, call 781-383-2492 by 8 p.m., Friday, Jan. 4, and leave a message with your address, phone number and any special instructions. Make your check out to Cohasset Middle School and attach it to your tree. Trees will be picked up from the end of driveways between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 5.

Victorian Christmas decorations adorn the branches of a Christmas tree at the Cohasset Historical Society's Wassail party that included music and refreshments.

Historical Society tradition celebrates the season

A holiday wreath welcomes guests to the Cohasset Historical Society's annual Wassail Party Dec. 9 at the Pratt Building, 105 S. Main St.

Harpist Rachel Eisenhaure provides holiday music as guests enjoy the Cohasset Historical Society's traditional Wassail Party at the Pratt Building earlier this month.

The historic Pratt Building featured Victorian-era decorations for the Cohasset Historical Society's annual Wassail Party. Invitations were extended to members, guests and the public to join in the festivities.

Guests flock to the Cohasset Historical Society's Annual Wassail Party held at the Pratt Building Food, beverages and the traditional Wassail were served, and musical entertainment added to the occasion.

Glenn Pratt smiles as he was awarded Volunteer of the Year 2007 by the Cohasset Historical Society's President Kathleen O'Malley at the annual Wassail Party held at the Pratt Building, 105 S. Main St. Pratt was also given a framed photo that included historical photos of the building.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help in your own community.

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 16 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Cohasset Mariner in supporting the Social Service League of Cohasset in their efforts to help those in need this holiday season. A donation of any size goes a long way.

Please make your tax deductible check or money order payable to:

Wrestlers ready for tourney

Skippers look to get back on winning track

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

Records can be a bit deceiving at times. The Cohasset High wrestling team will head into the Marshfield Tournament with 3-8 overall record, 1-0 in the May Shore League, but the young Skippers have faced some stiff competition.

Take Saturday's tournament at Lynnfield. Cohasset traveled to the north shore to go up against the host school, as well as Wilmington and Wakefield. All three are very strong Division 3 teams and all three senior laden squads utilized their experience against the Skippers.

Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney took this tournament on 15 years ago, but after taking many years off, decided to rejoin the group for some quality early season competition.

"We are young but next year we should have a good opportunity to win one of those," he said after Cohasset lost all three matches in the tournament.

Jack Murphy (125-pounds), Mike Froio (160) and Stephen Hurlbut (215) won all three of their matches while David Toomey (145) won both of his matches. Froio won all three of his matches in overtime to stay undefeated on the season at 8-0.

"He split time on the varsity last year and I expect him to do very well this season," Sweeney said. "He wrestles six minutes hard every time which very few kids can do—he wont get beat on conditioning."

Murphy improved to 7-3 on the season while Toomey went to 7-2 overall.

Hurlbut won all of his matches by pin and improved to an impressive 10-1 overall on the season.

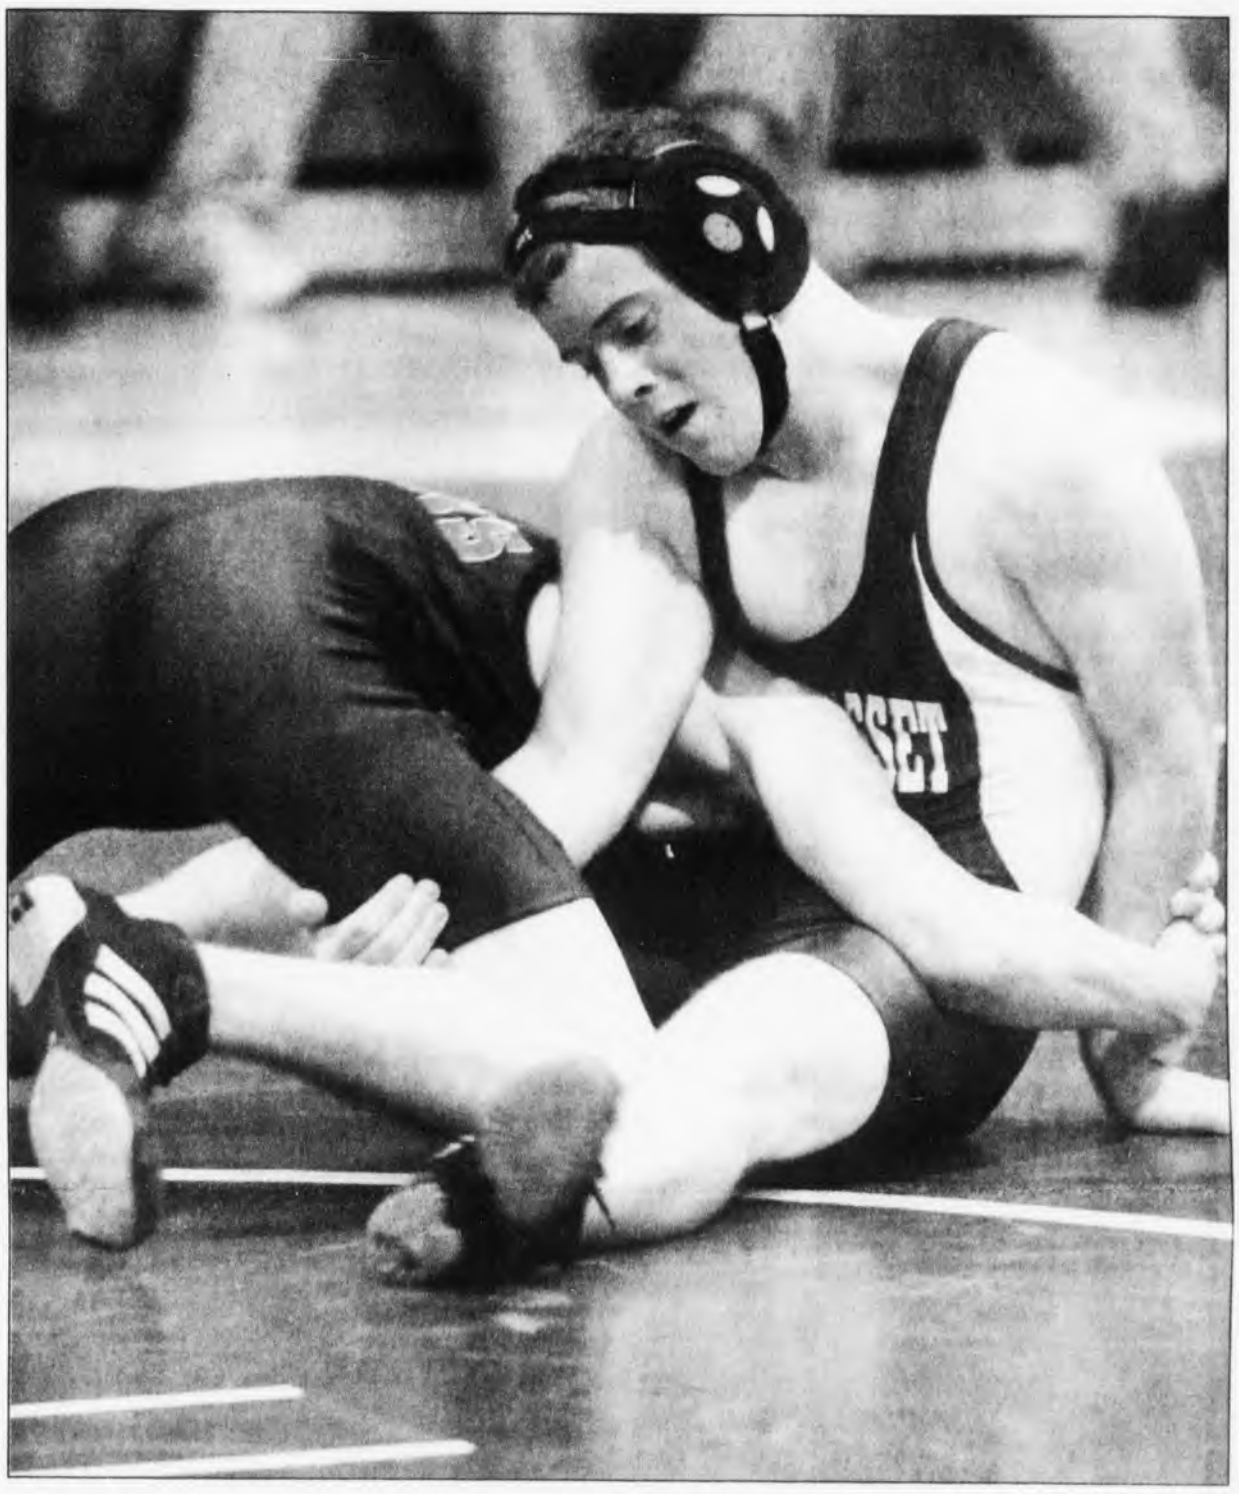
The Skippers nailed down their first league win of the season with a 36-30 win against an improved Bristol-Plymouth team.

Matt Dooley (103), Murphy, Rudy Helboch (119) and Hurlbut, all had pins in the May Shore League contest.

"I was very pleased," Sweeney said. "Bristol Plymouth is much improved and we really wanted to win our first league match."

Up next

Thursday, Dec. 27, and Friday, Dec. 28, the boys take part in the Marshfield Holiday Tournament at Marshfield High School. Competition begins at 10 a.m. Thursday and noon Friday.



"We will have our hands full but it will be a great experience for the guys," said Sweeney about the holiday tournament.

Saturday, Jan. 5, the team travels to Braintree to take on St. John's Prep, Bridgewater-Raynham and the host school. Competition begins at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 9, the boys travel to Norwell to face the Clippers at 3:30 p.m.

Cohasset returns home Saturday, Jan. 12, to take part in its Invitational Tournament. Competition begins at 10 a.m.

The hometown rules of wrestling

By Kelsey Abbruzzese
CORRESPONDENT

Torin Sweeney, Cohasset High School's wrestling coach for nearly 25 years, has been a staple in the town's wrestling culture since he attended high school there.

Don't argue with Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney about the rules of wrestling.

"He knows the rulebook like he wrote it and if there's any call that's questionably not right, he turns into a fire-breathing dragon," said Michele Hubley, the mother of one of Sweeney's state champion wrestlers. "If you were watching from the sidelines and couldn't hear him, you would think the man had been possessed and needed exorcism. And you know what? He's right and they [the refs] know it."

During matches, Sweeney crouches on the side of the mat, taking advantage of the connection between athlete and coach during matches that is unique to wrestling. He carries himself like the wrestler he was at Cohasset High School: broad-shouldered, blond-haired, and pacing slowly around the mat in between matches. There is control and restraint on his face until the timer pauses the match and then he is up, gesturing and demonstrating moves on his assistant coach and talking his athlete through what he can do to win. As soon as the whistle blows for a break during the match, the wrestler's head immediately turns toward Sweeney.

Sweeney, who has coached Cohasset wrestling for nearly 25 years, acknowledged that his persona on the mat differs from his style outside the gym, at home or teaching physical education and health in Cohasset.

"I'm very much a practical joker and carefree. At work, we laugh all the time, but certainly

Sixth grade boys hoop wrap up

Cohasset's sixth grade boys travel basketball team lined up to do battle against neighboring Hull, Friday night at home in another close contest that went down to the wire. Known for their toughness and talent, Hull never fails to play hard from start to finish and this night was no different.

A well balanced game on both ends of the court, this match-up showcased the depth on both benches. A terrific team effort by both clubs kept this game within a few points either way for the entire 28 minutes of play.

Cohasset won 23-20 bringing its record to 2-2.

Zach Coggins displayed a wonderful touch to lead the team in scoring with a half-dozen points. He had all great shots from the perimeter, and showed excellent decision making for this big-time playmaker.

Joe Buckley never let up with a tenacious attack on both sides of the ball. Buckley showcased excellent hustle and is a beast on the boards. Complementing Joe at forward is another big gun, Mark Brown.

Mark made some clutch baskets down low and from the foul line along with coming up and down with some timely rebounds. More big man moves came from Mark Rattenbury who came up with some nice lay-ups from close range off some hard fought rebounds to score four points.

Jack Stanganelli continues to enhance his game with great decisions on defense and excellent position play and Connor Green made a nice bucket off the glass to keep the game close, as well as playing some stingy defense.

At the half, Hull led by a pair but Cohasset came out firing in the third quarter leading to a 6-0 run that put the home-team ahead. But Hull wouldn't let this game get away they fought back hard with some great jump shots and good fouling shooting.

Brendan O'Connell showed great ball control serving some nice dishes to his wingmen along with terrific hustle all night. Jack Conte played great against the press and denied the opponent any easy attempts at the hoop.

Back and forth, both teams matched each other point for point, right down to the last minute and that's when things tightened up.

Timmy Cavanaro was matched up against Hull's big man in the middle late in the game with the score tied 18-18 and Hull with the possession. The plan was to get the ball in the middle for the go–ahead points, but Cavanaro had another plan in mind getting two clutch steals to get the ball to Cohasset's money man Rocco Laugelle.

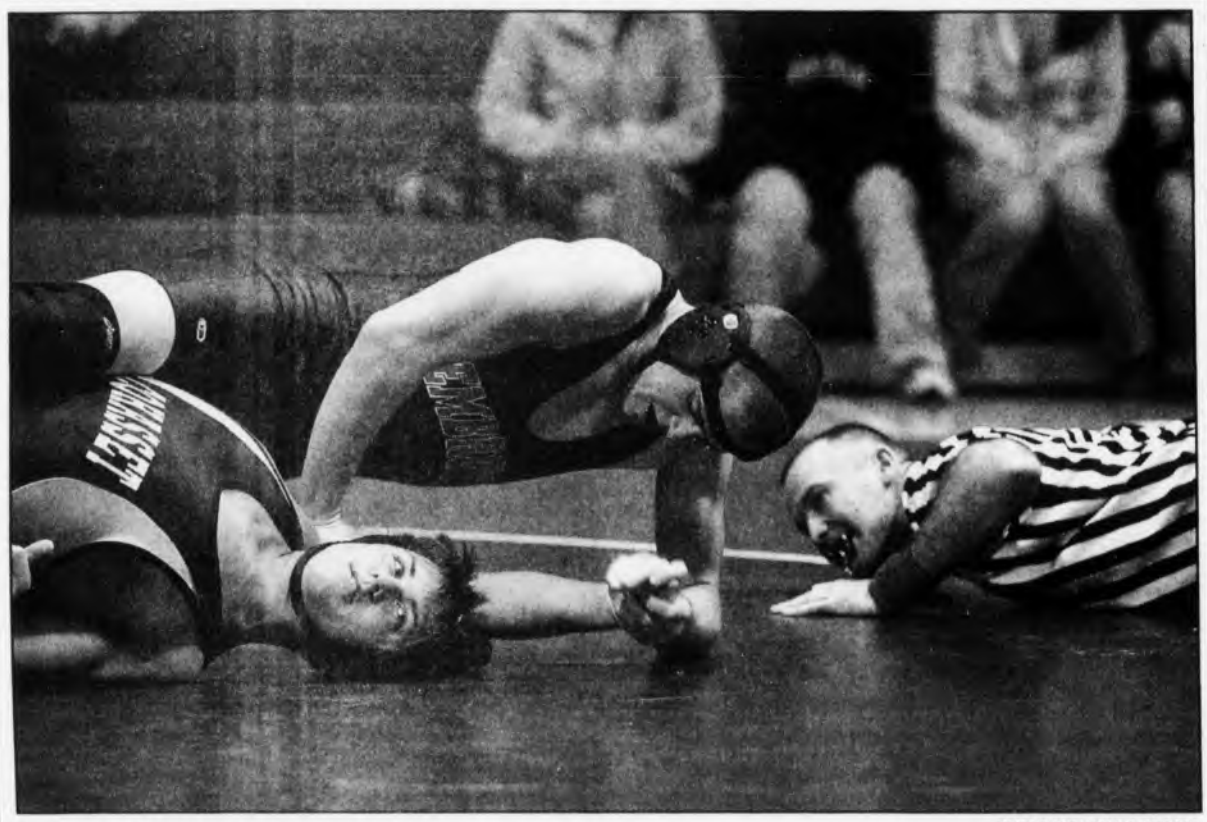
Rocco would convert the key turnovers into points while booking a few trips to the foul line along the way. The capacity crowd witnessed some excellent finish work by Master Laugelle and the home team.

CYBSA launches new online registration

The Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Association (CYBSA) will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball spring season online beginning December 21, 2007 through February 1, 2008. Parents/Guardians can complete the registration process by visiting our website: CYBSA.net

The registration process will be closed on February 1, 2008. Registrations that are completed after February 1, 2008 will be charged a $50 per player late fee and late registrants will only be placed on a team if space permits, on a first come-first serve basis. The late fee will be strictly enforced, and there is no guarantee that late registered players will be accommodated, as uniform orders and other season plans will be made on February 1. Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order equipment and uniforms so that we are ready for opening day.

Please be advised that returning players already assigned to a Major League team are still required to register.



The CYBSA will also provide a one day walk- in registration on Saturday, January 26, 2008. Please visit our website for details.

Skippers skate to second victory

The Cohasset High hockey team defeated Abington/East Bridgewater 1-0, Saturday, at Pilgrim Arena in Hingham en route to its second victory of the season. The boys are now 2-1 overall and 2-0 in South Shore League play.

Jonny Wade received the game puck after turning away 52 shots in the game to preserve the shutout in net. Brendan Doonan scored the game's only goal. Pat Doonan and Charlie Czerkawski got the assist.

Cohasset opened the season with a 5-2 win against Carver and followed up with a 5-1 loss against Mansfield.

The hometown rules of wrestling

my competitive spirit gets involved. I have so much invested in the kids. There's so much time invested in practice that when you get to those meets, you want things to go according to plan," Sweeney said.

Sweeney's knowledge of the sport comes from a lifetime in the wrestling world. Back when he started coaching, two years after graduating from Cohasset, he was coaching former classmates. Now, at 43, he has the 2005 Division 3 state championship under his belt, was named the 2005 MIAA Division 3 Coach of the Year, and continues to act as, according to Hubley, "attorney for the defense supreme" when it comes to his wrestlers.

"[Cohasset] couldn't find a coach, so they were going to drop the program," Sweeney said. "I said, 'Well, I'll do it, just don't drop the program.'"

"Now, some of the guys I wrestled with, their kids are coming up," he added.

Sweeney's wrestling experience dates back to his days as a kid himself. As a high school sophomore, he made it to the state tournament. He won the Southeast title his junior year and then placed second as a senior. After high school, Sweeney simultaneously earned his degree in physical education and coaching at the University of Massachusetts-Boston and coached Cohasset's wrestling crop.

For Sweeney, the hard work, energy and competitiveness he displayed in college were qualities that appeared as early as eight, during pickup football games with his older brother, Shawn, and Shawn's friends.

"He and his friend Jordan Hoy always used to be the last ones picked, so we made them one person and called them 'the flying circus,'" said Jim Porter, a Cohasset native and childhood friend of Shawn Sweeney. "They were four years younger and couldn't do anything, so they just sort of ran around."

"We always knew he was tough and always tried really, really hard despite his size," Porter added. "And he stood up for himself. He didn't back down."

Sweeney expects the same from his wrestlers. Both Hubley and Jack DeLorenzo, Cohasset's former assistant principal, cite Sweeney's ability to demand the best from his wrestlers while being involved in their lives outside the sport. Hubley's son, Nick Cambi, the 2007 most valuable wrestler for the Mayflower-South Shore conference and now a wrestler at Roger Williams University, remembers what happened when he didn't complete a move that would have prevented his opponent from gaining an escape.

'[Sweeney] yelled, 'Nicky, do you want everyone to think you have a stupid coach?'" Cambi said.

"Everybody laughed," Hubley said. "We thought his head was going to come off his body."

"He'll get into matches unlike other coaches, who sit in the corner and watch," Cambi said. "He's more upbeat during the match. He's very competitive."

After spending 19 years as Cohasset's assistant principal and one year as principal, DeLorenzo saw the less fiery side of Sweeney.

"The most impressive thing to me was his banquets," DeLorenzo said. "He talked about every single kid as if they were state champions."

"He understood that it's a high school sport and there are so many other things kids are responsible for, pressures they're under. He always took that into consideration," DeLorenzo added. "Kids will get into trouble discipline-wise and coaches will try to get them to be eligible, but he was extremely supportive because he said education and discipline come first."

During the 2005 season, Sweeney said there were several times when he had to act as more of a counselor than a coach, due to two of this top wrestlers having behavioral problems. Cohasset held off rival Foxborough to clinch that title, after Foxborough made a late run to trim a 20-point Cohasset lead to eight points. After wins by Shane Dorian, David McKenna and Joe Kehoe, the team solidified its victory by a 12.5 point margin.

"It was a trying year. It wasn't your typical wire-to-wire championship where everything went perfectly smooth," he said.

Sweeney said this year's team is younger than the 2005 squad, but he still expects the same level of dedication and competition that he asked of his wrestlers for many years.

"I'm fair but I set the bar extremely high," Sweeney said. "I don't allow a kid to give a second-tier effort. I only accept their best effort. If they lose, fine. But sometimes I can get kids to do better than they thought and that's something I take a lot of pride in."

"It's almost like your own child," he said later. "You see them sweat all week long. When you start to coach them, you know how much of their heart and soul is into it."

Sweeney has two of his own children, Daniel, 4, and Olivia, 6, with wife Becky. When asked if he would encourage Daniel to wrestle, Sweeney responded that his son would have to want it.

"It's such a grueling and intense sport. It's gut-wrenching. I don't want to put my kid through that if he doesn't want to do it," he said. "If their hearts are not in it, just forget about it. Why even bother? You might get away with that in other sports, but in wrestling, you can't get away with kind of trying hard."

Out on the mat, with every flaw exposed, wrestlers experience much of, as Sweeney puts it, "the agony of defeat." With every pause, though, their heads still swivel toward Sweeney for guidance. Fire-breathing dragon or not, he still knows a wrestler's vulnerability as he walks off the mat.

"He never is anything but constructively positive in even of worst of losses," Hubley said. "He teaches them discipline and is tough on them but shows them how to win. It gives them something to get through this long season."

Caribbean capers: family fun in the sun

Christine Loomis
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Beneath the sea is a vivid world where hiders and hunters play out an aquatic dance of life. On the surface, blue-green water connects diverse cultures on islands spread across thousands of miles, thick with bougainvillea and ringed with sand in shades of pink, gold, black, and white.

This is the Caribbean, North America's tropical playground of balmy waters and sweet beaches, cool pools and open-air restaurants. Yet each island is unique in its culture and landscape. Some islands are French or Dutch or Spanish; some are mountainous and tree-covered, others flat and sandy.

The Caribbean isn't one destination, it's many, and it's loaded with family-friendly resorts offering the best of all worlds — as much time together as you want, time apart if you wish, family activities, discoveries just for kids. Here are six family-loving resorts on six different islands with everything you need to stay and play.

On St. Croix, the largest U.S. Virgin Island at about 80 square miles, the must-see is Buck Island Reef National Monument. The must-stay is The Buccaneer, 340 acres, three beaches, and 138 guest rooms in a setting that exudes casual elegance. Owned and run by the Armstrong family for generations, the Buccaneer is anything but chain-like. There are lodging options (I love the Doubloon rooms near Mermaid beach), multiple restaurants, and a complimentary Kids Camp for ages four to 12. Don't miss the weekly crab races, an enduring — and endearing — Buccaneer tradition.

Decades before "eco-tourism" was a catch phrase, Maho Bay Camps, inside Virgin Islands National Park on St. John, was all about the environment and affordable paradise. Snorkeling and diving there are excellent, as are diverse art and craft classes. The resort's "Cottage" tents, community buildings and pristine beach are connected by walkways and many steps (parents of toddlers take note), but this isn't roughing it; tents have comfy beds and everything from linens to cookware. As low-key as St. John itself, Maho Bay is for families whose idea of glitz and nightlife are stars and the sound of the sea.

Several airlines fly non-stop from Boston to Puerto Rico where the coolest activity is an evening kayak tour of a bioluminescent bay—picture a million fireflies going for a swim. El Conquistador Resort & Golden Door Spa, 31 miles from San Juan, is huge - 984 rooms (recently renovated), 22 restaurants, and a private island. Now there's a new water park with a massive main pool, four slides and a lazy river. Camp Coqui is for ages four to 12; family programs include guided eco-tours of mystical El Yunque Rain Forest and mom/daughter hand-and-feet spa treatments.

For the friendliest people and fabulous hiking it's St. Lucia, one of my favorite islands. Almond Smugglers Cove opened in 2007, an all-inclusive specializing in personalized service. The 357-room resort has five pools, four restaurants, and a spa, and it sits on a cove with black and white sand. It also has Almond's chain-wide Kids Club for newborns to teens. Discover St. Lucia's British heritage at "high tea" each afternoon.

In Jamaica, climbing Dunn's River Falls is a must-do. But families will find a lot of other activities at the Holiday Inn SunSpree Resort Montego Bay, which sits on a half-mile of beach. Each oceanfront family suite boasts a private Jacuzzi. Families mingle at the resort's beach parties and dive-in movies (at the pool). The KidSpree Vacation Club is complementary for ages six months to 12 years. The 524-room hotel is full service (except there's no room service) but also all-inclusive, meaning no surprise bill at checkout for dozens of a la carte offerings.

Curacao is my son's favorite island, no contest. The ostrich farm and Dolphin Academy are memorable for him, but so is meandering through multi-hued Willemstad with its pontoon bridge and eclectic shops. Located by the Sea Aquarium on 1,500 feet of fine snorkeling beach, "super inclusive" Breezes Curacao (premium drinks are included) has every activity imaginable plus circus workshops and ice skating - yes ice skating - on an artificial rink. Kids Club is for infants through age 12 and there's a Teen Center.

Meet and Greet at Anthony's Key Resort

Best Activity

Dolphin Anthony's Key is a tiny Caribbean islet just off Roatan, which itself is 35 miles off the coast of Honduras. Laid-back Anthony's Key Resort there spreads across a steep hillside, acres of beachfront and palm trees, aqua lagoons, the little islet and Bailey's Key, where the resort's dolphin adventures take place under the auspices of the Roatan Institute for Marine Sciences. It was in the lagoon at Bailey's Key that I first met Dee Dee.

Standing in waist-deep water, my daughter Kira and I joined two other guests and four bottlenose dolphins, including the exuberant Dee Dee, for a Dolphin Beach Encounter (one of several dolphin experiences at Anthony's Key). The Beach Encounter doesn't require snorkel gear or even swimming, making it ideal for everyone from young children to grandparents. Kira was 20, but playing with dolphins brought out the kid in her, right down to giggling, mugging for the camera, and being sad when it was all over.

The program is a mix of interesting information about dolphins and demonstrations of their behaviors and skills. Spectacular leaps provide the best photo ops, but there's something humbling and powerful about looking into the eyes of a dolphin and recognizing a deep intelligence. As we left Dee Dee I wondered who really learns the most when humans and dolphins come together.

Flash forward a couple of years. My son and I arrive for a session at the Dolphin Academy on Curacao, and who's there but Dee Dee, flown in from Roatan to help start a new program at Curacao's Sea Aquarium. She didn't remember me — or did she? — but it still felt like seeing an old friend.

Snowmobilers come from all over to experience "The Country" in Maine.

Exploring 'The County' in Maine

Tim Jones
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

IN NEW ENGLAND

Aroostook County, Maine -

Tell your friends that you are on your way to Aroostook County for a getaway, and what you'll probably get is a puzzled look and the question, "Why?"

But after a couple days of world-class cross-country skiing or snowmobiling you are most likely to answer, "Why not?"

Known simply as "The County," Aroostook is located in the upper right-hand corner not only of the state of Maine, but also of the entire U.S. Next stop, Canada.

It's the largest county in land area east of the Mississippi, covering 6,829 square miles. But fewer than 75,000 people live there.

That leaves a lot of empty space to play.

Winter is the big tourist season in Aroostook County. Snowmobilers come from all over, drawn by deep snow and immaculately groomed trails. Rentals are plentiful.

Sometimes you'll ride through virtual tunnels of spruce trees. Other places you can see for miles across rolling farm country.

Or you may find yourself crossing wetlands or river courses.

All of it is simply beautiful.

The County also has the best cross-country skiing in the northeast – 11 Nordic ski areas, including two world-class venues: The 10th Mountain Ski Center (www.10thmtskiclub.org) in Fort Kent and the Nordic Heritage Center (www.nordicheritagecenter.org) in Presque Isle.

While both are rated as world-class competition centers for Nordic and biathlon, they are wonderful for regular folks, too.

The budget motels in the area sell out quickly in snowmobile season. But if you've got kids, base at the Caribou Inn (www.cariboinn.com) in Caribou, which has a swimming pool.

Or, if you're traveling with your sweetheart, I'd recommend the Rum Rapids Inn (www.rumrapidsinn.com), a beautiful, secluded B&B on the banks of the Aroostook River in Crouseville.

My wife and I were, frankly, stunned by the great area restaurants, where dinner for two runs $50 to $75. Try the delicious osso bucco at Napoli's in Caribou, or the Scallops Frangelico at the Greenhouse Restaurant at the Caribou Inn – the latter looking more like a truck stop than a fine dining establishment, but looks are deceiving.

You can fly up to Presque Isle on US Airways (www.usairways.com) from Boston for about $341 roundtrip. Rental cars are available at the airport.

Twelfth Night Epiphany concert at Abbey

Glastonbury Abbey of Hingham offers the musical gifts of Walter Rossbach, organist, choral director and tenor soloist of Reston, Va., as he performs an Epiphany Organ Concert at 4 p.m., on Jan. 6, in the Glastonbury Abbey Church. Rossbach has spent 56 years of every Sunday professional performance at liturgical churches in the New York and Northern Virginia/Washington, D.C. areas. He recently retired after serving 12 years as minister of music at Christ the King Lutheran Church in Great Falls, Va. His career spans duties at Episcopal, Roman Catholic and Lutheran churches, and currently includes frequent performances at Arlington National Cemetery's Post Chapel. He is a gifted musician who is renowned for his virtuosity, dynamics and emotionally sensitive registrations that he brings out of the organs on which he performs.

Rossbach has performed numerous concerts and recitals especially in the dedication of new organs. He is one of only two organists to perform on an organ in the White House in the presence of the president (President Jimmy Carter). He enjoys performing before all sizes of Christian congregations and finds his greatest joy in leading the singing of rousing hymns, often improvising reharmonizations, interludes and modulations to heighten the worship experience in song. Rossbach enjoys informal settings for his programs, and will be sharing comments about the music performed during the concert.

A reception will take place at the Abbey Center following the concert where hors d'oeuvres and beverages will be served. A good will offering with a minimum suggestion of $25 per family is requested. Tickets will be available at the door on the day of the concert as well as the Glastonbury Abbey bookstore, 16 Hull St., Hingham, prior to Jan. 6. Bookstore hours are Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

OBITUARIES

Michael Kent

Restaurateur

Michael Kent, 53, of Cohasset, died Dec. 21, 2007, at his home following a long illness.

Mr. Kent grew up in Newton, the son of Elaine Kent and the late Sherman Kent, and was a graduate of UMass-Amherst.

A longtime restaurateur, Mr. Kent was founder of National Restaurant Brokers Inc. and MSK Productions.

He leaves his wife, Susan Kent; his sisters, Ilene Kent and Joanne Applebaum; his sister-in-law, Renee Kemmeries; his brother-in-law, David Applebaum; his niece and nephew, Danielle and Joshua Applebaum; his aunts and uncles, Leah and Jerold Kaplan and Roseann and Philip Rosdol; his cousins; many friends; and his dog, Jake.

A celebration of Mr. Kent's life will be held at 10 a.m., on Sunday, Dec. 30, at Atlantica Restaurant, 44 Border St., Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to Greater Boston Food Bank at www.gbfb.org or Yankee Golden Retriever Rescue at wwwygrr.org.

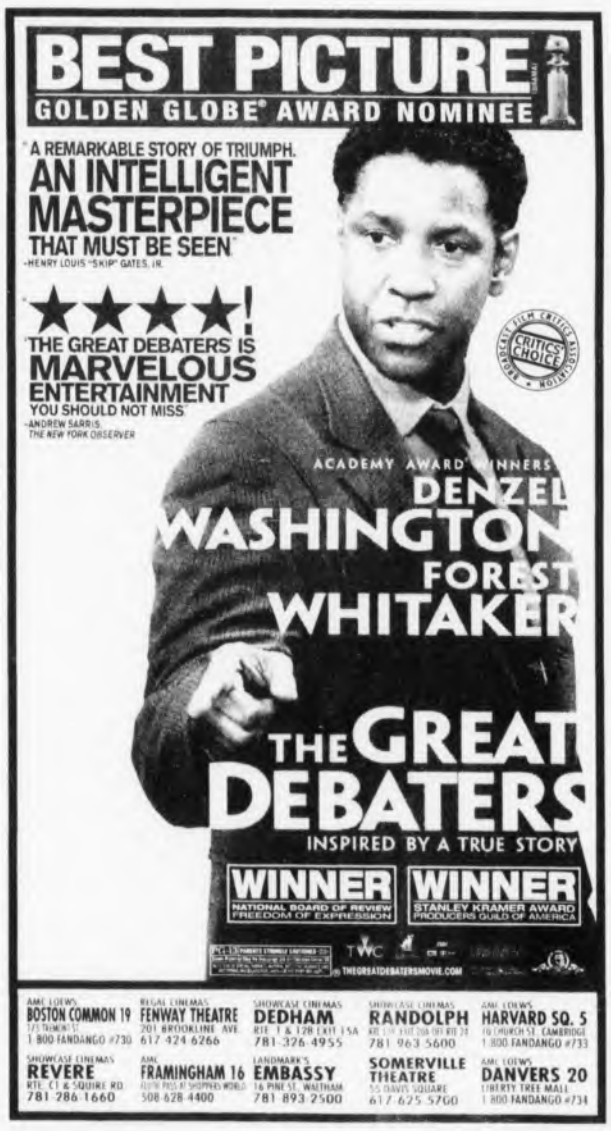
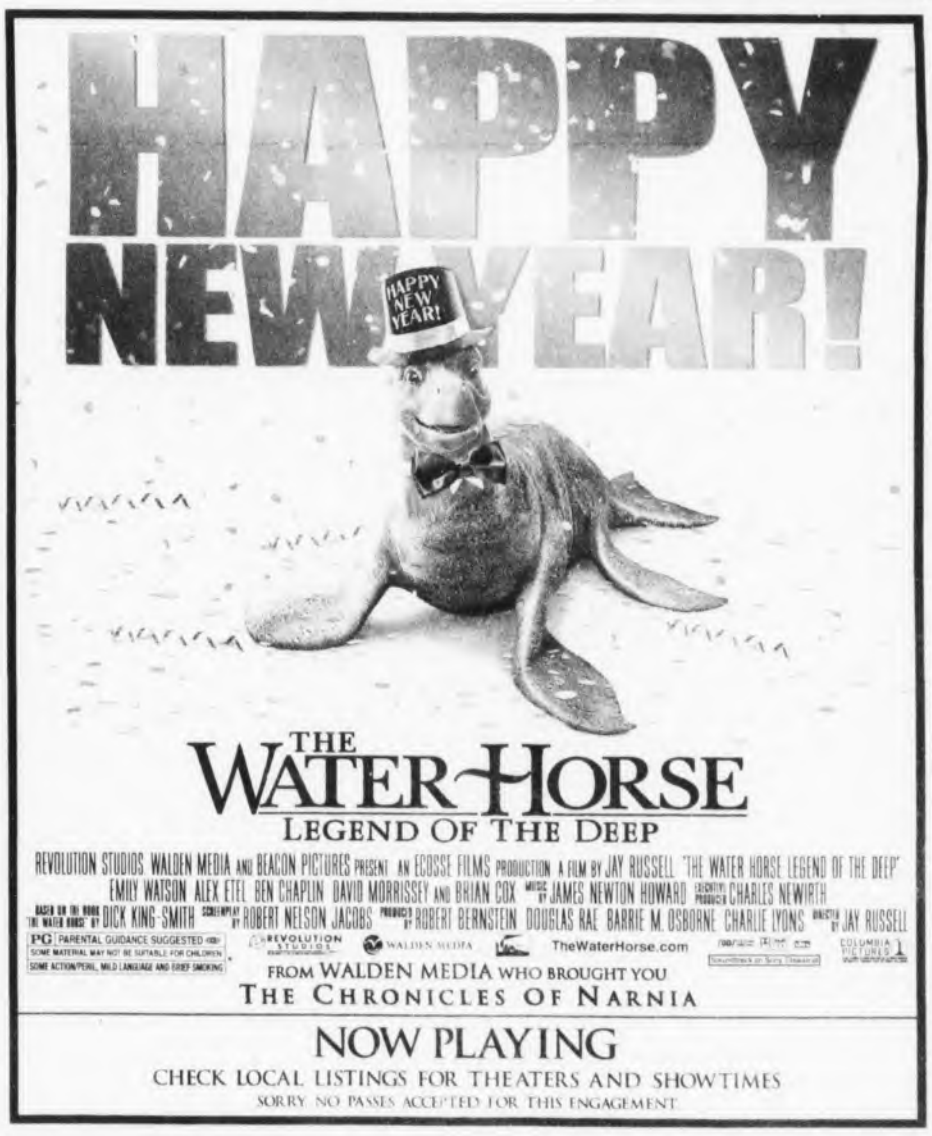
Program on lost crew of the Portland



Walter Hickey, Archives Specialist at the National Archives Northeast Region will host the program, "Following the Paper Trail: Researching the Lost Crew of the Portland," at 7 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 10, in the Hull Lifesaving Museum at the Point Allerton U.S. Lifesaving Station, 1117 Nantasket Ave. Cost is $3 for members; $5 for nonmembers.



The devastating Portland Gale that struck New England on Nov. 27, 1898, which bears the name of the steamship Portland, was wrecked as she attempted to make the return trip from Boston Harbor to Portland, Maine. With all 192 passengers and crew tragically lost, the Portland is one of the worst disasters in New England maritime history.

The location of the wreck had long been one of the great mysteries of Massachusetts Bay, until recent underwater archaeology efforts at the Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary revealed the wreck site. Sadly, much of the Portland's documentation went down with the ship.

The program will cover how dedicated research has helped to solve one of the steamer's many mysteries.

For more information, call 781-925-5433 or visit www.lifesavingmuseum.org.

World of Wheels rolls into Bayside Expo Center

Show proves Americans still love their cars

The Town Fair Tire World of Wheels will fill Bayside with more than 300 dazzling custom vehicles of all types - cars, trucks, motorcycles, street rods, drag racers, tuners, antiques, off-roads, magazine cover cars, classics and collectibles.

Now well into its third decade and still the weekend attendance record-holder at Boston's Bayside Expo Center, the Town Fair Tire World of Wheels custom car competition and motorsports exposition rolls into town for its 34th annual run Jan. 4-6, 2008. The show is proof positive that Americans young and old still love their cars, says show chairman Dick Royer.

The Town Fair Tire World of Wheels will fill Bayside with more than 300 dazzling custom vehicles of all types - cars, trucks, motorcycles, street rods, drag racers, tuners, antiques, off-roads, magazine cover cars, classics and collectibles.

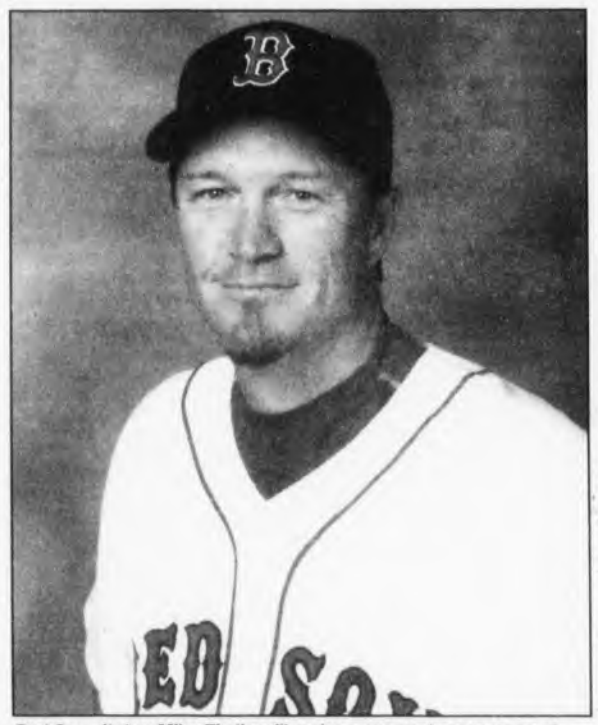
The majority of these vehicles are created by local car enthusiasts who will be competing for prizes in the International Show Car Association-sanctioned GM Performance Parts Show Car series. "The money and time that these car enthusiasts put into customizing their vehicles is nothing short of amazing, and they can be justifiably proud of the results of their efforts, not only because of the 'eye' appeal of the finished vehicles, but also because of the extraordinary craftsmanship they represent," says Royer.

To achieve their dream vehicles, they chop tops, round fenders, fill, lower, chrome, electrify, soup up, fuel inject, supercharge and hang an array of aftermarket engine and styling kits onto their vehicles. Some customs start as only a frame, and the finished vehicle bears only passing resemblance to the original. Others are restored with manic attention to detail, including fabricating missing parts from scratch. Interiors range from original, to a variety of new leathers, fabrics and colors. Paint schemes trend from bright to muted with a range of flame accents and air-brushed graphics applied over multiple coats of clear and color finishes.

The Town Fair Tire World of Wheels also will offer spectators the chance to meet and get autographs from sports and other celebrities, to see specialty vehicles and to be entertained by many other attractions for the whole family.

The show takes place the weekend of Jan. 4-6, and extreme car builder featured guests will appear at the show on Sunday, Jan 6. They will be Will Castro from TV's "Unique Whips," 12:30 to 4 p.m., Jimmy Shine from TV's "Hard Shine," noon to 4 p.m., and Ken "Posie" Fenical, noon to 4 p.m.

"The builders/exhibitors who show off their vehicles at the Town Fair Tire World of Wheels are living life-long dreams of what their perfect car would be, and these well known extreme builders represent the pinnacle in the auto-as-art world," Royer said. "Whether you're a show exhibitor and fellow builder or a spectator dazzled by customs who also dreams of the perfect car, this is a once in a lifetime chance to meet these extreme builders in person."



Other Town Fair Tire World of Wheels features will include a real-life, full-sized replica of Tow Mater, the loveable but not too smart rusty tow truck with a heart of gold and voice of Larry the Cable Guy who was Lightning McQueen's sidekick in Disney/Pixar Studios' hit animated feature film "Cars," as well as a Chevy exhibit by Super Rod magazine called the Heartbeat of America and one of New England's largest automotive toy and memorabilia markets.

Among additional celebrities appearing at the show will be Red Sox pitcher Mike Timlin, Sunday, 1 to 3 p.m.; former New England Patriots running back Mosi Tatupu, Friday, 7 to 9 p.m.; former WWF and WCW wrestling superstar Virgil, Friday, 7 to 9 p.m., Saturday, noon to 4 p.m. and 6 to 10 p.m., and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m.; Amber "Pixie" Acia from TV's "LA Ink," Saturday, 1 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.; and Chris Jacobs from TV's "Overhaulin," Saturday, 1 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.

In the show's Action Arena, the BMX Extreme Bikers and USA Breakdancers will perform throughout the weekend, and the Boston Derby Dames will give roller derby demonstrations. Additional attractions will include racetrack exhibits, annual model car contest, radio station promotions and giveaways.

The show takes place at Boston's Bayside Expo Center, located off I-93, exit 15, and on the MBTA Red Line's JFK/UMass T Stop (free shuttles during show hours). Show hours are Friday, Jan. 4, 2008, 5 to 11 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 5, 2008, 10 a.m. to 11 p.m., and Sunday, Jan. 6, 2008, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Admission is $15 for adults, $5 for children 6-12, free for children 5 and under. Discount coupons will be available at participating Town Fair Tire locations as the dates for the show get nearer.

For information, call 508-238-2800 until show week, then 617-474-6000 or visit worldofwheels.com. To enter the custom vehicle competition, call 401-766-8591. The Town Fair Tire World of Wheels is produced by Championship Auto Shows, Inc., Auburn Hills, Mich.

Red Sox pitcher Mike Timlin will make a personal appearance at Town Fair Tire World of Wheels to greet show spectators and sign free autographs from 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 6

Tow Mater, who was Lightning McQueen's lovable rusty tow truck sidekick in the Disney/Pixar Studios' hit animated feature film "CARS," will join over 300 custom vehicles of all types and special attractions at the 2008 Town Fair Tire World of Wheels motorsports exhibition in Boston's Bayside Expo Center the weekend of Jan. 4-6. With his heart of gold and Larry the Cable Guy voice, Mater stole the show in "Cars." He is based on a Chevy Duallie pickup truck and was built by Eddie Paul and the craftsmen at EP Industries, El Segundo, Calif., along with Lightning and several other "stars" to promote the movie. Now "Cars" fans young and old can see Mater in the "flesh" at the Town Fair Tire World of Wheels.

School vacation

SOUTH SHORE NATURAL SCIENCE CENTER, Norwell, will offer December vacation week programs on Wednesday, Dec. 26, Thursday, Dec. 27, and Friday, Dec. 28, for grades kindergarten through two, and children 3 fi to 5 years of age. Choose one session or attend all three sessions. Sessions will take place 9:30 a.m. to noon, and grouped by age. Cost per day is $30 members, $35 non-members. Register by Dec. 19. Preregistration and prepayment required. Clever Critters is the topic for children in kindergarten through grade two. Explore the world of wildlife, and investigate a different animal group each day to discover what makes them special. Topics are: Wednesday, Dec. 26: Wolves, Coyotes and Their Canine Cousins. With large sharp eyes, alert ears and a bushy wagging tail, these "dogs" may resemble Fido, but don't bring one home as a family pet. Thursday, Dec. 27 includes: Rats and Other Rodents. Can a rat really cook like Ratatouille? No, but they are smart. Find out how smart, and visit with rat, Dunkin. Dunkin's rodent cousins – mice, beavers and the biggest of all, the capybara, will also be discussed. Friday, Dec. 28, will feature: Out Flightless Feathered Friends. What do a penguin, ostrich and a kiwi have in common? They are all birds that cannot fly. Find out what these creatures do to get around and why being flightless may not be all that bad. Dress for the weather as participants may go outside each day. Favorite Animal Authors is the topic for 3 fi- to 5-year-olds. Join Nature Center preschool teacher/naturalist Melissa Kurkoski for a Vacation Week Program of free play, art, outdoor exploration and more. Authors and their stories will come to life. Sessions include: Wednesday, Dec. 26: Animals Near and Far with Jan Brett; Thursday, Dec. 27: Creatures Under Water with Leo Lionni; and Friday, Dec. 28: Bugs All Around Us with Eric Carle. Each day will be a new adventure as animals and places near and far are discovered through stories and illustrations! Dress appropriately to go outside. For more information and to register, call South Shore Natural Science Center, 48 Jacobs Lane, Norwell, Education Department at 781-659-2559, ext 214, or view the Web site at ssnsc.org.

Capture all the charm of Hull with pop-ups of local landmarks, such as the Lifesaving Museum, Paragon Carousel, and Boston Light. Kids can begin with our template and add plenty of their own creativity. A great way to spend a winter afternoon. Recommended for children ages 4 and older. $5 suggested donation.

Volunteers

HOSPICE OF THE SOUTH SHORE SEEKS VOLUNTEERS

- Greater numbers of people are turning to hospice services as they near the end of life and therefore the need for hospice volunteers is growing. Hospice of the South Shore, a program of South Shore Hospital, is looking for volunteers to share time each week with hospice patients and their families. Volunteers do a variety of things, depending on the needs of the patient and his or her family. Activities may include providing respite for caregivers, running errands, or just keeping someone company. Many hospice volunteers describe the experience of helping individuals with advanced illness as an honor and a privilege. Hospice of the South Shore will be conducting a volunteer training class. If you are interested in becoming a hospice volunteer, call Marcia Clifford at 617-755-1314.
